club, which has headquarters adjoining the Republican state committee, and who is now assistant secretary of Senator Lodge, will make a farewell tour of the state the latter part of this week, holding receptions and conferences, and perhaps public meetings in Leominster, Fitchburg, Gardner, Montague, Greenfield, North Adams, Pittsfield, Holyoke, Springfield and Worcester.

In the detail of campaign literature, the Republicans are beating the Democrats out of sight, for to-day Charles H. Glidden, the secretary of the Massachusetts Republican club, who has charge of the documentary end of the campaign, says that he has yet some 30,000 to 40,000 documents to send out, and for days his headquarters has been a bedlam of confusion, the floor being covered with big and little express packages for distribution all over the state. Prominent in this collection are the photographs of Draper and Frothingham, with the words overhead: "Reelect these men," and the reply of Gov Draper to Dennis A. Driscoll regarding his veto of the eight-hour bill Senator Lodge has consented to speak at the Republican rally in Tremont Temple the Saturday night before the election, while Senator Gore of Oklahoma is the big gun of the Democrats from outside of the state

Outside of politics, perhaps the thing most before the public is the effort to raise $500,000 this month for the proposed new building for the Young Men's Christian Association. A big clock face, with the bonrs divided so as to show $500,000 divided proportionally around the big circle, is fastened on the front of a big store nearly opposite Park street church at the north end of the common. By night the whole is illuminated by a dazzling array of electric lights and so the public can see how fast the money comes in. They are getting toward the half-way mark and are whooping up all the enthusiasm they can for the big sum.

For information of interest to women, a man in the business says that the big hats which sell from $15 to $18 at retail cost from $3 50 to $3 75 at wholesale and that the manufacturers cannot make them a beginning fast enough, so that only one woman in 50 who wants one can get one Furthermore, the cost is so high that very little trimming can be afforded, and so the milliners are starving over their fall trade, because their profit comes usually in the quantities of small stuff they can stick upon the hats So it is well we are not all women. LANDON

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

We never publish a testimonial without the special permission of the writer, and then only when we are sure it is genuine.

A CASE OF HEDGING.

By GEORGE HERBERT BOHN.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When I was studying medicine, one afternoon I was in the dissecting room hurrying to get through with a subject before the building should be closed for the night. An examination was before me the next morning and there would be no opportunity to return to the dissecting room for some time to come. I had finished every member except a foot when time was up, and, stuffing it in a hand bag I used to carry needed articles between the city and the place I lived in the suburbs, I left the room, intending to finish my work at home.

On my way I made one of a game of whist in the smoking car with three strangers. Finishing a rubber just as my station was called, I hastily picked up my bag and left the train. On reaching home I tossed my satchel on a table, made my toilet and went down to dinner. In the evening I went up to my room to go to work. What was my astonishment and chagrin on taking up the bag to discover that it was not mine.

I was in a pickle. Whoever had taken my own satchel on opening it would be horrified to discover a human foot. The fact would be reported to the police, and if the owner could be identified I would be subject to a charge of murder, followed by an effort to get rid of the corpse piecemeal.

The wise thing to have done was to report my loss to the police at once. I thought of this, but before doing so concluded to look into the bag I had taken with a view to discovering the owner. It was locked, and I was obliged to force it.

The only articles in it were burglars' tools.

"Well," I said to myself, "whoever has taken my satchel is not likely to report his find, since by doing so he will incriminate himself. There is no necessity for my giving the subject any further attention."

Were it not for one of those strange coincidences that are continually happening my story would end here. A year after my exchange of satchels my house, or, rather, my father's, was robbed. I followed one of the men downstairs, where they had turned on the lights, and caught him by the coattail just as he was going out the front door. He turned and gave me a blow which knocked me down. He made his escape, but during the brief instant I saw his face I recognized my partner at whist on the journey when I had exchanged satchels. I wondered whether he had recognized me, but it occurred to me that he had not, for the light was at my back.

Two more years passed. One day while on a train a man took a seat beside me, and when I looked at him I recognized my partner at whist and in the same man the burglar who had robbed my father's house. My first thought was to summon the conductor and have him telegraph ahead to the police. My second was to turn up my coat collar and pull my hat down over my eyes so that the burglar would not know me. Then I remembered that he had only seen me once, since when I had grown a beard. Thus reassured, I made a remark to him. He replied, and we entered into conversation.

Now, it occurred to me that should I make a charge of burglary against him I would stand in a vulnerable position. He had been possessed of my subject's foot, and I was uncertain what, if any, use he would make of it to establish a countercharge. I concluded to discover if possible what his intentions might be in this respect. I told him the story of the exchange of satchels as having happened to a friend of mine. He turned and after fixing a sharp glance on me said coolly:

"I see you are the man with whom I played whist and who went off with my satchel."

"And you are the man who robbed a house in M. two years ago and whom I caught by the coattail and recognized as he passed out. Suppose I give you away?"

"You'll stand trial on a charge of murder."

"I can easily prove that I was a medical student and was taking the foot home for dissection."

"Not so fast, please. To head you off I learned of a missing man and secured evidence to prove conclusively that a man of your description was seen to murder the person who had disappeared. Then I turned over your satchel with the foot in it to the police."

Suddenly it dawned upon me how foolish I had been not to report the case myself. It would have blocked my opponent's game.

"If you report me," he continued, "persons supposed to be unknown to me will inform the police of your identity with the man whom my witnesses saw you murder. You will be arrested, tried and the best of circumstantial evidence furnished to prove that you had a grudge against him, murdered him and intended to protect yourself in case of discovery by the fact that you were a medical student studying anatomy."

A mental vision of one of those celebrated murder cases of which I would be the central figure and wherein half the people believed in the accused's guilt and the other half in his innocence came up before me.

"My friend," I said, "in the eye of the law should we inform on each other we would both be suspected criminals, which is the next thing to being proved criminals. I am quite sure I would be proved guilty. At any rate, I should be ruined. Go in peace."

Persian Cities.

Teheran, Persia's capital, is one of the least interesting cities of that ancient land. The houses are mean, the streets narrow and dirty, and even the palace of the shah is far from being a thing of beauty. It has no history worth mentioning and is only redeemed by the birth of Haroun-al-Raschid in a neighboring village. Its importance comes from the presence of the court, but it undergoes a sad decadence in summer, when the unhealthful climate drives the greater part of the population to more sanitary places.

Ispahan, the former capital of Persia, is far different. That city was once girdled by a wall of twenty-four miles, and Shah Abbas in the sixteenth century loaded it with magnificence. It contains splendid mosques and ancient palaces which appeal to the imagination. But Ispahan, too, has fallen upon evil days.

"Houses, bazaars, mosques, palaces, whole streets," writes a traveler of a few years ago, "are to be seen in total abandonment, and one may ride for miles without meeting with a single living creature except perhaps a solitary jackal looking over a mall or a fox running to his hole."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Falling Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor promptly destroys the germs that cause falling hair. It nourishes the hair-bulbs, restores them to health. The hair stops falling out, grows more rapidly.

Dandruff

Ayer's Hair Vigor just as promptly destroys the germs that cause dandruff. It removes every trace of dandruff itself, and keeps the scalp clean and in a healthy condition.

Does not Color the Hair

We wish you to positively and distinctly understand that Ayer's Hair Vigor does not affect the color of the hair, even to the slightest degree. Persons with the whitest or the lightest and most delicate blond hair may use it freely without having the hair made a shade darker.

Ingredients: Sulphur. Glycerin. Quinin. Sodium Chlorid. Capsicum. Sage. Alcohol. Water. Perfume.

For Lame Back

An aching back is instantly relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment.

This liniment takes the place of massage and is better than sticky plasters. It penetrates—without rubbing—through the skin and muscular tissue right to the bone, quickens the blood, relieves congestion, and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. JAMES C. LEE, of 1100 9th St., S.E., Washington, D.C., writes: "Thirty years ago I fell from a scaffold and seriously injured my back. I suffered terribly at times; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I used every plaster I could get with no relief. Sloan's Liniment took the pain right out, and I can now do as much ladder work as any man in the shop, thanks to

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. J. P. EVANS, of Mt. Airy, Ga., says: "After being afflicted for three years with rheumatism, I used Sloan's Liniment, and was cured sound and well, and am glad to say I haven't been troubled with rheumatism since. My leg was badly swollen from my hip to my knee. One-half a bottle took the pain and swelling out."

Sloan's Liniment has no equal as a remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia or any pain or stiffness in the muscles or joints.

"I stand for the upbuilding of Massachusetts and its industries, for a reduction of the tariff on the necessities of life, for reciprocity with Canada and a broader market for our goods, and for an income tax, so that the burden of taxation will not come entirely on the working man, but on the man with the money, who should pay an equitable share of taxation."

EUGENE N. FOSS
Candidate for Lieut. Gov.

Here's the Situation Mr. Voter:

The Republican party is divided. Its best element is disgusted with Party Bosses and Broken Pledges. Strong men claim their right to think and act for themselves. They see in the Democratic Platform for 1909 the principles they are willing to fight for. They see in James H. Vahey and Eugene N. Foss the men who can carry that fight to success.

That's why thousands of Republicans are for Vahey and Foss, as will be seen when the votes are counted on November 2d.

Vahey and Foss stand for TARIFF REFORM which will increase the commerce of Massachusetts and the nation; reform which will protect the rights of the East without offending the West; reform which will start the shops and factories of this state humming; reform which will not be throttled by the Republican Machine; reform which will reduce the cost of living and result in real benefit to the working man and his family.

Mr. Foss knows from practical experience of nearly 30 years, as a manufacturer and an employer of labor, the baneful effects of high tariff on New England exports and imports. Mr. Foss will fight for tariff reduction that will mean a full dinner pail for the working man, more comforts in his home and better clothing and shoes for his wife and children.

Vahey and Foss believe in CANADIAN RECIPROCITY which will give us such raw materials as lumber, coal, iron and wood pulp at lower prices; reciprocity which will increase our own food supply and make it possible for American operatives to remain in their own home towns without struggling to make both ends meet; reciprocity which shall say, "Live and let Live" to Canada and augment friendly relations with our Canadian neighbors.

Vahey and Foss favor an INCOME TAX which will work justice to all and have no friends in high places; an income tax which will not descend on the head of the professional man while ignoring the tax dodger who goes to Europe before the assessors are due; an income tax which will reduce the cost of living by reason of reduced tariff taxes and place the burden where it rightfully belongs.

Mr. Voter, Speak out with your ballot. Give no aid, either directly with your vote or by your silence, to the misguided and unjust administration of the Lodge-Draper machine. Get out from under despotism and corruption by voting for the platform of Integrity and Progress.

VOTE for VAHEY and FOSS

WATER AT THORNDIKE.

Claim That Supply in Schoolhouse Is Not Good.

QUANTITY AVAILABLE IS INADEQUATE

Families Have Discontinued Using It. Investigation of Conditions Made.

In its issue of September 24, under the Thorndike heading, the Journal printed the following:

A serious condition menaces the grammar school building unless the drought is broken by copious rains. The water supply is obtained from a reservoir which has run dry, and for a while there was no water for flushing the closets or for drinking. Water for drinking is obtained across the street from the building, and a supply for flushing is secured by filling the watering cart belonging to the Thorndike Company and stationing it close to the building in the rear.

No word of criticism or protest was heard until Monday of this week, when in response to an item which appeared in a Sunday paper, crediting the finding of dead skunks in the spring which supplies the school and several dwellings with water, it was claimed by a member of the school committee that the Journal's item was entirely wrong in every particular. Citizens of Thorndike, after another allusion to the skunk matter in a Tuesday morning daily, took the matter up and asked that the newspaper men make an investigation, which was made on the same day.

The spring in question not only supplies nine business places and 27 tenements and dwellings, but is also the source from which water is obtained for use in the Thorndike grammar school. Diphtheria having broken out among the pupils in this building, an investigation was made by some of the parents and by some of those who draw their household supply from this spring. The result of this investigation being made known upon the street, coupled with the condition of the water three weeks ago, started a discussion which called for a careful summing up of the matter. At the time mentioned several of the families claimed that the water had a decided odor of skunk, and this led to the statement that several of those little animals had been found in the spring. This statement was based upon so good an authority that there seemed to be but little reason to doubt its truth. It was also said that the spring was very low, and that its condition was anything but sanitary. This statement was also upon excellent authority, and even to-day there is but little doubt about its being a fact.

This statement about the condition of the water in the school building aroused the members of the school board having the matter in charge, who claimed that while the water was low the condition of the school building was perfectly sanitary and that there was a supply of good drinking water at all times and a sufficient amount for sanitary puposes, and that the basement was free from odors. It was also stated that the regular supply had been supplemented by the aid of a watering cart. This contention was disputed by some of the citizens who were interested in the matter.

An investigation was made of the conditions existing at the school building, which showed the sanitary situation at the present time to be satisfactory. The watering cart is still in use and the supply of water is sufficient. At the drinking fountain there was a small stream running with little force, which indicated that the water in the spring was very low. The janitor of the building, upon being questioned, stated that in August, when he began to clean the building, the supply was so low that water could only be obtained from the basement; later this condition improved so that a small amount forced itself to the first floor, but finally this failed altogether. On Labor Day there was no water to be obtained from any faucet except in the basement, and for two weeks the closets were flushed by hand; then the watering cart had been procured and was still in use. Mr. Bishop also stated that for a time there was a strong odor to the water, that was especially noticeable where the hose was used.

John W. Loftus, whose place of business and dwelling were connected with the spring, said that about three weeks ago he had noticed a strong skunky odor to the water, which lasted about a week. He was unable to say what ailed the water but was afraid of it and gave up using it, obtaining his drinking water from another source. He claimed he had been to the spring and found but little water in it and that of poor quality, and that the bottom was foul and needed cleaning. He also said that there was a board off the spring house through which opening a skunk or other small animal might fall. Mrs James W Loftus, who used water from the spring, corroborated the foregoing statement as to the stench from the water and its condition, and had discontinued its use. This statement was also certified to by others who used the water. Another thoroughly reliable party had visited the spring and found conditions similar to those found by Mr. Loftus, and also said there was a chance for the entrance of surface water into the spring.

George D. Mooers, the local member of the school board, said that he had been about the school building nearly every day since school began and had noticed no odor to the water except in a single instance. He considered that the building had been properly cared for and that the supply of drinking water was all right. He had been up to the spring and that there was one place where surface water might possibly run in. Mr. Bond, the owner of the spring, had told him that no animal had been found in the spring. He had gone to the spring last Sunday in company with Mr. Bond and Mr. F. A Upham, another member of the school board, and had found it tightly enclosed and everything satisfactory. Mr. Mooers stated that the water had been analyzed seven or eight years ago and had been found very satisfactory. The state board had also taken a sample of the water about a year ago, but so far as he knew no report had ever been received from them as to its condition, and he had taken it for granted that it was all right.

While it is not claimed by the citizens whose children are sick that the particular ailment from which they are suffering is the result of drinking the water of this particular spring, they do claim that under present conditions it is a menace to the public health and that every means should be used to better the situation.

WALES.

Mrs. W. E. Needham was thrown from her wagon Saturday near the foot of Ede's Hill, but was not seriously injured.

HOLLAND MAN'S DEATH.

Francis Wight, Long-time and Respected Citizen, Passes Away.

Francis Wight, 79, a prominent resident of Holland, died at his home early Monday morning after a long illness. Mr. Wight was born in Sturbridge February 1, 1830, and was the son of Col. David and Lucinda (Marsh) Wight, who were prominent in the town of Sturbridge, where they owned a large estate but a short distance from where the Worcester South Agricultural Society grounds are now situated. When he had finished the course in the district school, Mr Wight attended Wilbraham Academy. He later returned to Holland, and in 1853 he married Mary Ann Kinney, daughter of Elisha and Mary Kinney. From that time and for 20 years or more he was engaged by the Snell Manufacturing company of Sturbridge, manufacturers of augers and bits. His business was to twist the bit when heated, by hand, there being no machine for that purpose in those days. Mr. Wight drove daily to and from Sturbridge, a distance of over five miles, missing but a very few days the entire time. Mr. Wight was prominent in town affairs, having held during his residence in Holland almost, if not all, the town offices. Mr. Wight was one of the assessors in 1908, declined to be elected on the school board April 2, 1909, and resigned as chairman of the Republican town committee last month. He was always helpful in the church, being treasurer of the society for many years, and usually one of the prudential committee. Mr. Wight always had the interests of the town at heart, and was respected by the entire community. Mrs. Wight died some years ago, and about two years later he married Mrs Faunie E. Smith, who survives him. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 in the Congregational church.

WARE.

Death of Francis D. Winslow.

Francis D. Winslow, 66, a native of Ware and a resident of the town all his life, died Tuesday night at the home of his son, E. D. Winslow, on the Greenwich road, after an illness of 11 months caused by a general breaking down of his health. Mr. Winslow leaves four sons, Edgar D. and Waldo F. Winslow of Ware, Charles E of Greenfield and Arthur of Springfield, and two daughters, Mrs. W. G. Cummings of Ware and Miss Mabel F. Winslow of Greenfield. There are also two brothers, John T. Winslow, formerly deputy collector of internal revenue, and Oscar Winslow of New York city. The funeral was yesterday afternoon at the family lot in Aspen Grove cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs Isaac Jeffries announce the engagement of their daughter, Beatrice Eliza, and James Roma Collord of Springfield.

The board of registrars added 14 names to the list of voters at their 10-hour session Saturday. The total number on the list is now 1323, as against 1366 last March.

The first meeting of the Study Club was held Monday evening at the home of F. M. Sibley. Dr. A G Blodgett read a paper on "What is a Child?" and G. W. Cox acted as chairman.

Mrs. G. D St. John of Aspen street was struck in the eye Wednesday by some object from a bean shooter, while on Pleasant street and it is feared she may lose the sight of the eye.

Dr. Manrice W. Pearson will move his family to Worcester in two weeks, and will locate in that city, he having gone there this week. He will take the practice of Dr. Perley P. Coney in that city. Dr. Pearson located in Ware 13 years ago last spring, and has built up a large practice.

Mrs. James Neville, 47, died at her home on Spring street Tuesday afternoon after a long illness with stomach trouble. Her maiden name was Catherine Shea and she was born in Ware. Mr. and Mrs Neville were married 19 years ago this month and have five children living, Henry, Irene, Mary, Gertrude and Alice. A brother, Nicholas Shea of Ware, and a sister in New Haven also survive Mrs. Neville. The funeral was held Thursday morning in All Saints' church and burial was in Ware.

The selectmen have appointed the following officers for election day, the names given first for each office being the Republican, and the other the Democratic appointments: Ballot clerks, D. Otis Holden, Elgin R Foster; assistant ballot clerks, D. G. Bnskey, James T. Feehan; checkers, A. B. Irwin, L. S. Charbonnean; counters, W. H. Apperson, H. F. Lamoreaux, John Osgood, Lionel Grise, J. T. Casey, John W. Clark Jr., Moise Deslanriers, W. B. Kelley; ballot box clerk, Philip Deslanriers.

The four-tenement block on Church street, near the East Congregational church, known as the Billings block, was sold at auction Saturday afternoon to P. D. Phelps of the firm of Hills & Phelps, brick masons and contractors, for the sum of $5975. By the will of the late David P. Billings, who died about 15 years ago, the use of this property was given to his wife, Mrs. Betsey Billings, during her lifetime. She died last June, at the age of 96, and according to the will the proceeds from the sale of Saturday will be divided between the American Missionary Association and the Congregational Home Missionary Society, both of New York. The block was built by Mr. Billings about 60 years ago, and fronts on Church street, at the corner of Parks street. In the rear of the block is a lot with a frontage on Parks street that will permit of the erection of another somewhat smaller block.

Antoni Alszayca, who was arrested in Springfield last week Thursday evening, pleaded not guilty in the district court last Friday morning when arraigned on a charge of receiving stolen property in the form of cloth manufactured by the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company. The case was continued until this morning, bail being fixed at $1000, and as the bail was satisfactory to the court were furnished in the persons of Albert Cebula and John Lubiczyk, both of Ware. The case of Arthur G. Monison, who pleaded guilty to the larceny of cloth from the company on Thursday of last week, was also continued for final disposition until to-day, as he is an important witness in the case against Alszayca. George D Storrs, counsel for the Commonwealth, suggested the continuance, as he stated that the Gilbert company desired a thorough investigation of how the cloth has been taken and disposed of as pieces have been missed from time to time for some time, and the loss is supposed to be considerable. John Nowak, a Ware Pole, was arrested Friday on the charge of receiving stolen cloth belonging to the company last March, and he pleaded not guilty, furnishing cash bail in the sum of $200 for appearance in court for trial on the same date as the others.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Atkins spent a part of the week in New York.

STRIKE AT LUDLOW MILLS.

Entire Plant is Shut Down for Indefinite Time.

FEW GREEK WEAVERS COME AND GO.

Company Makes Statement, But Strikers Announce Determination to Hold Out.

The strike of the bagging weavers in the mills of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates in Ludlow spread this week through the entire plant, and while not all of the 2700 or more employes are enrolled among the strikers, the inability to run the plant with a largely diminished force made it necessary to close the mills Tuesday.

The strike in the bagging department started about seven weeks ago. The company made no effort to secure new help, preferring if possible to have the old hands return to work. As they showed no disposition to return, Monday morning about a dozen weavers of Greek nationality were put at work in that department. On their attempting to go to work a large crowd of the strikers gathered, throwing stones and subjecting them to more or less assault. During the morning the board of selectmen swore in 10 special policemen, proposing to protect the new hands. At noon when the Greeks were returning to their work the strikers started to hurl stones at them, and one of the officers was hit, whereupon four of the strikers who were leading the brigade were arrested. A crowd of about 400 followed the prisoners to the police station, where another of the strikers was arrested after he attempted to kick an officer. All of the men arrested were Poles. A special session of court was held and Judge Birnie sentenced the men to 15 days each in York street jail, but they appealed their cases and were released under bail of $100 each.

The Ludlow Manufacturing Associates, through Agent Stevens, issued Monday the following statement relative to the strikers:

It has always been our aim to pay the highest possible rate of wages in our mills, and for many years the rate paid for weaving in the bagging mill has been 60 per cent higher than that paid in competing mills. During the past few years, however, new competition has arisen which seriously threatens to extinguish the bagging industry in the United States. We refer to the jute mills of British India, which have had an almost unparalleled growth and which now number 43 mills, capitalized at over $50,000,000 and including over 30,000 looms. These mills represent a combination of British capital, enterprise and management with Asiatic labor and cheap ocean freights. They have the same English machinery which we have, imported into India free of duty, whereas we pay 45 per cent duty. They pay wages approximating one-tenth of those paid at Ludlow. The United States consul at Calcutta reported on June 17, 1907, as follows: "The wages paid to men in the mills range from $2 to $3 per month; for women, from $1 50 to $2; and boys and girls, from $1 to $1 75."

Against this competition the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates are protected by a duty of less than 10 per cent, which is less than the difference in freights in favor of the Calcutta manufacturers. Previous to 1903 the importations of cotton bagging were comparatively small. Since then, however, they have grown at a surprising rate until the importations now amount to about 20,000,000 yards a year, or more than the entire product of the Ludlow mills. In view of these conditions the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates requested that Congress when taking up the new Payne tariff bill, give special consideration to the bagging industry and make a slight advance in the rate of duty on bagging. The justice of the claims set forth were generally admitted, but political considerations made an advance in the rate impossible, and it was with difficulty that the present low rate was retained.

The only alternatives for the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates were, therefore, a reduction in manufactoring expense or abandonment of the business. It was therefore decided to make a slight reduction in the rate paid for weaving, although still maintaining it at a rate far above that paid in other mills, and on September 10 the following notice was posted:—

Notice

Beginning Monday, September 13, bagging weaving will be paid for at the rate of 20 cents per 100 yards.

This rate is made necessary by the growing competition in the bagging business, not only with American mills but with the large jute mills in India. Wages in the Indian jute mills are about 1-10 of those paid at Ludlow, and the protective duty on bagging is less than 10 per cent, whereas other industries competing with higher paid European labor have protection from 30 to 60 per cent. The new rate of 20 cents per 100 yards is 40 per cent higher than paid in other American mills.

On September 13 a conference was held between the agent of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates and a committee consisting of six weavers representing all the nationalities employed, the above conditions were set forth, but they were unable to come to terms.

A meeting of the strikers was held Monday evening and it was voted to enlist the sympathy of the members of the new union which has been recently formed, which has from 1200 to 1400 members mostly Polish people. Tuesday morning, instead of going to their work, they congregated about the mill gates, stopping any of their own nationality who were disposed to go to work, and thus took the first step in a general strike. There was no rioting to speak of during the day, although crowds of the strikers congregated and paraded in different sections, displaying banners of various kinds. Two of the new Greek employes who attempted to do some shopping were made targets for stones by the crowd, and C. Salvani, a Greek, took a revolver from his pocket and fired into the air, so he claimed, while the crowd said he fired at them. He was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon and at a special session of the court was placed under $300 bonds to appear at the December term of court. Four false fire alarms were rung in Monday night and two during the early part of Tuesday night, but there was no further violence of a serious nature.

Late Wednesday evening the Greeks, who has been engaged to take the places of the strikers, left town. It was about 10 o'clock when they marched through the company's yard, across the river on the railroad bridge and so out of the storm center. The Poles held a meeting Wednesday evening, when they were addressed by a labor agitator from Fall River, and the

MAY BELONG TO PALMER.

Boundary Lines at South Belchertown in Dispute. Surveys Made.

It will probably be news to the greater portion of the Journal's readers that for some time there has been serious question whether the boundary lines between numerous of the counties and towns of the state as they have been credited for years are correct or not. The legislature has appropriated money to determine the true bounds.

One of the disputed bounds is that between South Belchertown and Palmer. A few weeks ago surveyors from Boston came to Bondsville, and if the lines as they have run them are correct a part of South Belchertown will rightly belong to Palmer. It has always been supposed that the Swift river divided the two towns at this place. The section north of the river, which contains a part of the Boston Duck Co's plant and nearly a dozen houses, has always been taxed as Belchertown property, together with the Franklin schools and the roads supported by Belchertown. About 100 people are residents of this strip.

The line as lately run passes through the pine grove north of the site of the old Union Hotel, which was burned several years ago, instead of following the river. Although it is a small strip it is valuable, principally for the fact of the situation on it of the mill property, which is estimated as worth many thousands of dollars. The greater part of the people in South Belchertown would prefer to belong to Palmer, as it would be much more convenient in many ways. Belchertown is six miles away, and to go there twice a year to vote, when there is no electrics to take them, is one of the disadvantages in belonging to a town so far away. The annexation scheme, which has been discussed many times in years past, has never been realized. It has also happened that when the town of Palmer has voted no-license, on the opposite side of the river licenses have been granted, and vice versa. If this line proves to be where it now seems to be, many difficulties in the past would be disposed of, so the result of the recent survey is looked for with a great deal of anxiety.

ABOUT THE INCOME TAX.

What Candidate John P. Herlihy of Monson Thinks About It.

To the voters of the First Hampden Representative District:—

I believe that the income tax endorsed by both national parties is the leading issue of the present campaign, and that the people have a right to know how their representatives intend to vote on this important question.

Recent developments in commercial and industrial life have resulted in placing a large part of the wealth of the country in comparatively few hands. The holders of this wealth enjoy all the blessings of law, order and protection in their property rights, but under the present condition of affairs are able in a large measure to evade their duties and responsibilities and shift the expenses of government upon their less fortunate brethren. Because of this the taxes on the farms and the homes of the working people are yearly increasing, and must soon reach a point where the burden will be more than it will be possible to bear. Now it must be clear to every thoughtful citizen that although the expenses of the town, state and national government are large and constantly increasing, a system of taxation which bore equally upon every dollar of the wealth of the nation would so reduce the burden of taxation upon the property of people of humble or moderate means that it would give them new hope and new courage in the struggle for the decent privileges of life. The income tax is no new thing in this country. After the Civil war it proved to be of the greatest advantage to the country in helping to defray the enormous expenses of that time, and it was everywhere accepted as a righteous and just measure of taxation. But incomes had not then grown so large as to give men of great wealth the courage to defy popular sentiment, and so they bided their time. Patient waiters, their time finally came, death invaded the supreme court and there was a change of membership and then what was probably the first wireless message ever received in this country seems to have been received by the Society of Millionaires. They immediately refused payment of income taxes and took the case to the reconstructed supreme court, where by a majority of one vote the law was declared unconstitutional. Thus for many years have the millionaires of this country escaped this just tax, and it is up to the voters of Massachusetts to decide whether they will escape it forever.

The right to tax incomes enjoyed by the national government for more than a hundred years was a right which should never have been relinquished for the mere purpose of satisfying the greed and selfishness of any class of people, and I believe it to be the duty of every voter to consider conscientiously the far-reaching effects of our refusal to ratify the income tax amendment at the coming election. The Aldrich tariff bill is open to criticism, not so much because of its protective features as because it had to be made a revenue producer and so added to the cost of living for every family in the land. The ratification of the income tax amendment will allow a reversion of the tariff that will lighten the cost of living to the wage-earner and in no way disturb any just tariff needed for the protection of home industries. The proposition of the last Congress to tax incomes only that were in excess of $5000 a year over and above a man's living expenses would cause no hardship, while the man with no income except what he derives from his labor—who owns a little property on which he pays a tax of from $25 to $40 a year—is often obliged to deny himself every luxury in order to meet this annually securing obligation.

I trust the voters of the District will give this important question the consideration it so justly deserves, and remembering that the question must be settled at the coming election will cast their votes in accordance with their honest opinions on the subject. The personal success or failure of the estimable gentleman who opposes me or of myself is of little ultimate consequence, but it is of the utmost importance to the taxpayers of Massachusetts that this great question be settled by the principles of equity and justice. Respectfully yours,

JOHN P. HERLIHY,

Candidate for Representative, First Hampden District.

PALMER NEWS.

Two Beautiful Monuments in St. Thomas' Cemetery.

W. J. Kelly & Co. of Springfield have just completed and set up for Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald of North Wilbraham a large monument of Grecian architecture and made of selected Barre granite. It comprises two bases and a die, surmounted by a richly carved cap, stands eight feet from grade line, and is well proportioned. The firm has also completed and set up for Mrs. John Twiss of Three Rivers a large concave sarcophagus made of the best Barre granite, which is handsomely carved with classic ornaments, carefully studied and executed throughout. Both monuments occupy a prominent place in this cemetery. The monuments were designed by Kelly & Co. of Springfield and cut at their works in Woonsocket, R. I.

Death of Civil War Veteran.

Joseph G. Haley, 70, died at his home on Bridge street Wednesday forenoon after a short illness, although he had been in poor health for a long time. Mr. Haley was born March 3, 1839, in Alfred, Maine, and November 20, 1864, enlisted from Boston, being credited to Palmer to fill out the town's quota. He was a skillful draftsman and was assigned to the United States corps of engineers, Co. B, and served three years, being discharged November 20, 1867, with the rank of sergeant. After the war he lived in New York and Boston, coming to Palmer about nine years ago. He leaves a widow. The funeral was held at 2 this afternoon, Rev. C. W. Williams of the Baptist church officiating; burial was in the Thorndike street cemetery.

Claims Locks Cannot Hold Him.

The attraction at the opera house last evening, and to-morrow evening and matinee, in addition to the moving pictures and songs, is Byron, the magician, who claims that it is impossible to prevent his escape from a locked mail bag. No matter how many or what the construction of the locks, he will be able to release himself in a very short time. He gave an exhibition last evening which proved that he may fairly claim to possess great powers in this line. One of the local officers, it is said, has consented to assist in fastening him in the mail bag to-morrow evening, and he offers $100 to any local charity if he is unable to get out. The public is invited to bring along padlocks and assist in the locking up.

There will be a union meeting of the Baptist, Universalist and Congregational churches held in St. Paul's church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by Mr. Fred S. Retan of Michigan, a man well versed in anti-saloon methods and general no-license work.

John H. Gamwell was taken this week to the hospital, where an operation was successfully performed Wednesday on his leg. Mr. Gamwell fell at the Palmer Water Company's reservoir about a year ago and severely bruised his leg, a large bunch resulting later, which recently began to give him serious trouble. He is getting along finely.

The marriage of Miss Florence Phillips of North Abington, formerly a teacher in the Three Rivers grammar school building to Frank Luther Goodspeed, formerly of Three Rivers, took place in Syracuse, N. Y., Saturday morning. Mr. Goodspeed has recently taken a position as second-hand in a mill in Oswego, N. Y., and the couple will make their home in that place.

The supply of water in the Palmer Water Company's reservoir has a little more than held its own during the past week, since the railroads have been cut off. The service reservoir has gained about a foot, and the storage reservoir about the same amount through the rain of Sunday. The supply is still very low however, and users should be careful and not allow it to go to waste.

"The Church's Unanswerable Argument" is the subject of the sermon of the pastor at the Congregational church service Sunday afternoon. Sunday school meets at 2 o'clock, preaching service at 3.15. The usual Sunday night song and C. E. prayer meeting will be omitted on account of the Union Temperance meeting to be held at 7 o'clock in the church auditorium.

The Palmer Historical Society will hold its regular meeting next Tuesday evening at 7 30 sharp in the reference room of the public library. Mrs. W. H. Fuller will read a paper of a personal visit to the scene of the chief dwellers of Mesa Verda, National Park, which will be illustrated by views taken by her. The paper promises to be of unusual interest and will deserve a full attendance of the public as well as of the members.

One carload of brick arrived Saturday or Sunday, and the work of paving Main street was resumed Monday, only to be discontinued again at the close of the day, the brick having all be laid and the men having to be laid off because of a lack of supplies. Another car came in Tuesday and were laid Wednesday, when work again stopped until this morning, when two more cars arrived. Each of these cars contained nearly as many brick as the two others combined.

Sumner Blodgett, superintendent of state highways in this section, has this week unloaded a consignment of 134 barrels of oil to be used on the state highways in an effort to bind the top more closely together and prevent its being worn away by the action of automobiles. The road east of Palmer has been oiled to a point near the Warrens, and it was expected that the section through Palmer would be treated this fall, but a delay in the shipment of the oil has caused a postponement of the work until spring.

Herbert A. Northrop of Palmer has purchased the island in Nine-mile-pond at North Wilbraham and plans to erect on it a number of cottages—as many as he can find occupants for during the hot summer months. This spot is an ideal one for those who wish to get away from the heat and turmoil of the city or town, and still be near enough to "civilization" to get to and from business in a short time. The state highway and the trolley line both pass within a few rods of the island, and without doubt the venture will prove eminently successful.

The Men's League held its second meeting of the season in the parlors of St. Paul's church Wednesday evening and listened to a most entertaining talk by Congressman Frederick Gillett of Springfield on the Panama canal. Mr. Gillett was there two years ago as a member of the appropriation committee of Congress, and had many interesting and enlightening things to tell of the conditions as he found them there. The evening was one of the most enjoyable the league has ever experienced. There were a large number present,—about 80,— and after the talk a lunch was served to all.

Several changes have been made in the teaching force of the schools on account of the resignation and removal of Miss Oliver, teacher in the 7th grade in Palmer. This place has been filled by Miss Annie E. O'Connor, who has been transferred from Thorndike. Miss L. Blanche Hazelton of Hartford, a Wellesley College graduate, has been appointed substitute teacher in grades 6 and 7 at Thorndike. Miss Bertha Pulsifer, assistant at Three Rivers, has been given grades 4 and 5 in place of Miss Phillips, resigned; Miss Blanche Backus has been appointed assistant in grades 1 and 4 in the same building.

The pictures at the Elite this and to-morrow evening and to-morrow afternoon will be: "A tragic ending of Shrove Tuesday," "The man without a country," "A country girl's peril." The songs will be: "If every girl was a girl like you," by Albert Gould, and "Mid the fields of purple clover," by D. A. Hogan. The ticket which drew the gold piece Monday night was No. 403, and the holder may have the coin by applying with the ticket at the Elite office. Another drawing will be held this evening and another next Monday evening; there will be two a week until further notice. The singer at the Elite next week will be Miss Lillian E Dwyer of Springfield.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Oct. 27, 1909.

To-day is the most interesting and perhaps the most critical day of the state campaign, except the day of the election. To-day, for the first time, there is a realization in the Republican state committee that they must get out their vote in order to win. Yesterday, for the first time in the campaign, there was an evident realization on the part of some very close to the Republican leaders that there is being a very stiff and gaining campaign being made by the Democrats. To-day the conviction has reached the inner Republican citadel and there is no doubt that every possible effort will be made to get out the Republican vote. Up to yesterday there was a confident ease at the Republican headquarters. It was said that there was absolutely not the slightest possibility that Draper could be in danger. Ridicule was expressed for Foss. The British American movement, which had just come into sight and had not held its Faneuil Hall meeting, was regarded in the Republican state headquarters as more likely to make votes for Frothingham than for Foss because of the supposed taint with the old A. P. A. intolerance. But the fact that William J. O'Donnell, an Irish Catholic from Canada, was the presiding officer, and A. C. Chisholm, a Scotch Catholic, moved the adoption of the resolutions, has changed the aspect. But, whatever the cause, there is a different feeling in the Republican state committee from anything previously observed there. It may be that this will save them from defeat. The Democrats would have preferred that the awakening had not come so soon, for it will mean a great difference to the result. Of course the Republicans insist that there is no doubt of the outcome, but they are more awake than ever to the imperative necessity of getting out their vote and it may be expected by their local committees that they will be instructed to get out the last vote.

At the Democratic headquarters there has been a change corresponding to that at the Republican. One realizes the difference between genuine confidence and bluff. They are coming to have a genuine, solid belief that both Vahey and Foss will win. They have been weeks in coming to this conclusion. The most conservative are barely beginning to permit themselves to think so. They are sorry that the Republicans have become aroused. They do not venture to make any figures, for they realize that Draper's immense plurality of 60,000, still more Taft's of 110,000 show what prodigious strength there is in the Republican reserves and that it depends upon how many Republican votes they can win whether or not Vahey and Foss can be elected. They do not venture to give figures. They have not got beyond the idea that they will win by a close shave. But they have certainly got that idea, and they expect that Vahey and Foss will both pull through. There is no possible doubt that Foss is making a strong contest, and holding up his end fully in comparison with Vahey. Evidence comes to the Democrats in abundance that many Republicans, disgusted with the tariff, will vote for Foss on that account. This is a question apart from Foss's personality.

The Republicans are banking strongly upon the success of the Draper administration. They point out that this is not a national campaign, but that state issues are up for discussion this off year and that Gov. Draper challenges any and all criticism of his administration. They feel absolutely confident in Draper's ability to stand any amount of criticism. They are ready to stand by the tariff and Gov. Draper's statement at Brockton last night: "I think it a very excellent bill from the standpoint of a man who believes in the policy of protection," shows that he is ready to challenge the Republican tariff insurgents to prove their case, if they can. This defiant attitude of the governor will sweep the tariff issue, in spite of his statement that the tariff is not an issue this year.

It looks as if Foss's signing of the petition to Gov. Draper to veto the eight hour bill would finally amount to a standoff for each side, because each interprets it precisely according to his previous opinions. If the reader is a Draper man, he holds that the Governor is right. If he is a Foss man, than Foss is right. A copy of the fac-simile of the document signed by Foss shows that the printed copy, circulated by the Massachusetts Republican club, was correct, except that certain sentences printed in black letters do not have that emphasis in the original, because the whole was done in imitation of type-writing.

It is quite probable that the Democrats will make what capital they can out of the influence of the tariff upon the health of the people. The issue was started by Gov. Draper's ridiculing Foss for pre-suming to say that the tariff had any connection with the health of the people. Dr. John M. Martin, a high medical authority at Harvard University, a specialist on fevers, who was at the British American meeting, took up the cudgels for Foss and said he would stake his professional reputation upon the truth that the tariff was responsible for considerable sickness of the people, and his point was that the inferior quality of clothing and smaller quantity of wool in cloth, due to the tariff, causes exposure and illness. So there is another issue and the Democrats believe that there are votes in it for them.

Strong Republican resentment is felt at the cartoon which the Democrats have been printing all over the state, with a hand pointing to an empty pocketbook, made empty by high tariff prices, while Senator Lodge, who is not on the stump this year, is represented as splitting with laughter at the idea that he is not obliged to go on the stump to explain how the tariff has emptied the pocketbooks of the people. It is insisted at the Republican headquarters that the sole reason that the senator is not on the stump this year is because of the death of his talented son, to whom he was devotedly attached, and it is held that the cartoon trifles with the feelings of a bereaved father and does not at all represent the truth. The Republicans also resent strongly the cartoon in this morning's papers, showing the entire state of Massachusetts crumpled like a piece of paper in the grip of Lodge as the boss. They deny that Lodge is any such boss over the affairs of the state and think that the cartoonist is unjust toward the senator.

When it comes to figuring upon the result, the Republicans have an immense advantage, for if they concede a drop of 20 per cent from last year, and the Democrats 10 per cent,—which seems quite reasonable to some observers,—still it leaves about the customary margin for the Republican ticket. This big margin gives the Republicans an assurance which has not been overthrown yet and promises to save them from final defeat. If Vahey runs well this year, as he promises to do in fine shape, then he will stand as the leading candidate for next year, if he wishes to keep the field. There has been a supposition on the part of the Democratic leaders that Vahey would not run again next year. But there can be nothing shown to prove the point, and the heir apparent to the nomination is not yet sure of his position next year.

One of the incidents of the week in the anti-imperialist headquarters was the receipt of a friendly letter, inclosing a substantial check, from a prominent lawyer of Cleveland, giving his adherence to the cause. Yet he has never been identified with the movement at all. The effort of the organization just now is directed against the proposed organization of a department of the colonies, for it is felt that if such a department is established it will be hostile to the principles of our country and will bring only weakness and calamity to the country and to the islands.

At the Twentieth Century club a symposium is proposed for the evening of November 17, to which the six theological seminaries of Boston and suburbs are invited to send representatives who can speak with authority in reply to the current criticism that the seminaries are not doing anything to give their students any instruction in the principles of sociology or in treatment of social problems. It is believed by some that the ministers of to-day are not trained to observe social phenomena so as to have any opinion of their own. If the seminaries can set themselves right before the public, then the Twentieth Century people will be very glad to give them the opportunity. But they want real facts, arguments and proofs, not merely a platform deliverance.

The colored people will have a great rally to-night in the St. Paul Baptist church, and the interesting fact about it is that, though they are to have Draper, Frothingham and other great Republicans to speak, yet their special pride in the occasion is in the oration of Charles M. S. Williams, a negro orator who spoke surprisingly well at the Republican convention in April, 1908. The negroes count far more upon that one effective orator of their own race than they do upon all the white help they have upon the occasion. They are not at all a servile class here.

Palmer, Mass.

Free Round Trip To Springfield.

Enjoy a free round trip to Springfield. Make your headquarters at the Scotch Woolen Mills Co's. store, 39 Main Street. They will be pleased to accommodate you with city directory, telephone, information, free samples, check your parcels free, and refund your round-trip fare on any suit or overcoat purchase. In fact, they are the most hospitable merchants in Springfield. Why should you wear ill-fitting ready-made clothes when the Scotch Woolen Mills Co. will tailor to your measure perfect fitting garments for less money. What do you think of this bargain—this great half-price sale—$22 suits and overcoats tailored to your measure for only $13.25. The Scotch Woolen Mills Co. tailors the clothes for the men of 19 large cities and many smaller ones. To supply this demand and to give their customers an extra special value this fall, they took the entire output of the woolen from the quality-famous Housatonic Mills, of course at a discount of 5 per cent. That is why they tailor to your measure $22 pure wool suits and overcoats for only $13.25. Their store is open Monday and Saturday evenings. Be sure to write or call for free samples of your tailor's $22 woolens and they'll give you better quality at $13.25. Don't you think a saving of $8.75 and a free round-trip to Springfield is worth investigating?

For Deep Seated Colds and Coughs, Allen's Lung Balsam cures when all remedies fail. This old reliable medicine has been sold for over 40 years. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles. All dealers.

Monson News.

Death of Mrs. Henry W. Chapin.

Mrs. Henry W. Chapin, 74, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rufus P. Cushman, early yesterday morning, after many months of critical illness. Funeral services will be held at her daughter's home to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, followed by brief services at the grave in Worcester, where the burial will take place upon the arrival of the train reaching that city at 2 12 o'clock, Rev. G. A. Andrews of Monson officiating. Mrs. Chapin spent a large portion of her life in Worcester, and the interests of that city were dear to her heart. Since the death of her husband in 1889, she has made her home with her daughter in Monson. Her devotion in ministering to this home is only one of the evidences of her beautiful way of living for others. She was a woman of rare character and her cheerful nature was an inspiration to all who knew her. Although her life during the latter years in Monson has been spent quietly, yet she has filled a large place among the people who were privileged to come in contact with her, and her going from the community is a great loss; for the influence of such a spirit cannot be measured by words. Mrs. Chapin is survived by a brother living in Kansas, a sister in California, the daughter in Monson and three grandchildren.

Kenney—Nagle.

The marriage of Miss Lena G. Kenney of Milford and James P. Nagle, formerly of Monson, took place in Milford Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock, Rev. John A. McNamara officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mabel A. Kenney, and John W. Nagle of Monson, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride wore a gown of champagne prunella and a white Gainshorough hat. Following the ceremony the wedding party, incinding abont 40 relatives and friends, went to the home of the bride on Winter street, where a wedding dinner was served and a reception held. Mr. and Mrs. Nagle are making a short visit in Monson, after which they will take a tour through Western Massachusetts and New Hampshire, going to Waterville, where the groom is employed as an engineer. The couple received a large assortment of wedding gifts.

Found Dead in Church.

Henry Morris, 60, was found dead in the Methodist church in Wales Sunday morning abont 11 a.m. Mr. Morris had refused to stay at his home in Monson, and had been acting as janitor of the church. He failed to ring the bell Sunday morning, and the body was discovered by Miss Dora Green in the church at the foot of the stairs going to the audience room. He had evidently been sweeping the stairs, and had fallen part way down. Medical Examiner Schneider was summoned from Palmer and said death was due to apoplexy. He probably died before 9 o'clock, when he was due to ring the bell. He leaves a brother, Frank E. Morris of Waltham. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon in the Congregational chapel in Monson, and was private.

Fifth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Hector Aldrich were pleasantly surprised at the home of Mr. Aldrich's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Aldrich, on East Hill Satnrday night by about 35 of their friends. The party was in honor of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich which took place in the Congregational church parsonage in Palmer, Oct. 6. Mrs. Aldrich was formerly Miss Maud Blake of Boston. The conple were presented with an elegant gift in silver, the presentation speech was by Mrs. Wesley Holdridge, to which Mr. Aldrich responded. Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich are soon to go housekeeping in Mrs. Marcia McMaster's honse on State street. Friends were present from Pittsfield, Greenfield and Springfield.

Pleasant Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonis Dimmick of Springfield, formerly of this town, were pleasantly surprised by 25 of their local intimate friends at the home of Mrs. Dimmick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Closson on Granite street last Saturday evening, the occasion being the fifth anniversary of their marriage. The main feature of entertainment was progressive whist; there were four tables, after which refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Dimmick are well known in this town, having always lived here until this spring, when Mr. Dimmick accepted a position as manager of the laundry at the Wesson Memorial Hospital in Springfield.

More Money for Monson Man.

Announcement is made of another apportionment of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, the Montana copper king, who died in 1890, by which Henry A. Davis of Monson will receive a little over $13,000. Andrew A. Davis was born in the town of Hampden, and began his career as an errand boy.

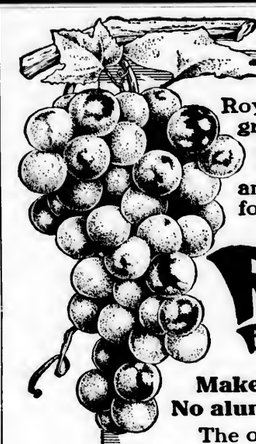
For Constipation.



A Medicine that Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Gives Satisfactory Relief.

If you suffer from constipation in any form whatever, acute or chronic, we will guarantee to supply you medicine that we honestly believe will effect permanent relief if taken with regularity and according to directions for a reasonable length of time. Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredient of this remedy, which is odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other valuable ingredients, it forms a preparation which is incomparable as a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, and are notable for their gentle and agreeable action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time, day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children and for delicate or aged persons, because they do not contain anything injurious. Unlike other preparations, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the habits acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics, and harsh physic, and remove the causes of constipation or irregular bowel action that are not of surgical variety.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. We know of nothing that will do you so much good. They are prepared in tablet form in two sizes: 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, Palmer.

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Palmer Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and pains
Backache, sideache, headache,
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Palmer citizen tells here the way to keep the kidneys well.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maxwell, 16 Park St., Palmer, Mass., say: "Undoubtedly my age had a great deal to do with my kidney complaint. My back ached and it was impossible for me to lie in a comfortable position. I was often so dizzy that I could not stand alone, and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. My whole system seemed to be run down. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procured a box from Lynde & Gould's Drug Store. This remedy proved to be just the one I needed, the first few doses giving me relief. The pain lost its severeness and my kidneys became normal. I am only too glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

PERCENTAGE OF NUTRITION IN FOODS

This table shows why

are the best food. They contain more nutrition than the same bulk of almost anything else that people eat.

You can put more sound flesh on your bones—you can put more life and vitality in your marrow—you can put a riper, richer, clearer blood in your veins and more endurance in your brain on a diet of MOTHER'S OATS than you can with any other food that has ever been found.

Ask your grocer about the Mother's Oats Free Fireless Cooker, which will save 80 per cent of your fuel bill and make it unnecessary to keep bending over a hot stove. Given free with coupons found in packages of the following cereals:

Mother's Oats
Mother's Corn Meal (white or yellow)
Mother's Wheat Hearts (the cream of the wheat)
Mother's Hominy Grits
Mother's Corn Flakes (toasted)
Mother's Coarse Pearl Hominy
Mother's Old Fashioned Steel Cut Oatmeal
Mother's Old Fashioned Graham Flour

Ask your grocer. If he doesn't keep Mother's Cereals write us today, giving his name and yours, and we will send you free a useful souvenir.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

One Doctor—Only One

No sense in running from one doctor to another! Select the best one, then stand by him. No sense either in trying this thing, that thing, for your cough. Carefully, deliberately select the best cough medicine, then take it. Stick to it. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for throat and lung troubles. Sold for nearly seventy years. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Why try this thing, that thing, for your constipation? Why not stick to the good old reliable family laxative—Ayer's Pills? Ask your doctor if he approves this advice.

HERE IS WHERE THE HIGH TARIFF HITS YOU MR. VOTER

Almost Famine Prices Increase Cost of Living

What topic do men and women discuss these days with more anxiety than the increased and increasing cost of living? In thousands of homes in this old Commonwealth it excludes all else.

Colored reports from statistical bureaus in Washington may tell you "wages" have increased equal to the cost of living. You know better, Mr. Day Laborer and Mr. Bricklayer and Mr. Machinist and Mr. Carpenter, don't you?

"I'm Glad I Don't Have to Explain It." Lodge Not On the Stump

And how about you, Mr. Clerk? How about the "salary" which you get? Has it doubled in a decade? Does the fifty-dollar man now get $100? Ask him.

Ten years ago every Republican orator in the land raged against a fifty-cent dollar. Remember? Well, ask them how about the dollar of to-day. Doesn't it take pretty near a dollar to buy you in food, clothing and other needs what fifty cents would purchase then? Now, on the level, doesn't it?

A careful inquiry made of the buyers in the leading stores which cater to all classes, the man with the pick and shovel and the man with the coupon scissors, reveals a startling condition. Compared with ten years ago, even five years ago, famine prices now prevail.

Behind the tariff walls the trust and tariff barons are exploiting you as they never dared before and would attempt in no land save this.

Then you could go into the grocery and buy a barrel of flour for $5.80. Now it costs only $7.25.

But Senator Lodge says "The Payne Tariff Bill is all right."

In 1899 beans cost you seven cents the quart. Now they are fifteen. Ask Senator Lodge.

Cornmeal to-day is three cents. It cost as much then. Some consolation there. But are you ready, Mr. Voter, for the diet of the plantation hand down South, Corn Pone, and the horrible disease of Pellagra which some think go with it? If so, eat cornmeal. It is all you have left.

Roast beef cost you then fourteen and two-thirds cents. How now, Mr. Voter? Just twenty-eight cents. You got the best rump cut then for twenty-five cents. Try it now. Nothing doing. Thirty-five cents, please.

And Senator Lodge says give us tariff walls.

Corned beef for the man whose "piece de resistance" was corned beef and cabbage has almost doubled from nine to sixteen cents. Veal forequarters cost you in "the good old days" just eight cents, now it's just DOUBLE that.

How about it, Senator? Explain it please, Your Excellency, Governor Draper.

Veal hindquarters were thirteen, now they are twenty-two cents; cutlets then twenty-two can now be had for thirty-eight cents, the price of venison a decade since.

Fresh pork has jumped from ten to sixteen; salt pork from nine to sixteen; smoked hams from thirteen to twenty; corned shoulder hams from nine to fourteen; sausages from eleven to fifteen; lard from eight to eighteen. Truly, cake is for the classes.

And we must have tariff for protection, says Senator Lodge. Butter was twenty-four. Try and buy it now. Somewhere around forty cents. Milk was five and six, now it's seven, eight and nine.

Coal is up, wood is up, gas as fuel and light holds its own, and there you are. In the clothing line things are even worse.

Shirting used to be thought dear at eight cents, and now you call it a good trade at fifteen cents the yard. Brown sheeting was eight cents, now it's three times that and three besides, or twenty-seven cents; bleached sheeting was nine, now it's thirty; ticking was eleven, now it's sixteen.

Just a few prices. One might fill a newspaper with the rest. Shoes are from twenty-five to fifty cents higher a pair, or if for trade reasons the price holds the same, the quality has deteriorated. You know that by this time, don't you, Mr. Voter?

Everything in woolens and worsteds will be increased from five to ten per cent. on November 1st, and compared with ten years ago this is an enormous advance.

Yet Senator Lodge says let the tariff alone. Let the barons and burglars who rob you behind its protecting walls wax fat on your suffering. It is a concrete thing, a stubborn fact.

Do you weary of it, Mr. Voter, of whatever class?

If you do, and want to register your protests with the rest of Massachusetts,

Vote for James H. Vahey for Governor.
Vote for Eugene N. Foss for Lieutenant-Governor.

LUDLOW MILLS STARTED.

Opened Monday. Few Employes at Work. No Disturbance.

The mills of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates at Ludlow were opened Monday morning, and about 300 employes returned to work. These, with the 100 who had not entered into the strike, made 400 of the regular 2800 employes of the big establishment. Those who went to work were for the greater part French, Scotch and Irish girls employed in the spinning department. Few of the striking Poles were on hand, and it is not expected that many of them will return. It is stated that they have at least half a million of dollars on deposit in the Ludlow savings bank, and that they propose to spend that before going to work at the reduced wages; they have money in other places also, and the amount of their resources is large.

Barn Struck By Lightning.

During the heavy thunder shower Tuesday evening, a barn owned by Thomas Dewey of Belchertown, located near his house, was struck by lightning in several places Mr. Dewey had just left the barn after attending to the horse. The animal was not injured Mrs. Dewey, who was on the stairway in the house, was much affected by the electricity.

MAN KILLED BY CARS.

John Delmont Cut in Two by Engine at Monson.

HAS NO RELATIVES IN THIS COUNTRY.

Was On His Way Home From Work, and Supposedly Stepped In Front of Locomotive.

The Central Vermont railroad added one to its death roll at Monson yesterday, when John Delmont, 22, was killed about 4.45 at the dry bridge near Belmont avenue about 100 yards north of the station. The body was cut in two at the abdomen, and death was instantaneous.

Delmont was a member of repair gang No. 13, and lived at the quarry with Salvador Smiraglia. He was on his way home and was preparing to board the engine of the switcher, which was backing up to the quarry. It is not known just how the accident occurred, but the local freight was on the siding to allow an extra No. 301, to pass, and it is supposed he stepped out on the main line just in time to be hit by the extra, running light. The body was viewed by Assistant Medical Examiner Jackson of Monson and taken to Bradway's undertaking rooms. Delmont has no relatives in this country.

Edward T. Hartmann, presiding officer for the first day, is secretary of the Civic League. He is level-headed and full of enthusiasm well directed by experience. Every speaker on the list is a specialist in his line.

Philip Rubenstein will speak of handling the boys and girls so as to keep them out of lives of trouble. He is another Judge Ben Lindsey in his grasp of the problem. The police authorities should hear him.

Thomas Chew, who speaks on Boys' Clubs, is a quiet genius, who began life among the mill workers of Fall River and has developed a magnificent Boys' Club, which Fall River would no more think of failing to support than it would think of giving up its city charter.

The program of Wednesday evening, as will be seen, is to be carried out at the Technical high school. If you have never seen this splendid building, this great school work-shop, now is one of the best possible opportunities, for it will be open for inspection. Charles F. Warner, last speaker of the evening, is superintendent of this school.

The Art Museum, in which the other meetings are to be held, is the finest thing of its kind in the United States. Perhaps you will consider this a broad statement, but such is the fact nevertheless.

Greater beauty in our surroundings, playgrounds for the children, good sound training of the head and hand in something that they will use in their after life, and the wise care of children whose upbringing may lead them to lives of crime, are matters of the very greatest importance and of intense interest to-day. These meetings are free and should have a good attendance. Everybody who attends, even for a little time, will be sure to bring back something of value to himself and to the town.

DRAPER WINNER AGAIN.

But by Very Greatly Reduced Plurality From Last Year.

FROTHINGHAM'S MARGIN CLOSE, ALSO.

But Then, it Was an "Off" Year. Cushman Wins in First Hampden Representative District. Chief Fitzgerald Of Ware Elected Sheriff.

The election figures show some mighty interesting things. To be sure, the Republican candidates at the head of the ticket managed to "get by," but only by "the skin of their teeth," so to speak Gov. Draper's plurality of only 8092 is in marked contrast to the figures a year ago, when he had a lead of over 60,000 Lieutenant-governor Frothingham had an even narrower escape, his plurality over Foss being only 6710, when last year he had over 96,000. But then, that was a presidential year.

Locally the only contest of any moment was in the First Hampden representative district, where at the beginning of the campaign it was openly stated by many Republicans that the only man of the party who could be elected was Ernest E. Hobson of Palmer, who has so well represented the district for the past three years. The results showed that this was very much of an error, Edward D. Cushman of Monson winning over John P. Herlihy of the same town by the comfortable lead of 293, carrying every town and precinct with the exception of Precinct B in Palmer. This means that the differences which have existed in the party in this district for several years have been smoothed over.

The Worcester-Hampden senatorial district easily elected Walter B. Mellen of Brookfield. Mr. Mellen made a very favorable impression among the voters of this section, and those who knew him long and intimately announced that he was a "good man to tie to."

The candidates for Hampden county officers spent little time worrying over the results of the vote, for all had the nominations of both parties, and County Commissioner Speliman, Treasurer Bearse and Register of Probate Hodskins were re-elected by good majorities.

One of the biggest surprises was the election of Chief of Police Manrice Fitzgerald of Ware to be sheriff of Hampshire county. This in the face of the candidacy of T. A Orcutt of Northampton, who has been acting sheriff for some time. But Northampton took kindly to "Maurice Fitz" and gave him a lead of 250 His plurality in the district was 554.

Among those who will help make the laws for us another year is Albert P. Langtry of the Springfield Union who has many friends in Eastern Hampden. Col. A. H. Goetting of Springfield is also sent to the council by a plurality of 7094 over Lawyer Ely of Westfield. Col. Goetting is not unknown to the voters of this section, as he was for many years chairman of the county and district committee when Palmer was in the same senatorial district with Springfield.

The votes in the several towns in this section is given below in detail:

A MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE.

Or More Properly Speaking, at 2 in the Morning.

TROUBLES OF A STAFFORD COUPLE.

An Accident on the Road Delayed Them, But All Difficulties Finally Surmounted.

It is not often that clergymen are called upon to perform the marriage ceremony at the eerie hour of 2 a. m., but that experience fell to the lot of Rev. F W. Gibbs of St. Paul's Universalist church Tuesday morning.

C. H. Colburn and Miss Ida Belle Bowden of Stafford, Ct., had decided to travel in double harness hereafter and had engaged Mr Gibbs to tie the knot. As the groom could not leave his employment earlier, the hour was set for 11 o'clock Monday evening, at which time the clergyman agreed to be ready at his home. The couple started to drive to Palmer, as originally planned, and all went well and without unusual happening until Wales had been passed. Between that town and Palmer Mr. Colburn in some manner crossed the reins, and in gathering them up quickly turned the horse sharply to one side. His companion, fearing that an upset and possible serious consequences were in store, jumped from the carriage. In doing so her cloak caught on some part of the vehicle and was so badly torn that it, with her hat, which was also caught and torn, was left by the side of the road The horse had become frightened and it took some time to straighten matters around again.

The accident delayed them so much that Palmer and a hotel was not reached until about 1.45, and it was a question whether the minister would be available at that hour or not. A call at his home however found him ready to perform the ceremony, and this was done a little later.

Palmer Town League Affairs.

The season for the Palmer Town baseball league was officially closed last Friday evening, when the executive committee met at the the Converse House to listen to reports Every team reported that it has finished the season on the right side financially, a result very much doubted when the project was suggested last spring. The committee voted to give the pennant to the Thorndike team, and E. D Tufts and John Donovan was appointed a committee to secure a flag to be contested for each year. All four of the teams in the league this season made known intentions of joining another year. The annual meeting will be held March 11, 1910.

Meeting of the Palmer Historical Society.

The Historical Society meeting held last Tuesday night was largely attended, the seating capacity of the reference room of the library being taxed to the utmost.

The society having received an invitation from the Mass. Civic League to send delegates to its meeting to be held in Springfield Nov. 9 and 10, it was voted to send O. P. Allen and Rev. F. W. Gibbs as delegates.

Mrs. W. H. Fuller read the paper of the evening on "The Cliff Dwellers of Mesa Verda, National Park, in Colorado." The paper was a deeply interesting and graphic narration of a visit paid to this celebrated locality last summer while Mrs. Fuller was enjoying a vacation at the ranch of her brother, Cyrus Fisherdick. The Mesa covers an area of abont 65 sqnare miles and is about 2000 feet above sea level. Here untold ages ago the Indians constrncted their homes in the impregnable cliffs, with great patience and ingenuity, the evidence of which still remains in the well-preserved ruins, which were so fully described by Mrs. Fuller. A large number of beautiful views, taken by Mrs. Fuller, were exhibited in illustrating her paper; also a few relics of pottery and other articles of interest. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Fuller for her valuable paper.

Paving Going Forward Rapidly.

The brick paving on Main street bas progressed finely this week. There have been plenty of brick and they have been handled in a more expeditions manner than formerly. Good weather has also been an important factor in the work. If this continues it is expected that the north side of the street will be completed to-morrow night. Work will then be begun on the sonth side of the street and continned as long as the weather permits. There has been a report that the sonth side of the street would not be tonched this fall, but this the selectmen and Engineer William H. Brainerd, who has charge of the work, deny; nnsuitable weather will he the only reason for suspending operations.

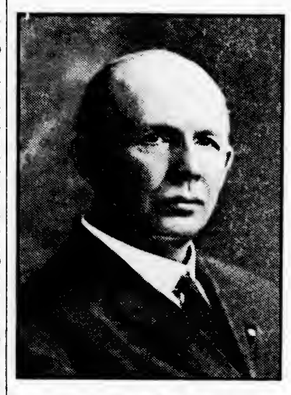
Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Nov. 3, 1909.

At the Democratic headquarters they have accepted the result of the election with all possible resignation. Yet it was a bitter disappointment. Dnring the first part of the receipt of the returns, the figures showed gains for the Democratic candidates all the way from 20 to 45 per cent. This continued so until about 6 30 At that time the tide seemed to be setting so strongly that Vahey's election was figured out in one of the newspaper offices by 25,000 to 30,000 plurality and headlines and descriptive writing were put in process of preparation accordingly. Then came a lnll in the receipts, after which the complexion of the returns changed for the worse. But the managers are satisfied that there is not sufficient reason for asking for recounts. They accept the result with what grace they can after their disappointment, and with genuine satisfaction that they have cnt down the Republican margin so seriously.

The Republicans realize the narrowness of their escape. It was only Saturday that they were confident of 30,000 to 40,000 plnrality for Draper and the big advertisement in the Boston papers Monday afternoon revealed the extent of the alarm which came over them just at the end of the campaign As far as appears at present, it was the conservative, residential portions of the state, especially the suburbs of Boston, which gave Draper and Frothingham the vote which saved them. Boston's gain of 7000 over last year in plurality for Vahey was not quite up to the mark set by his friend but it shows so much gain that there cannot be complaint, though it is so far below Douglas' 33,000 that the latter figure would have elected Vahey. This may show that Draper got some of the labor vote.

This result will have the effect here of concentrating the issue next year upon the tariff. By making the most possible of state issues and showing what the Draper administration had done and that national issues could not be affected by the outcome, the day has been saved for the majority party. It is safe to predict that next year the Repnblican state committee will not wait till two weeks before the election without putting any campaign speakers into the field.



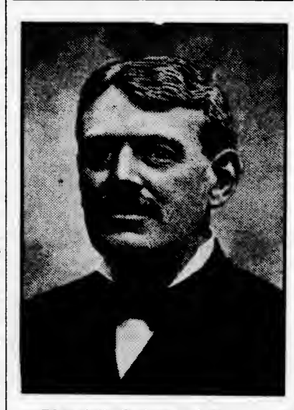
The House of Representatives stands the same as last year, the Repnblicans losing six seats to the Democrats, and the Democrats losing six to the Repnblicans, with the exception that in Haverhill the Republicans have lost one seat to the Socialists. This was in the district formerly represented hy James C. Carey, the Socialist leader of the state, and it is the district represented in the last House hy Arthur L. Nason, who was elected to the Senate after having secured the defeat of J. Otis Wardwell as candidate for the state Repnblican committee from the district. Observers of the case say that it is a case where the defeated Repnblican faction has thrown its vote to the Socialists, for Bartlett, the Republican candidate, was one of the leading snpporters of Nason in his contest against Wardwell.

One of the notable resnlts was the election of John E. White of Tisbnry over Thomas E. Pattison of Barnstable, Repnblican nominee for the Senate in the Cape district. White is as good a Republican as Pattison, bnt there was snch a belief in the unfair nomination of Pattison that Norman E. White went down to snpport tbe other White and the Repnblican state committee sent down speakers for the regnlar nominee. But the independent won hy a good margin. White has been a first-class representative from Tisbury and he will be a good senator.

Analysis of the Legislative returns shows that each branch will be distinctly conservative. The Senate will have most of the leading members of last year back again, and President Treadway will have a very easy task in making np the committees. In almost every case there are some of the old stock returned. Rarely all three or four of them are back. The Senate is so conservative in its traditions that every member who wants to he promoted to the chairmanship when the chairman of 1909 has retired and the other man is the ranking member-elect, can doubtless get what he wants. Senator Turtle of Berkshire is the ranking Senate member of the committee on railroads and as this is the place which is desired as much as any chairmanship of the joint committees, he will doubtless be at the head of the committee. Representative Robert M. Washbnrn of Worcester, the Honse chairman in 1909, is re-elected, and of conrse he will be put at the head again. That committee has an nnusually large proportion of old members re-elected, among them being Messrs. Haigie of Montague, who was one of the four dissenters, with Washhurn, from the holding bill, and Mr. Carmody of Worcester, who also stood with Washburn. It does not yet appear what the committee will have to do, but it is rare that it not one of the most important committees, and places on it are eagerly songht by both senators and representatives.

One of the humors of the day after bnt painfnl to the most interested party, is the way that Senator Birch of Milford takes his defeat at the hands of John F. Meany of Blackstone, the man who was chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic state committee last year. Birch has heen in town to day and the English language is too limited for his emotions. He says that he shall not come into the state honse again for ever so long, that he has got through with politics forever, that he will have nothing to do with labor nnions from now till the crack of doom, and his doll is made of nothing hut sawdust after all. He did not talk that way last year, and when he gets to dreaming over his speeches in the House npon decayed poultry and recalls his eloquent passages over the condition of the internals of cold-stored fowls, he will forget his disappointment and long to enter the Legislative arena once more.

Speaker Walker will not have a hard job to make up his committees, any more than President Treadway will. Though only three more than half of the House are new men, yet there are enough good men re elected to push up to the first places on the committees, and the chairmanships will be easily filled, while the remaining places will fall into line readily. The House committee on rules is strong in old members, having Speaker Walker and five others, including Underhill of Somerville, who was second, Cushing of Boston, Washburn of Worcester, Pope of Leominster and Carmody of Worcester. Norman H. White of Brookline, who was recently let off with no hill in the case of the hoy whom bis automohile killed in Worcester,



Walter B. Mellen of Brookfield.
Senator-elect from the Worcester-Hampden district.

and who is said by admirers to he likely to be candidate for governor next year against Gov Draper, is ranking member of the House committee on ways and means He was also House chairman of the committee on education and is back again this year, so that he will have an opportunity to push his scheme of a legislative reference library, which last session was such a disturbing influence for the State Librarian Tillinghast.

Dr Oliver of Athol is second on two committees,—military affairs and public health,—and he has been a good member on both of them, so he can probably have whichever chairmanship he wishes. Mr. Gardner of Westfield was second on agricnltnre, and can doubtless be first, provided he wonld like the place

The incoming Legislatnre, as a wbole, promises to be a strong and clean body. It seems to be made np of elements which harmonize well. The presiding officers are now experts, and the ontlook is for good team work. The fair criticism is that it promises to be extremely conservative and not sufficiently alive to the growing demands for a forward march on the part of the political body. One of the trnths which it is most difficult to get into the heads of the average voter or Legislator is tbat there is a progress, or growth, in events. Most of them act in public affairs as if they thought everything was stationary.

Every person who can come to Boston to see the Boston 1915 exposition ought to do so,—come and make a day of it and come prepared to study. It is not an exposition to make people open their eyes with wonder and curiosity, but it is a very plain appearing display of articles which are well worth the careful study of all citizens who believe in clean, strong and healthful conditions of body, mind and spirit. This exposition touches upon all of these various fields of activity. It concerns sanitary conditions, tenements, ventilation, plumbing and the like. It has to do with schoolhonses, all sorts of technical schools, and with colleges and nniversities. It makes a feature of chnrches and their work. It devotes large space to street widenings and improvements. It has a great display of the Boston chamber of commerce. Chief Gettemy of the bnreau of statistics has an exhibit highly suggestive of the reforms which are imperative in the careless and expensive ways of city and town officials in administering town affairs. In a hundred ways the exposition has material sufficient to give a stimulus of reform, not only to Boston, hut to every city and town in the state. It will be a gain for every city and town to send a representative here to study the remarkable exhibits.

BRIMFIELD.

Grange Meeting.

A meeting of the Grange was held Tuesday evening, when four candidates received the first and second degrees of membership. They were Principal George F. Kenney, Dr. Edward Pearsall and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Moore. There was an interesting literary program, which included the consideration of three American poets. Mrs Orus E Parker gave a sketch of James Whitcomb Riley, and selections from his writings were given by Mrs Parker. Mrs. Fred Lawrence and Orns E. Parker and Miss Lillian Stanton sang the song entitled "There, little girl, don't cry," consisting of Riley's verse set to music. Mrs. Arthur B. Brown presented the life of Helen Hunt Jackson, and poems from that author were read hy Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Garmes, Mrs. E B. Brown and Mrs. Tarbell. Miss Tarbell gave a talk concerning Lucy Larcom, and Miss Maud Bedell recited "Hannah binding shoes," by that author. Owing to the lateness of the hour, the subject of Longfellow and his writings, which had been prepared hy Mrs. Clarence B. Brown, was postponed till a future meeting. "I stood on the bridge at midnight" was sung by Mrs. George W. Sherman.

Monson News.

Death of Joseph H. Kenerson.

Joseph H. Kenerson, 66, died at his home on King avenue Tuesday evening about 10.45 o'clock after a several weeks' illness of heart trouble. He was born in New Bedford, but had lived the greater part of his life in Palmer. He was an expert mechanic in different lines and had held several responsible positions. He was chief engineer at the old state primary school for a number of years, going from there to Brightwood to a similar position. His last position was chief engineer at the electric station at Chicopee, and he came from to there Monson a year and a half ago, because of ill health, and had since made his home here. He had a genial and wholehearted disposition, which made and retained him many friends. He was a member of the Methodist church of Chicopee, and of the Thomas lodge of Masons and the A. O. U. W. lodge of Palmer. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. F. E. Cady of this town, and a sister, Mrs. Wallace Chilson of Amherst, N. H. The funeral was held at his residence this afternoon. The body was taken to Palmer by electric car for burial, Thomas lodge of Masons having charge of the burial, Rev. F. S. Brewer officiating.

Death of Mrs. Mahlon Cushman.

Mrs. Mahlon D. Cushman, 75, died at her home on Pearl street Wednesday morning about 5.30. Mrs. Cushman had been confined to her home by illness for some time. She met with a serious accident about four weeks ago, falling down stairs, breaking two ribs, and had been gradually failing since, complications setting in causing her death. Mrs. Cushman, who was Martha Goodwill, was born in Monson in 1834, and had always lived here. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. She leaves, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Edwin Bates and Mrs. Tony Jacobs, both of this town, and one sister, Mrs. O. E. Butler of Palmer, and four brothers, James Goodwill of California, John and Justin of Hartford, Ct., and Andrew of Staffordville, Ct. The funeral was held from her late residence to-day at 10 a. m., Rev. J. M. Gage officiating. The burial was in Stafford Springs, Ct.

Accidentally Shot.

John McCormick, the 19-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McCormick, was accidentally shot recently by the discharge of a 38-caliber revolver. Young McCormick was hunting rabbits and had the revolver in his right hip pocket. In some unaccountable manner the revolver suddenly went off, the bullet entering the left leg between the hip and knee, and lodged on top of the knee cap. A part of his clothing was carried along by the bullet and that had to be removed. Dr. McQuaid, who attended McCormick, will not remove the bullet until the wound is somewhat healed. He states that a large artery just escaped being cut, and if it had been, death would have occurred before medical assistance could have arrived. McCormick is very comfortable and will be able to be out in a few days.

Badly Bitten By Horse.

Herman Chandler, a state boy who lives with Herbert Norton on East Hill, was badly bitten by a horse late last Friday afternoon. The boy, who is but seven years of age, was holding Mr. Norton's horse, while the wagon was being unloaded, when the animal suddenly jumped at the boy, biting him severely in the face, taking off nearly all of his underchin and the flesh from the chin. The boy was taken to the Wesson Memorial hospital in Springfield, where he was treated by Dr. Hovey and other physicians. The horse had not been considered a vicious animal, but had always shown a dislike for the Chandler boy.

Negro's Pluck.

Gen. Lawton's division was marching back to El Paso, and the general was standing at the edge of the road watching the troops file past. They gave evidence of being dead tired, hut nevertheless, were full of ginger. Gen. Lawton's attention was attracted to a certain corporal of the 25th infantry, a great six-foot negro, who in addition to a couple of guns and two cartridge belts loaded full was carrying a dog. The soldier to whom the other gun belonged was limping alongside his comrade. The general halted the men. "Here, corporal," said he to the six-foot man, "didn't you march all night before last?"

"Yes, sir," responded the negro, sainting

"And fonght all day?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have, besides, been marching since 10 o'clock last night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then," said Gen. Lawton, "why on earth are you carrying that dog?"

"Well, general," replied the negro, showing his white teeth in a broad grin, "the dog's tired!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Two matrons of a certain Western city, whose respective matrimonial ventnres did not in the first instance prove altogether satisfactory, met at a woman's club one day, when the first matron remarked: "Hattie, I met your 'ex,' dear old Tom, the day before yesterday. We talked much of you." "Is that so?" asked the other matron. "Did he seem sorry when you told him of my second marriage?" "Indeed, he did; and said so most frankly!" "Honest?" "Honest! He said he was extremely sorry, though, he didn't know the man personally." —Lippincott's

CERTAIN RESULTS.

Many a Palmer Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Palmer. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Otto R. F. Smith, one mile out on Thorndike road, Palmer, Mass., says: "In the spring of 1901 I used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them beneficial in every way, in fact, I was so highly gratified with their good work that I gave a public statement in their favor. When I first began taking them, my kidneys were greatly disordered. My back ached constantly, and I could hardly arise from a chair after sitting for some time. There was also a disagreeable feeling in my head and I was annoyed by a difficulty with the kidney secretions. I do not wish it understood that Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, but they benefitted me greatly. I know of other persons who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with the same excellent results and consequently I gladly give them my recommendations."

WARE.

Death of Mrs. H. S. Hayden.

Mrs. Hannah S. Hayden, 83, died at her home on Elm street soon after 12 Wednesday night. She had been in failing health for some time. She was the daughter of Joseph and Ellen Lawrence and was born in Woodstock, Ct., April 4, 1820 She married Albert Gallatin Hayden in 1849 at Ware, but shortly afterward removed to New York, where Mr Hayden died in 1866. Two years later Mrs. Hayden returned to Ware with her son, Arthur L, and her step-daughter, Miss Harriet B. Hayden, and with them to care for her she had lived in the town ever since. She was a woman of remarkable intelligence and reading, an entertaining conversationallst upon all topics and was held in high respect by her friends She was not actively interested in church and social life, but was happy and content in her home. Since the death of Mrs. Betsey Billings in June she had been the oldest woman in the town and with the exception of Calvin Hitchcock, the oldest person in Ware. The funeral will be held at the home to-morrow afternoon at 2, and burial will be in Aspen Grove cemetery.

Organ Presented to Church.

It was announced at the Sunday morning service in the Methodist church that a pipe organ had been given to the church by Mrs. David F Grimes and her two brothers, Henry O. Draper of Ware and George L. Draper of Los Angeles, Cal., in memory of their parents, Lyman and Mary A. Draper. The organ will cost about $1500, and will be installed this winter. It will be a much-appreciated gift, and will add to the beauty of the interior of the church, which is comparatively a new building. Mrs. Mary A. Draper was a member of the Methodist church and an earnest worker during her life, while her husband attended its services with her. George L Draper, who is now visiting his relatives in the town, has offered to pay one-third of the church debt, which is now a little less than $700, providing others will pay the remaining two-thirds. As nearly one-half of the balance has already been pledged, it is likely that the remainder will be raised before January 1.

Death of Mrs. Thomas McGrath.

Mrs. Thomas McGrath, 80, died last week Thursday at midnight at her home on Otis avenue, after a week's illness with bronchitis and heart trouble. Her maiden name was Mary Donoghue, and she was born in County Cavan, Ire. She had lived in Ware over 40 years and was highly respected by all. She was mother of 15 children, eight of whom are living. There are three sons, Charles and John of Ware and George of Chicago, and five daughters, Mrs. Patrick Reilly, Mrs. Owen McArdle, Mrs. John Englesby, Misses Sarah and Catherine McGrath all of Ware. She also left 23 grandchildren and five great-grand-children. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in All Saints' church.

The body of David T. Ellis, who died in Bridgeport, was taken to Ware Thursday and buried in Aspen Grove cemetery, with burial service in charge of Knights Templar from that city. Mr. Ellis had been in very poor health for the past four years, and a great sufferer during part of that time. He was a native of Ware, being born and brought up in district No. 7, near Hardwick pond. He was one of the charter members of Eden lodge of Masons, and interested in its welfare to the last.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. Sam'l Lee, 3523 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—Lena V. Henry, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsollcited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect.

See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of stiffness. It's wonderfully penetrating — goes right to the spot — relieves the soreness — limbers up the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. G. T. Roberts of Resaca, Ga., R.F.D. No. 1, Box 43, writes: — "I have used your Liniment on a horse for sweeney and effected a thorough cure. I also removed a spavin on a mule. This spavin was as large as a guinea egg. In my estimation the best remedy for lameness and soreness is

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. H. M. Gibbs, of Lawrence, Kans., R.F.D. No. 3, writes: — "Your Liniment is the best that I have ever used. I had a mare with an abscess on her neck and one 50c. bottle of Sloan's Liniment entirely cured her. I keep it around all the time for galls and small swellings and for everything about the stock."

Sloan's Liniment will kill a spavin, curb or splint, reduce wind puffs and swollen joints, and is a sure and speedy remedy for fistula, sweeney, founder and thrush.

Price 50c. and $1.00

Life Isn't Worth Living

When this Statement is Made It May be Generally Attributed to the Lack of Good Health.

We want to talk to people who are nervous, who suffer frequent headaches, who don't enjoy their food, who are irritable, quickly lose their temper, who are so exhausted that they feel they must give up, and have become so despondent that life doesn't seem worth living. We believe we know what is the matter with these people in this condition, and if they will follow our advice we can tell them how to regain good health and that buoyancy of feeling which makes life seem surrounded with happiness and sunshine.

Most of the above described conditions are chiefly caused by what is commonly called catarrh, a "below par" condition of mucus membranes. This delicate lining of certain of the body cavities becomes weakened, inflamed and congested until the whole system is weakened, mental depression ensuing as one of the results. The wise way to overcome this condition is through treatment of the general system We have the treatment, and we are so positive it will produce the results we claim for it that we will supply it to any one with the understanding that we will return to them every penny paid us in every instance where the treatment is not satisfactory and beneficial to them

We want you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, which is a scientifically devised alterative tonic and body builder, its action being to aid the body in its effort to re-establish the natural and healthy functions of the mucous membranes.

Rexall Mucu-Tone thus acts to expel the "catarrhal poison," restore the mucous cells to good health, tone up the whole body, allay inflammation, remove congestion and stimulate the system to healthy activity. It is splendid for aiding in the building up of flesh and muscle tissue and removing weaknesses.

Come to our store and get a bottle of Mucu-Tone, and after giving it a reasonable trial, if you are not satisfied, simply tell us so, and we will hand back your money without question. Surely nothing could be more fair than this Rexall Mucu-Tone comes in two sizes, 50 cents and $1 00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. Lynde and Gould, Palmer.

THE KISSING FETE.

By ROBERT C. WARNER.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

The fete was a great sucess. Long before the hour announced for the beginning of the festivities crowds of people were flocking to the entrances of the park, and during the evening many thousands came and went. Of these there were the young and the older, married, the former as participants, the latter as spectators.

And what was the occasion of the fete? An edict had gone forth that between the hours of 8 and 12 any young man might kiss any girl in the park provided he wore in his cap a green feather. This provision was introduced to enable any girl opposed to strange embraces to take to flight on the approach of a would be kisser.

As the clock struck 9 two young girls entered the park arm in arm. One was tall and stately, with very black eyes, a cable of plaited black hair hanging down her back. The other was smaller, a blue eyed beauty, with hair of spun gold drifting in the breeze. They had no sooner passed the gate than green feathers began to flutter in their path. Many a young man approached, but was deterred by a repellent glance from the queenly brunnelle. For an hour the pair walked about the park watching the others. Now and again some young girl would suddenly dart away on seeing a youth approach whom she wished to avoid or to appear to avoid. Here and there would be heard suppressed screams and giggles, while smacks resounded like pistol shots.

But the two girls walked untouched. Many persons noticed them, but no one seemed to know them. It was supposed that they were of high degree, daughters of noblemen who had come to witness the kissing without taking part in it, and it was even whispered that they were from the court. But there were men present from the court, and none of them had ever seen the girls before. The people wondered why these gallants dared not offer to kiss two such beauties.

Near midnight a man with a black beard entered in company with one who appeared to be his son. It was apparent that both were disguised. Passing the two girls, they turned and looked at them, then, walking in a circle, met them again. At this second meeting the younger man darted toward the blue eyed girl. Seeing him coming, she left her companion and ran away. Those watching these unknown people then saw the older man approach the girl who was left. They expected that she would wither him with a glance. What was their surprise to see her after a faint resistance submit to be kissed. Then when he offered his arm she took it, and they walked on together.

"You are very bold," said the lady.

"Such beauty as yours would inspire boldness in a coward."

"You had no right to kiss me. You do not wear the green feather."

"True. I never thought of that. But such beauty as yours makes one forget."

"You may have a ladylove."

"Such beauty as yours would win me from her in spite of my best resolution."

"You do not deny that she exists."

"I do not. Whatever or whoever I am, I am no liar."

"But would you break a heart for a stranger?"

"It is she who is the stranger. I have never seen her."

"Never have seen her! What manner of man are you who wooes without seeing her you woo?"

"I see her I woo. I have not seen her I have intended to make my bride."

"There comes my friend with your boy. I must rejoin her. This is but the adventure of an evening. Farewell."

"We will not part without the pledge of another meeting. Tell me when and where I may communicate with you tomorrow."

"You may call upon me tomorrow evening." She gave him the location of a villa where she said she lived. "But you will not. You will think of this affair overnight and resolve to be true to that which I surmise is to your interest."

"Wait and see."

The next evening the stranger drove up to the villa in question. He was ushered in by lackeys with every evidence of profound respect. He seemed surprised. In a sumptuous salon he was received by the lady who had so suddenly inspired him. She was smiling at him with an air of triumph.

"I am surprised to see your majesty," she began, but he interrupted her.

"Majesty!"

"Yes. You were known to me from the first."

"Who are you?"

"First let me know your royal decision. For me will you break with the Princess Margaret?"

"The Princess Margaret! What do you know of the Princess Margaret?"

"Will you cast her off for one you have seen but once?"

"I will wed no one at present. I ask to be permitted to pay my addresses to you with a view to raising you to a throne."

"So you are not so sure of this newborn love after all?"

"I am. I wish time to prepare my people for the change."

The lady turned her head aside. The king took one of her hands in his and poured forth a torrent of words. Suddenly she stopped him.

"I am the Princess Margaret."

"You the Princess Margaret!"

Household Hints.

EGG VERMICELLI.

Cook two eggs in boiling water for twenty minutes; drop immediately into cold water. Remove the shells and chop the white coarsely. Make a cream sauce from three-quarters cup of milk, one-quarter cup of cream, two level tablespoons of flour, one-half level tablespoon of butter and one-quarter level teaspoon of salt. Add a little white pepper if liked. Stir the chopped white of the egg into the sauce, and heat. Cut two large or four small slices of stale bread, trim off unsightly crust and toast it. Lay the bread on a warm platter, spread the sauce over each slice and rub the dry yolk over the sauce like a fine powder. A fine wire strainer is best for the purpose. Garnish with a few green leaves and you have a picture dish for breakfast or luncheon which makes two eggs appear much more than if they were simply boiled.

If entire wheat or rye bread is used the dish loses nothing in attractiveness and gains in nutritive value. Do not consider that if the eggs are cooked in rapidly boiling water for five or ten minutes that they are done; they will be firm, it is true, but not as palatable or digestible as if twenty minutes had been allowed.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

WANT HAY SCALES MOVED.

Business Club Sends Petition to The Selectmen.

NOW IN CENTER OF TRAVELED WAY.

Believes Brick Paved Street No Place for Private Enterprise. No Action as Yet.

With the beginning of the brick paving on the south side of Main street Monday came renewed interest in the question whether the hay scales were to be allowed to remain in the center of the traveled way, or whether the selectmen would order them removed. The matter was discussed somewhat a few weeks ago, when the paving was begun, but was dropped when it was expected that only the north side of the street would be paved this year.

The scales as located occupy a position almost in the center of the traveled space between the track of the street railway and the sidewalk in front of the Holbrook block; they are owned by W. F. Fillmore and used in his coal business; they also serve as the public scales of the town, being used for the weighing of any loads which apply. A canvass of the business men of the village reveals an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of the removal of the scales to some other point. There is no feeling against Mr. Fillmore or wish to inconvenience him; on the contrary there is frankly expressed regret that the occasion demands anything which will discommode him. At the same time there is a feeling that, with an expenditure of $10,000 in permanent improvements in Main street, the center of travel is not a proper place for a set of scales. The matter took definite form Tuesday evening, when the village improvement committee of the Palmer Business and Social Club took the matter up on request. After a discussion it was voted to recommend that the club request the selectmen to order the removal of the scales and to relocate the watering tub which has stood in that vicinity for many years. This was adopted at the regular monthly meeting of the club later in the evening, and the selectmen have been notified of the club's action. They have not yet officially considered the matter, having held no meeting since the receipt of the protest. When they will consider it is not known; they state that probably not until they have another meeting, but do not know when that will be.

On the other side of the question Mr. Fillmore states that the scales are almost a necessity to him. If compelled to remove them he will locate them at his coal yard adjoining the Central Vermont tracks, a considerable distance from his office. He argues that the scales are a great convenience to ontsiders, and that the inconvenience of driving heavy loads down the Bridge street hill to be weighed and then back again would be great. He is willing to do anything which the selectmen may require in the matter of fitting up the scales in their present position, and will agree to keep them according to the demands of the present or any future board of selectmen.

Laying aside the arguments pro and con for the removal of the scales, one question seems to stand out prominently against all others, and that is, "Shall the highways of a town be used for the private benefit of individuals?" There can be no question as to the answer, they should not be. A request for a new—or another—privilege of the sort under discussion would not be considered for a moment by the town officials or sanctioned by the citizens. Under these conditions the advocates of the removal of the scales see no reason why they should be allowed to mar the expensive improvements being made. Of course there will be differences of opinion, but the movers for the change believe that they are in a majority and that the majority should rule. If no action is taken by the selectmen the voters will very likely be asked to settle the question at the annual town meeting.

BODY FOUND IN CANAL.

John Murphy of Athol, in Water at Bondsville Probably Two Weeks.

The body of a man, which later proved to be that of John Murphy of Athol, was found in the canal of the Boston Duck Company at Bondsville Saturday afternoon by Lonis Deslanriers, who was fishing for eels. The water had been drawn down and the body was seen lying on the bottom. Medical Examiner Schneider being out of town, Assistant Examiner Dr. C. W. Jackson of Monson was summoned; he ordered the body removed to the storehouse of the Boston Duck Company. At first the body was supposed to be that of Murphy, and later it was identified as such.

The circumstances indicate death by accident. Murphy was in the employ of the William N. Flynt Granite Company of Monson, working on a job in Webster. Murphy bought a ticket at the Athol station in Bondsville about two weeks before his body was found, and that ticket was found on him, with other papers. A suitcase was left in the station at the time he bought the ticket. It is remembered by two young women that about that time they thought they heard cries for help one evening, but a neighbor who investigated could find nothing amiss.

Mr. Murphy was well known in Athol, having been employed there many years in the street department. He leaves three sons, William T. Murphy of Athol, who was the Democratic candidate for representative last year; Andrew J., who has recently returned from the Philippines, where he spent five years with the United States Army, John of Roxbury. The body was taken to Athol for burial.

EAST BRIMFIELD.

Albert Howlett Jr. of Fiskdale was in town Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Locke spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Slater of Fiskdale.

Harold Smith of Sneilville spent Sunday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O Smith.

Miss Alice Hyde of Southbridge spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Davenport.

Richard Macallister of Southbridge was in town Sunday visiting at the home of W. C. Davenport.

Hiram Wilkins of Holland was badly injured one day last week while cutting down a tree. When the tree started to fall he stepped back two or three feet from the trunk to avoid being hit, but it struck a large rock, causing the trunk to swing around, striking Mr. Wilkins in the pit of the stomach. It knocked him completely out, and he was taken to a logging hut, where his fellow workmen cared for him.

Visit to the Cliff Dwellings — Of the Mesa Verde National Park of Arizona.

Paper read before a recent meeting of the Palmer Historical Society by Mrs. W. H. Fuller.

The Mesa Verde National Park of Colorado is 15 miles from Mancos, a town in the southwestern part of the state. As all tourists to the Park make this town their headquarters, perhaps we may as well fancy that we are registered at the hospitable Mancos Hotel, ready for an early morning's start. From the broad piazza a pleasing view is had of the shady streets in the residential portion of the town. The houses are not unlike those found in our New England towns, with perhaps this exception, that there are no centenarians in a place that is barely 30 years old.

You will be charmed, as all visitors are, by the beautiful lawns and gardens, for here, where irrigation takes the place of the uncertain showers, there are never found parched lawns and shrubs. Mancos is a town of about 3000 inhabitants and is located upon a branch of the D & R. G. railroad. It is in a fertile valley northwest of the Lapista range and is a centre of trade for the ranchers many miles in all directions. You will enjoy watching the train climb down the mountain range into the town; and as it twists and turns and disappears to again come into view upon a much lower grade you think it compares favorably in size with the toy trains used in our parks for the amusement of children. Its advent is of no small importance, for there are but two trains a day, one going south and the other north.

You will be delighted with the stores of Mancos, for they are modern in appointments, attractive in arrangement and carry extensive lines of goods. Perhaps you will experience some surprise to see the up-to-date hat creations in one window and the latest styles of suits in another, for these western storekeepers are hustlers and are in close touch with the New York market, even though they receive all of their goods over a narrow gauge road which runs but two trains each day into the town.

Perhaps a short sketch of the business successes of two men, as told us, may not prove uninteresting. John Bauer, some 25 years ago, ran a small bakery on Lightning Creek, a little west of Durango. He had little or no money and it is said packed his stock of goods to Mancos upon burros over a trail of about 35 miles. Here he began business with this small stock and little else beside good health for capital. He soon got started in the mercantile business, freighting all of his goods to Durango by wagon, and continued to do so even after the D & R. G. Railroad was built from Durango to Mancos, as he claimed the railroad charges were excessive and where freight money was paid to the railroad it went out of the country. He soon drew trade from points in Utah and the northern section of Arizona for 150 and 200 miles, and even to-day some of the Bauer Mercantile Co. customers come overland that distance. Bluff City is a Mormon settlement of 150 miles distant in Utah; the store of this community receives its stock from the Baner Mercantile Co., and some months their bills amount to $15,000 or $20,000. This little Mormon community is rich, and as some one said "are the only Mormons outside of Salt Lake City who have money." They are sheep men and the tithing paid into the Mormon church by one last year was $2500, by another $1800 and another $1500, which means their income is ten times that amount. By strict attention to business John Baner, before he died, a little over a year, ago accumulated a fortune of $250,000—some say twice that amount—and owned much real estate, including two large business blocks, the city water works and a bank.

Another man, Ed Newland, has had a remarkable history. He began as a freighter for Baner, left that business and started a Navajo Indian trading post in Utah, near Bluff City, buying goods from John Bauer. From here he moved to Navajo Springs and traded with the Ute Indians. The Utes received their money issue annually from the government, so Mr. Newland had to carry them an entire year; when pay day came they received their money at one window and handed it to Mr. Newland at another, and it is said he used to take in more money than he could lift and that he carried this annual payment to the Mancos bank in a seamless grain sack. He traded honestly with the Indians and they to a man love and respect him.

After your tour of inspection of the town and while a member of the party is securing the proper permits from the Park superintendent, Mayor Hans M. Randolph,—for you have to have a permit for each member of your party and for your cameras,—you will enjoy the hotel piazza and the rather loquacious hotel clerk, who, before he became a little too stiff and heavy for the strenuous life of a guide, used to escort many visitors to the Cliff Dwellings. He is familiar with the ruins of the Park, having taken parties there long before the government, in June of 1906, set aside that tract of land for a National Park.

Many are the amusing incidents he relates of the timid and inexperienced, scaling almost impossible cliffs and precipitous canyons. When one of his interested listeners began to express doubts as to her ability to perform such acrobatic feats he smilingly remarked, "Oh, you can do it all right; why I took a Mr. and Mrs. Fuller through the ruins 10 years ago and she weighed at least 180 pounds and must have been 65 years old." You can imagine the comfort and courage derived from hearing of this brave traveler, for upon taking account of qualifications, no one in our party could claim either the avoirdupois or age of this successful climber.

The morning of the 18th of June dawned clear and cool, having that crispness in the air found only at high altitudes. At 8 the guide with his horses and wagon-load of impediments for a three-days' trip, and our own horses and carriage arrived and we left the hotel with the good wishes of our friend the clerk for a successful trip. We were full of anticipation of this visit to a collection of ruins whose age is unknown and whose builders puzzle the archaeologists and whose location, in the canyons of the almost inaccessible mesa, make a visit to them one long to be remembered and full of interest. For three of the 15-mile drive we passed well cultivated ranches, alfalfa fields about ready to bloom and rye and wheat standing eight to ten inches high. After leaving the ranch district we traveled through the cedars, sand and sage brush for 12 miles. The sun waxed ardent in his attentions and the road was dusty, and we became almost skeptical when assured that the ranches which had excited our admiration were such deserts of sand and sage before the irrigating ditches worked their transforming magic.

At 11 we reached the half-way camp used by the guides. It is situated at the base of the mesa which rises abruptly nearly 2000 feet from the valley. Here the horses were unhitched from the vehicles, and after a feed of oats, saddled, ready for the horseback ride of over 10 miles. Our own lunch was enjoyed under the shade of the cedar trees, and full justice done to the canteens of water which we had brought from Mancos, for there is no water for man or beast after leaving the ranch district until we reach the ruins, a distance of 22 miles.

The entrance to the Park can be made only by means of an Indian trail which is so steep that one is in constant dread of sliding off the haunches of the horse, despite a firm hold upon the pommel. The trail twists and doubles upon itself as you make this 2000 feet rise until you almost dispair of reaching the top and you scarcely dare look back over the way you have come. It took us about an hour to make this climb, for the horses had often to stop for a little breathing spell. When the mesa was reached the view in all directions was wonderful, with valleys and mountains stretching into the hazy distance.

The area of the Park is 65 5 square miles, and the altitude 2000 feet above Montezuma Valley, the southern rim of which follows the park boundary line on the north for miles. The altitude of the park above sea level is 8700 feet. The government has also provided that the prehistoric ruins situated within five miles of the boundary of the park shall be under the custodianship of the park commissioners. This five miles strip has an area of 274 square miles. The Rio Mancos runs through the park and this five-mile strip, from northeast to southwest, forming a canyon 1000 to 2000 feet deep. On both sides of this gorge narrow tributary canyons indent the mesa, forming a succession of gigantic promontories and precipitous cliffs. Cliff dwellings are found in the almost inaccessible caves of Navajo, Cliff, Moccasin and Ute Canyons, which are upon the west side of the Mancos, while in the canyons to the east of the Mancos are dwellings less pretentious and picturesque.

Just at the summit of the cliff we had our first experience with a rattlesnake. The guide was leading the way, followed by the others single file. He stopped his horse and pointed to something at its feet. After his majesty had crossed the trail he coiled himself and allowed us to pass by and enjoy a mutual inspection. Had we been after game and armed with other weapons than cameras we might have brought his rattles home for a souvenir.

The horseback ride of 10 miles on the mesa is full of interest, though it becomes a little tedious to those unaccustomed to the saddle. The flowers along the trail are brilliant and luxuriant. The lupine, a common New England flower, grows to such a height and blossoms so profusely that one at first scarcely recognizes it. Upon either side, the trail is bordered with cedar trees, many of them gnarled and bent and indicating great age. Along the way our guide pointed out an old reservoir site which was quite likely constructed centuries ago for the purpose of conserving the water from the rain and snow.

The camp was reached at 3 p. m., and very attractive this small colony of tents looked among the cedars at the head of Navajo canyon. Across the draw is an old log house which, until two years ago, served as the place for camping. It adds picturesqueness to the scene and could tell many an interesting tale of those whom it has sheltered, for until the government set this section apart as a park, cowherders, relic seekers and schaeological students visited the mesa and committed any depredations they chose upon the cliff dwellings. These relic-hunters were not content with gathering the specimens of pottery, etc., but used dynamite to throw down walls and open up floors in order that they might find hidden treasures and the more quickly obtain their plunder. It is said that two brothers, the Wetherells, carried out and sold $15,000 worth of pottery and other relics.

It is difficult to describe the first impressions made by the sight of the Spruce Tree House. While the guide was caring for the horses we walked along the rim of the canyon to the log house and from there caught our first glimpse of those strange dwellings which mark the abode of an unknown people. Standing on the edge of the opposite side of the canyon, the house or collection of rooms looks like a mere plaything tucked into a large cave 200 feet below the brink and almost as great a distance above the bottom of the cliff. The Sabbath-like stillness is broken only by the occasional note of a bird or the snapping of a twig under the horses' feet far down the canyon. You cannot picture this strange dwelling full of the life and activity, and imagination refuses to populate a place so unlike any human habitation.

Let us take the trail leading from the old log house down the side of the canyon, noting upon the way the foot holes cut in the rock which were used by the aborigines rather than the more circuitous path we are taking. Under the overhanging rocks at the head of the canyon, where no ray of sun ever reaches it, is a spring which must have been the source of the water supply for the dwellers of that vicinity. It is certain you will agree that it is the coldest and clearest spring water you have ever had. During the summer of 1908 Dr. J. Walter Fewkes of the Smithsonian Institute excavated and restored this house under the direction of the Department of the Interior. He selected this ruin for the first restorative work because it is nearest the point where travelers camp and more especially because it is a typical house. It is 216 feet long and extends into the cave 89 feet. There are 114 rooms and eight kivas or ceremonial chambers. The house was in some places three stories high, the third story rooms having the roof of the cave for their ceiling. Several rooms which are now only two stories high formerly had a third story above the second, but their walls have fallen, leaving as the only indication of their former union with the cave lines destitute of soot on the top of the cavern. Of the 114 rooms at least 14 were uninhabited, being used as storage and mortuary chambers.

Dr. Fewkes, who is one of the best authorities upon the cliff dwellings and their inhabitants, has studied extensively the various Indian tribes of Arizona, New Mexico and California, and finds that the houses of the Hopi Indians present many marked points of resemblance to those found upon Mesa Verde. He estimates that these 100 rooms had an average of four persons to a room, so that the population of the Spruce Tree House was between 350 and 400, or about 100 persons more than that of Walpi, one of the best known Hopi pueblos.

A plaza extends the front of the cave the length of the house. When Dr. Fewkes began his restorative work the front retaining wall had been broken away; he has rebuilt it to the height of three feet, but estimates that it was originally breast high and served as a means of defense. As the warm afternoon sun rested upon this broad expanse of masonry, one easily accepted the theory that the inhabitants were an out-of-door people and that here were held the councils, the dances and the games.

BURIED IN SEWER DITCH.

Two Men Have Narrow Escape From Death Tuesday.

EARTH A FOOT ABOVE ONE'S HEAD.

Other Covered to Eyes. Only Prompt Action Saved Either. One is Badly Hurt.

Calvin W. Johnson of Palmer and John Kennedy of Boudsville were buried Tuesday afternoon by a sewer on which they were working on North Main street, and the former was seriously injured; three ribs and a shoulder-blade were broken, one lung was punctured or lacerated. He was reported this morning as resting comfortably and hopes are entertained of his complete recovery, although his condition is serious. Kennedy is lame and sore from his squeezing in the ditch, but no bones were broken and he will be all right again in a short time.

The accident occurred about 4 o'clock in the afternoon at a point almost opposite the "Dr. Holbrook" house just west of the Points of Rocks. Mr. Johnson was the contractor who had the job of installing the new sewer in that section, and with Kennedy was at work laying the pipe. The ditch was about eight feet deep and was not braced in any way. The men were in the act of receiving a length of pipe when without the slightest warning the bank on the north side, next the track of the street railway, gave way and they were caught beneath the sand and gravel. Mr. Johnson was buried out of sight, the earth being a foot over his head; Kennedy was covered to his eyes.

Peter Ditto happened to be passing the scene just at that time and was attracted by the cries of the other men at work on the job. He hastened to the spot and found Kennedy's head just showing; he managed to scratch the earth away from his nose and mouth so that he could breath, and went in search of shovels, none of which happened to be near that particular part of the work. These secured, he went to work with Warren Trumble, another employe on the job, to uncover Mr. Johnson, whom Trumble had located. Mr. Ditto soon came to his head and uncovered that and his face; it was black and both men thought he was dead. Signs of life were seen however, and after removing as much of the earth about the chest as possible, so as to give him a chance to breathe, work was pushed on getting both men out of the clutches of the soil. It was a long job however, and nearly an hour elapsed before they were taken out. Peculiarly, every physician in the village was away from home, but Dr. Everett Flood of the epileptic hospital, who was on a passing electric car, volunteered his services, and Mr. Johnson was taken to his home on Thorndike street on the work car of the electric road. There Dr. Harry C. Cheney of Palmer and Dr. Kennedy of the epileptic hospital took charge of the case. Mr. Johnson was unconscious and remained so until the next morning. In the evening it was deemed wisest to remove him elsewhere, and the ambulance took him to the Springfield hospital. Kennedy was taken to his home in Bondsville.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which will be at Court Square Theatre in Springfield all next week, beginning Tuesday evening, as dramatized by Charlotte Thompson and Kate Douglas Wiggin from Mrs. Wiggin's famous stories of the same name, bids fair to prove the big dramatic surprise of the year. The play combines many elements of popular appeal and should be equally interesting to young and old.

The scene of the story laid in quaint New England offers opportunities for elaborate stage embellishment and the introduction of many peculiar characters, but of course the important figure is that of "Rebecca," whose fortunes are followed from childhood to maidenhood. We are introduced to "Rebecca" at the moment when she leaves behind her the first stage of her childhood passed in the barren New England farm which her budding romanticism has entitled "Sunnybrook," to enter upon a larger sphere of life at Riverboro under the care of two maiden aunts. Her impetuosity and daring, her headlong pursuit of impulse, whether humorous or earnest, the turbulence and unexpectedness of her fancy in dealing with the life within and about her, throw her into appalling collisions with the rigid discipline of the "brick house" and make her stay there a history of amusing catastrophes.

The character as portrayed by Kate Douglas Wiggin is one of the most fascinating in fiction, and that Charlotte Thompson, who has collaborated with Mrs. Wiggin in the dramatic version, has caught the spirit and the mysticism of the story is evidenced by the wonderful gripping power of the play. It is doubtful if there has been a play that combined so many elements of popular appeal.

The production has been made in the Klaw and Erlanger lavish manner. No expense has been spared in any department, and the company is one of the best ever assembled by this firm which is famous for the careful casting of its plays.

STRIKE ONE—OUT!

Boston and Albany Employes Ask More Pay But Fail to Get It.

About 60 employes of the Boston and Albany railroad, members of the "work gang" having headquarters in Palmer, struck for higher wages Monday morning. The men were receiving $1.50 a day, and claimed that men doing the same work elsewhere were getting $1.60, which they demanded. The foreman declined to raise their pay, and they quit. A search for others was made at once, with the result that the places of the strikers were filled a once and the work proceeded the next morning as though nothing had happened.

WEST WARREN.

Tyzowna—Misiasch.

Miss Mary Tyzowna and John Misiesch, both of West Warren, were married in St. Thomas's church Tuesday morning at 8.30 by Rev. Philias Trottier. The couple were attended by Miss Zophie Garcorka and Makie Misiasek. The bride wore a one-piece gown of white silk with a veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of carnations. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride on South-street extension, after which the company adjourned to the new hall, where dancing was enjoyed. The couple will live in West Warren, where both are employed in the Warren cotton mills.

The seven-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Graveline of Chapel street is ill with scarlet fever and the house has been quarantined.

PALMER NEWS.

Death of James B. Shaw.

James Bayard Shaw, 72, died at his home on Windsor street in Springfield about 5 o'clock last Friday afternoon, the result of a general breakdown. He had not been well for some time, and had been confined to his bed for ten days.

Mr. Shaw was born July 25, 1837, in Hartford, Ct., the son of Sylvanus and Mary B. Shaw. He came to Palmer when about eight years of age and attended the public schools of this town. After engaging for a time in business with his father in the old McGilvray block on South Main street, when that was the business center of the town, he started business for himself in 1865 in a store in the Feeney property on Main street, where he continued until his removal to Springfield about seven years ago.

In 1865—January 4—he married Mary A. Hubbard of Lowell, who survives him, with four children, Effie G., at home, Anna T., a teacher in the kindergarten department of the Chestnut street school in Springfield, J. Harold with the C. B. Lewis Company of Springfield, and Albert D., with the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company at Springfield. Mr. Shaw was for 35 years town clerk and treasurer of the town of Palmer. He was a Republican in politics, and represented the town in the Legislature in 1873. He was special justice of the district court in 1879, and was also president of the Palmer National Bank and of the Palmer Savings Bank. He was a member of Thomas lodge, Hampden chapter, Washington council and Springfield commandery of Masons. For many years he was also connected with the Congregational church, serving it in various capacities.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from his home, and was conducted by Rev. Louis F. Giroux of the American International College, and was attended by many friends from Palmer. Burial was in Springfield.

Church Dedication Next Week.

The new church of the Baptist society on Thorndike street will be dedicated next week. The service of dedication will be Tuesday evening at 7.30, with addresses by Rev. F. W. Padelford and Rev. E. B. Dolan; Wednesday at 6 p. m. will be held a home gathering, social and praise service; Thursday there will be a church meeting; Friday the building will be dedicated to denominational interests, with addresses by Rev. B. D. Hahn D. D. of Springfield and Rev. W. W. Weeks; Sunday will be rally day, with prayer meeting at 10.15 a. m., sermon at 10.45, Sunday school at 12, men's rally at 3 p. m., Christian Endeavor rally at 6 in the evening and praise service at 7.

Man Scalded at Wire Mill.

A. B. Southworth of Worcester, superintendent of the Wright Wire Company's mill, was badly scalded by hot water at the mill Wednesday noon. Mr. Southworth was in the basement turning on the water, when a connection broke and after being deluged with cold water both legs above the knees were scalded by the steam and hot water which followed; one arm was also badly burned. He was given medical attention and was able to go to his home in Worcester in the afternoon.

Miss Sara Haley of Brimfield visited relatives in town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Holden spent Sunday with friends in Southbridge.

Mrs. J. J. Todd of Pine street is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Sloan in Worcester.

Henry Ballou of Worcester spent Sunday with Harrie M. Howe of Pine street.

Rev. C. C. Conner of Springfield is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. E C. Gould.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hinchey of State avenue are spending a week in New York.

The Major Morgan Veteran Firemen are planning for a Thanksgiving dance on the evening of the 24th.

Rev. E. L. M. Barnes of South Royalton, Vt., has been the guest of his uncle, C. W. Bennett of Park street.

Charles B. Doherty, a conductor on the electric road, is sick with typhoid fever at his home on Park street.

J. E. Duffy and A. J. Hackett of Cambridge spent Sunday with Frank Duffy and family on South Main street.

Carl Linnehan, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia at his home on Fox street, is slowing improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Dunn of Central street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter yesterday.

Miss M. Louise Shaw, teacher in the high school, has been out a part of the week on account of severe illness.

Howard E. Dwyer of Springfield was the guest of his cousin, Raymond L. Wilder of Pine street the latter part of last week.

A baked-bean supper will be served in the Universalist church next Tuesday evening at 6 30 by the Ladies' Social Union.

Dr. William McBride of Athol has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McBride of Converse avenue, a part of the week.

The meeting of the Entre Nous Whist Club next Monday evening will be held with Mrs. Minnie Converse on Central street.

St. Mary's Episcopal mission will hold a fair in Masonic Hall next Thursday, with a sale in the afternoon and a fair and sale in the evening.

The women of the Baptist church are holding a rummage sale in the second floor of Eager's block, which will continue through to-morrow.

Mr. and Mrs. John Norwood of York Harbor, Me., have been spending a part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Converse of Walnut street.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs O C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

The W. C. T. U. held a meeting Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. L. A. Hitchcock on Squier street. The gathering was addressed by Mrs. M. L. Knell of Westfield, county president.

Rev. F. W. Gibbs gave an interesting talk last evening at the union meeting in St. Paul's vestry along the lines of his address at the National Universalist convention at Detroit, Mich., recently.

Mrs. J. W. Fairing and daughter are guests of friends in town. Dr. Fairing was formerly a practicing physician in Palmer, but is now in New York, where his family will join him to-morrow.

Miss Helen Jenkins of Atlanta, Ga., has been the guest a part of the week at the home of L. H. Gager of Foster street. Her father, Rev. F. E. Jenkins, was a former pastor of the Congregational church.

Miss Elizabeth Holden, a nurse in the Boston City Hospital, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Holden, on State avenue. Miss Holden has just recovered from an attack of diphtheria.

Rev. Cyrus W. Stimson of Waterville, Me., visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H W. Stimson of Palmer Center, the first of the week, on his way to Stratford, Ct., to attend a reunion of a former parish.

The Woman's Tuesday Club will meet next Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. C. K. Gamwell on Foster street. It will be "Reciprocity Day," and Mrs. Chapin of the Southbridge club will be present and read a paper.

The annual fair of St. Paul's church will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, December 7 and 8. The first evening there will be a turkey supper, and Wednesday evening there will be an entertainment, in addition to the sale of fancy articles.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Bradway and daughter Doris, with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lathrop, all of Willimantic, Ct., were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. L. E Chandler of North Main street. The trip was made in Mr. Lathrop's automobile.

At the meeting of the Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church Sunday evening these officers were elected: President, Miss Grace Thompson; vice president, Miss Florence Goodes; secretary, Miss Daisy Richards; treasurer, Miss Ethel Doherty.

Two peddlers—Hyman Pomorantz and Herman Boardman—of Springfield were arraigned in the district court Monday for failing to have their names, the unmber of their licenses and their addresses marked on their packs. They were fined $10 each.

While bringing in a basket of wood at her home Tuesday, Mrs. Michael Grady caught her foot and fell, breaking both bones of her right arm. She was attended by Dr. Cheney. The other arm was broken in a similar manner about a year ago.

The Palmer Woman's Club will hold a musical afternoon next Friday with Mrs. A. W. Holbrook on North Main street, in charge of Mrs. Theodore Norman and Mrs. Frank S. Keith. There will be a Schumann-Schubert program, and Miss Frieda Rand of Monson will be the soloist.

Regular services of the Baptist church in the Advent chapel next Sunday as follows: Morning prayer meeting at 10 15, worship and sermon on "Why do you believe?" at 10 45, Bible school at 12, Y. P. S. C. E. at 6, evening praise service at 7; subject of sermon, "A command disobeyed." All are welcome.

W. F. Fillmore, manager of the opera house for the Odd Fellows Hall Association, was found guilty in the district court Monday of maintaining a place of public assemblage and resort without the necessary permit, and was fined $35. The complaint was in reference to the lodge room on the third floor, which is let for dances, etc.

The work of paving the south side of Main street was begun Monday morning. There had been a report that the work would stop for this year at Bridge street but this is denied both by the selectmen and the engineer, W. H. Brainerd. They state that the only thing which will prevent the completion of the entire job is unusually inclement weather.

The improvements which have been in progress in the Four Corners cemetery have been completed for this season. The last addition to the plot has been graded and sown, and the roads have been graded with ashes, which give not only a good surface, but are a safeguard against the numerous fires which run over the area during the cold weather, when the grass is dry.

The pictures at the Elite to-night and to-morrow will be: "Legend of Sterling Keep," "Visions of Mother," "A Bad Case," "The Mexican Sweethearts," "The Peach Basket Hat." The songs, "Dancing Sunshine," by Miss Lillian E. Dwyer; "Come Right in, Sit Right Down, Make Yourself At Home," Albert Gould. Miss Dwyer will continue to sing at the Elite next week.

The services of the Congregational church will be held in St. Paul's building as usual. Sunday school meets at 2 o'clock, church service at 3 15. In place of the usual sermon by the pastor an address will be given by one of the men attending the Springfield Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association. He will speak on "Men's Work for Men." Christian Endeavor at 7 o'clock.

The opera house has been offering special attractions in the way of free admissions this week to certain persons, the conditions changing each evening. On Monday, the 22d, two big turkeys will be given free to the women guessing nearest the total attendance of the two weeks preceding. The special attraction the first of the week, outside the pictures and songs, was Jimmy Murray, the tramp juggler. Last evening the feature was Col. Buffalo Jones, for 10 years guide to Roosevelt, and his novelty picture act. This includes a full reel of pictures of wild animals and scenes in the West, combined with a lecture by Col. Jones. The act will be there this evening and at both performances to-morrow.

WARE.

Rev. J. A. Riordan Transferred to Dalton.

Rev. J. A. Riordan announced at the high mass in All Saints' church Sunday morning that he was to leave Ware this week for Dalton, where he will be curate in the Catholic church of which Rev. D. F. Cronin is the parish priest. The members of the congregation will deeply regret his departure, as well as other people of the town, for the young clergyman has made friends of all during his stay in town. Fr. Riordan is a native of Worcester, where he received his education After graduating from the high school he attended Holy Cross college and after completing his course in that institution he fitted for his life work in Grand Seminary Montreal, P. Q He was located for 4½ years in Bangor, Me., and went from that city to Ware in 1902 He has been curate of All Saints' church for over seven years, serving a year and a half under the late Rev. J. J. Fallon, and since his death for six years under Rev. J. H. Murphy.

Members of All Saints' parish met in the vestry Tuesday evening and presented Fr. Riordan with a generous purse. John J. Kidgell, who with Owen McArdle and Dr. D. M. Ryan, formed a committee in charge of the meeting, presented the money, amounting to over $600 in all; $450 was given by the parish, $100 by the women's auxiliary of Hibernians and small amounts by the choir, children of St. Mary and by the members of the parish in Enfield. The money was collected in 24 hours and attests the high regard in which Fr. Riordan is held by the members of All Saints' church. He responded, expressing his appreciation of the gift and also his regret at departing for his new field of labors in Dalton, where he went Wednesday.

Death of Marshall N. Richards.

Marshall N. Richards, 68, a well known farmer in Ware, died Monday morning about 4 after being ill for a long time. Mr. Richards was a native of Greenwich, where he spent his boyhood, going from there to Ware, where he enlisted in 1861. He been in camp but a month, when he was discharged at the request of his father as he was still a minor. The next year he enlisted again, taking part in many of the large battles, and serving until the end of war. He married Louisa R. Munroe of the Hardwick January 29, 1869, and lived in that town for several years. Later he lived in Springfield for a time and his first wife was buried there. About 20 years ago Mr. Richards bought the Bassett farm on the hill road from Ware to Gilhertville, and had carried it on successfully since. By his first wife he leaves three children, a son, James, of Springfield, and two daughters, Mrs. Byron Barnes and Mrs. Lucius Field, both of Millbury. Mr. Richards married Mrs. Rose Gilbert Mach in Greenwich January 25, 1898, and she survives him with two sons, John, 10 and Louis, five. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. A. L. Shumway of Holyoke, and Mrs. James L. Richards of Enfield, who are the last of the family. The funeral was held Wednesday noon and burial was in Springfield.

Death of Henry Madigan.

Henry C. Madigan, the 16-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Madigan, died at his home on West street Monday evening about 8 from heart trouble. He had been ill six weeks, but had been in poor health for several years. Besides his parents, he leaves seven brothers, Thomas, Michael, James, Francis, William, Edward and Albert, and two sisters, Margaret and Mary, all of Ware. The funeral was held in All Saints' church Wednesday morning at 9, Rev. J. A. Riordan officiating at the requiem high mass. The services were largely attended Several of the grade schools were closed for an hour, to allow the teachers to attend, and the sophomore class of the high school, with N. R. Smith, principal, also went to the church. Henry Madigan was a member of this class. The bearers, Francis Barry, Frank Wheeler, Harrison Langdon, Henry Jordan, Wilbrod Dubois and Carl Walker, were classmates.

Jeffries—Collard.

Miss Beatrice Eliza, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jeffries, and James Roma Collard of Springfield were married Monday afternoon at 3 30 at the bride's home on Church street. Rev. G. H. Hatch performed the ceremony, the single ring service being used. The bride wore a traveling suit of green, with the hat to match. Her brother, Lester B. Jeffries, played the Lohengrin wedding march when the bride and groom descended from the upper hall, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Collard of Springfield. Only immediate relatives were present, because of the recent death of the groom's mother. William Rohan catered. After a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Saginaw, Mich., the couple will make their home in Springfield temporarily.

Hotel Changes Hands.

Albert M. Malhoenf, the well-known tailor, closed a deal Saturday for the Commercial Hotel on Parker street and took possession at once. Mr. Malhoeuf will continue his tailoring business. W. H. Lannier, the former proprietor of the Commercial hotel, will not engage in any other business at present on account of ill health, but will remain in Ware for the present.

Rev. R. D. Sawyer Accepts Call.

Rev. Roland D Sawyer, pastor of Ward Hill Congregational church at Haverhill, has accepted the call to the First Congregational church in Ware, and will begin work here the first Sunday in December. Mr. Sawyer is 35 years old and has held pastorates in Brockton, Hanson and Haverhill.

Deehan—Nelligan.

Walter Nelligan, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J Nelligan of West Main street, and Miss Louise Deehan of Bath, Me., were married in that city last week Wednesday. They took a trip through the state of Maine, and then went to New Canaan, Ct., for the winter, where the groom will engage in business with his brother William.

John Nelligan has purchased the soda bottling business on Bank street of William Lawton of Palmer and will carry on the business. He will continue his interest in the concreting work done by P. J. Nelligan & Co.

Albert Anair and Miss Milenda Gravel, both of Ware, were married in Mt. Carmel church Monday morning at 6 30, and Gernand G Gareau and Miss Emma Porier, both of Ware, were also married in that church at 7 30, Rev. J. T. Sheenan officiating at both ceremonies.

The annual meeting of Eden lodge of Masons was held Monday evening, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Worshipful master, Dr. Guy A. Cummings; senior warden, David Woolley; junior warden, Waldo C. Lincoln; treasurer, Herbert W. Sibley; secretary, John H. Schoonmaker.

W. H. Weiss, principal of the Ware high school for five years, and more recently a teacher in Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania, is now in the office of the Pittsburg-Buffalo Company, a large business house in Pittsburg dealing in coal, coke and other products. He attended summer school at Harvard in July and August, and before going to Pittsburg had been substituting in the high school at Chelsea.

The funeral of Mrs Hannah S Hayden, 88, who died last week Wednesday night at her home on Elm street, was held Saturday afternoon at 2, Rev. Arthur Chase officiating. The bearers were E. W. Lawton, Judge H. C. Davis, J. H. Schoonmaker and G. W. Dunham. Among those who attended was a stepson, W. Henry Hayden of New York, who with his sister, Miss Harriet Hayden of New York, and his half brother, Arthur L. Hayden of Ware, are the only children surviving. Mrs Hayden also leaves one sister, Mrs. Eleanor Brainerd of Ware, who is now the last of a large family.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Adaline Wheeler, daughter of Rev. Charles Wheeler of Brockton, visited her cousin, Mrs. C. S. Tarbell, over Sunday. Miss Wheeler is a teacher in Granville.

About 50 friends and neighbors called Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Martha Streeter to honor the 80th birthday of her aunt, Mrs. H. N. Griggs. Mrs. Griggs received many tokens of remembrance.

Mrs. Elvira M. Blackmer, 74, died at her home in Springfield yesterday after being in failing health for two years. Mrs. Blackmer was born in Brimfield in 1835. In 1856 she married William L. Blackmer of Brookfield. She later lived in Chicopee and for the past 19 years had made her home in Springfield. She leaves one daughter, Miss Nellie E. Blackmer of Springfield.

Miss Helen C. Jenkins, associate principal of Thorsby Institute in Thorsby, Ala., gave a talk in the interests of that school in the Congregational church Sunday morning Miss Jenkins spoke in an interesting manner concerning the need of educational facilities in the section and the work that is being undertaken. The speaker is the daughter of Rev. F. E. Jenkins, formerly a pastor of the Congregational church in Palmer, who is now at the head of the home missionary work in Alabama.

Helpful Hints on Hair Health

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat-band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, Palmer.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Col. Buffalo Jones, for 10 years guide to Roosevelt, and his novelty picture act at Palmer Opera House to-night and to-morrow, are classed with the best and seldom seen in the East.

Pictures for the Holidays.

The holiday rush has commenced at A. N. Gaouette's studio. From all appearances there will be a large demand for portraits during the next three months, to use as gifts. Owing to the fact that pictures have become a proper and most pleasing article both to give and receive, it has been impossible many times in the past to wait on all who desired work done at my studio. For this reason I desire to inform all those intending to have work done that it is important to come early or at once, as we take extra pains to send out good and satisfactory work.

HOUSE RANSACKED.

Leslie Moulton's House Entered, But Nothing of Value Missing.

The home of Leslie Moulton near State Line was entered and ransacked by a man giving his uame as Fred Weeks, about 3 o'clock Weduesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Moulton were in Monson visiting their daughter, and left the house locked. A neighbor of the Moultons happened to be passing by and went to the house; a strange man came to the door and then said that he was going to take a freight for Palmer and started in the direction of the railroad. Word was sent to Mr. Moulton, who returned as soon as possible and found the intruder, who had returned. He made his escape and has not since been seen. The house had been ransasked, but as far as could be learned nothing had been taken. There was considerable jewelry which he must have overlooked or did not want. It is supposed that he was after money as no other motive for the bold act can be given.

Formerly Lived in Monson.

Mrs. Patrick Lyons, 38 years old, died at her home, 134 Armory street, Springfield, Sunday evening after an illness of three years. Mrs. Lyons was formerly Miss Anna Cooney of this town, and had spent the greater part of her life here. She went to Springfield 13 years ago, where she had since lived. She was prominent in church work at St. Michael's cathedral in Springfield. She leaves many friends, both in this town and in Springfield. Besides her husband she leaves two children, Paul, 12, and Helen, 11. The funeral was held Wednesday morning, a high mass of requiem being celebrated at the cathedral; the body was brought by trolley to Monson and burial was in the Pearl street cemetery.

Death of Patrick Nagle.

Patrick Nagle, 65, died at his home on the Palmer road near the Flynt quarry Wednesday morning after a long illness of a complication of diseases. Mr. Nagle was born in Ireland, but came to this country when he was but 15 years of age. He spent most of his life in Monson, having worked for the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. for the past 30 year. He leaves a widow and four children, John, William and Mamie of this town, and James of Waterville, Maine. The funeral was held from his late home this morning at 9 o'clock. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at Saint Patrick's church at 9.30 by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe. Burial was in the Pearl street cemetery.

Engine and Car Derailed.

The switcher of the Central Vermont railroad was derailed last Friday afternoon on the quarry road, the engine and one car loaded with granite leaving the track near the rock-house. Fortunately no one was injured. A broken rail was found to be the cause of the wreck. The wrecker arrived Friday evening and succeeded in getting the engine and car back on the track that night and the whole track has been repaired.

Surprise Visit.

Miss Maude Rees was pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening at her home on Main street by about 25 of her friends including many of her classmates of the senior class of the Academy and members of the Methodist church choir of which she is a member. The occasion was the presenting of an upright piano to Miss Rees by her parents. Music and games were played, after which refreshments were served.

Smoked in Bed—Badly Burned.

Merriman Noble of this town was seriously burned at Stafford, Ct., Tuesday night. He was smoking in bed and fell asleep, waking to find the bed clothes on fire. He came to Monson and was attended by Dr. C. W. Jackson, who found the burns to be of a serious natnre. It will be some time before he will be able to return to work.

Fire Alarm But Little Fire.

An alarm from box 25 in front of Flynt's store called ont the fire department last Saturday morning about 11.30. The fire was in the chimney of a house on North Main street owned by G. C. Flynt and occupied by Michael Connors. The fire was easily extinguished by the department and the loss was very small.

Academy Notes.

Kerigan seems to stand in well with the girls.

Harold Harding of Revere has entered the class of 1913.

The Y. M. C. A. held a meeting at Cushman Hall Tuesday evening. More of the town students are invited to attend the meetings of this society.

Ralph Entwistle, '10, right end of the football team, who dislocated his hip in the game with Southbridge last Saturday, is improving, and will be able to return to school in a few days.

The sophomores gave the freshmen a social in the chapel last Friday evening. A good time was enjoyed by all. President Francis of the freshmen, by request, rendered an eloquent and interesting speech.

The first division of the freshmen rhetoricals spoke Wednesday morning. The following took part: Bates, Young, Miss Helen Beckwith, Fay, A. Cushman, Miss Leonard, McCray, Kirve, Miss Ellis, Francis.

The Academy team defeated the strong Southbridge high school team at Southbridge last Saturday. The Monson team had an entirely different lineup than they used against the Springfield team the week before; Kerigan was moved from half-back to full-back and he ripped up the heavy Southbridge line for large gains, making the three touchdowns for Monson and kicking both goals. Harding, a new man, played at quarter back, and much credit is given him for his brilliant work in that position. Encouraged by their showing at Southbridge, a large squad has been out for practice this week and expect to get revenge at Springfield to-day, where they play the International college in that city.

PALMER CENTER.

F. A. Smith of Brookfield spent Sunday with L. S Bowen.

The Improvement Society met Thursday afternoon with Mrs E. K. Ogle.

BELCHERTOWN.

Miss Mary Richardson, formerly of Belchertown, is visiting friends in town, previous to making a change in her home from New Rochelle, N. Y., to Waltham.

A. A. Ladd, 58, died at his home in the Turkey hill district Sunday morning at 4. Mr. Ladd had been ill for some time with lung tronble. Besides his widow, there are no relatives in town, as Mr. Ladd came from Maine as a workman for the R. H. Long shoe company. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon, Rev. M. H. Fishburn officiating.

HAMPDEN.

The women of the Congregational church have appointed the following committees for the annual supper Nov. 17: Soliciting, Mrs. Lucius Burleigh, Mrs. Warren, Miss Grace Pease; tables, Mrs. Kenworthy, Mrs. Ernest Howlett; reception, Mrs. Delia Ballard, Miss Esther Burleigh, Miss Turner; receiving food, Miss Phebe Beebe; Mrs. Coash, Mrs. Gulley; serving, Mrs. Warren, Miss Bliss, Mrs. C. I. Burleigh, Mrs. John Isham; coffee, Mrs. Albert Ballard.

Monuments to Wellington.

Has any British national hero more monuments to his fame in London than Wellington? There is the Achilles statue by Westmascott in Hyde park, cast from cannons taken at Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse and Waterloo, at a cost of £10,000, defrayed by "the women of England." The equestrian statue by Boehm at Hyde park corner is the second equestrian statue erected in that locality. The former one, by Wyatt, costing some £36,000, was removed to Aldershot when the arch which it crowned was moved. Then there is the colossal equestrian statue by Chantrey at the west front of the Royal Exchange, the monument by Bell in the Guildhall, the monument by Stevens in St. Paul's, which was over twenty years in hand, and a stone statue by Milnes, erected in the Tower of London near the Waterloo barracks.—London Chronicle.

"I called in," said the puffy little man, "to say that your story about the fire next door to me yesterday was all wrong."

"All wrong?" asked the editor.

"Yes, sir. Why, hang it, I spell my name with two s's, and I make soap, not shoe blacking."

THE DEACONS' SITES.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

When it had been finally decided to erect a church building for a certain sect at Charlestown here came the question of the site. It was a scattered village, and there were many old people that wanted the building as close to them as possible. There were others that thought the site that would show off the church to the greatest advantage and that at the same time could be bought the cheapest, was the one to be selected. It wasn't to be anything grand, but if located right it would make up for that in a measure It took six months to settle the question of the site. One faction wanted it on the crest of a hill and the other at the end of the bridge over the river Deacon Henderson owned one site and Deacon Frazer the other, and each wanted $200 for the land Each became the leader of a faction.

At first all the talk was in a good natured way, as becomes such a subject, but as time went on acrimony crept in and argument became dispute. The pastor was anxious to see the building under way, but he could not favor either faction. I'e could simply counsel brotherly love, and when brotherly love is stretched too far it gets pretty thin and weak. Deacon Henderson, who owned the hill site, went about saying:

"You can put a cooper shop most anywhere, but when it comes to a meeting house there's only one place for it, and that's on a hill. If there are any hills around. I most think that's what the Lord created hills for."

"Oh, Deacon Henderson may talk that way," Deacon Frazer would reply, "but he's all wrong. You put a meeting house on a hill and you make a circus of it."

The dispute finally resulted in the hilltop being offered at half price, and the congregation accepted the offer. The minister went to bed that night with thankful heart, and a great sigh of relief passed over the town. Everything seemed to be settled at last, and men began preparing the foundations of the building. But there are wheels within wheels. Deacon Frazer had been defeated on the site, but he had a shot in reserve. When the frame of the building was up and roofed over he brought out statistics to show that nine-tenths of the church buildings struck by lightning were buildings standing on hills. There was every chance that this one would be struck. He wanted it understood that he would never enter it of a Sunday when there seemed the slightest chance of a thunderstorm. His faction followed him in his argument, and there was another wrangle on hand. If his site had been chosen there was a big walnut tree that would have deflected and received any thunderbolt on its way to destroy the church.

"Yes, we know that a building on a hill is more exposed to lightning than a building in a hollow," Deacon Henderson would reply, "but we are going to prepare for that. We shall put up a lightning rod. It'll catch all the thunderbolts that come along and run 'em into the ground. We don't care how much ground they tear up, so's they let the church alone."

It was the era when men plumed their faith to lightning rods and defied old Jove to do his worst. It was settled that a rod on the church would do the business, and now all disputes seemed to be ended. The truce lasted just four weeks. The building was more than half finished when Deacon Frazer came to the front to stir up things again. He had given the matter of that lightning rod much thought, and he had come to the conclusion that it was flying in the face of Providence to put one up. It was saying to the Lord that they couldn't trust him.

Deacon Henderson was hard put to answer these arguments. They were a sort of defi to the other faction. If the church had been built in the hollow the Frazer faction would have depended on Providence. Now that it was being built on a hill the Henderson faction was going to give Providence the shake and go to the expense of $90 to put up a lightning rod. Were they whole Christians or half Christians? If they believed that man was greater than Providence, then Satan would be glad to see the building finished and dedicated. Here was a yawning pit and but one way to bridge it. The lightning rod faction took that way by announcing that there would be no rod. Everything would be left to Providence. This really ended all dispute. Deacon Frazer tried hard to think of some other point, but nothing would occur. Only when he and the other deacon would meet he would shake his head and say:

"I dunno about that church, deacon. Gimme a church in a holler, with a big walnut tree five rods away, and I'll trust Providence for the rest."

"There she is, right up on the hill," Deacon Henderson would reply, "and we're asking Providence to protect her without the help of any trees."

The church had been dedicated a month when there came a terrible storm one night. First the wind blew with fury, and then there came rain and thunder and lightning, and all of a sudden a crash that lifted half the town out of bed. When the storm ceased it was found that the walnut tree in the hollow had been struck and shivered and that the church on the hill had been blown from its foundations and rolled down the hillside into the creek. Then at once arose the question, "Which did Providence hit first?" And today, after a lapse of five years, it is still an undecided question.

His Opening.

His Bald Spot.

Little Margie's father had a bald spot. While kissing him at bedtime one evening she said:

"Stoop down, papa. I want to kiss you on the head where the lining shows."

The greatest of all faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none.—Carlyle.

CERTAIN RESULTS.

Many a Palmer Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Palmer. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

Otto R. F. Smith, one mile out on Thorndike road, Palmer, Mass., says: "In the spring of 1901 I used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them beneficial in every way, in fact, I was so highly gratified with their good work that I gave a public statement in their favor. When I first began taking them, my kidneys were greatly disordered. My back ached constantly, and I could hardly arise from a chair after sitting for some time. There was also a disagreeable feeling in my head and I was annoyed by a difficulty with the kidney secretions. I do not wish it understood that Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, but they benefitted me greatly. I know of other persons who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with the same excellent results and consequently I gladly give them my recommendations."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Greatest Season of Fine Furs

In Our Sixty Years of Selling

Last season we rolled up a volume of business in Furs which at the time we believed would stand as the record for some time to come—a business far in excess of any previous year.

But the first two months of the present season have gone way beyond last year's record and we are now practically certain of making this the greatest year in our sixty years of Fur selling.

This phenomenal business is doubly gratifying, for it not only indicates the increasing popularity of Furs, but it once more attests the appreciation of the public in our efforts to offer the very best Furs the markets of the world afford, in unrivaled assortments and at the lowest prices at which Furs of superlative excellence and absolute reliability can possibly be sold.

Unrivaled Low Prices on

Russian Pony Coats

Only by anticipating the unprecedented demand for Pony Coats and placing immense orders for skins last February are we now able to supply these popular Coats, in selected and perfectly matched skins, at these remarkably low prices—the lowest, we believe, quoted by any house in the East on Furs of equal quality and beauty.

Div. 15, A. O. H., will hold a regular meeting Sunday afternoon in their hall at 3.15.

Mrs. Granger F. Clark of New York is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. W. Clark and family.

Rev. Thomas S. Donoghue, pastor of St. Mary's church, entertained the altar boys at his home Tuesday evening.

Some of the departments in both of the Thorndike Company's mills have been running nights until 10 o'clock during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Chabot of Haydenville were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Chabot of Church street the first of the week.

The Polish residents of this place are to open an evening school in St. Joseph's hall on High street. A class of 25 has already been formed.

Workmen are employed by R. L. Bond building a storage reservoir which is to be used in connection with the water system already established by Mr. Bond.

The handsome gold watch to be presented to the most popular baseball player in the Palmer Town League at the trolleymen's dance in Palmer is on exhibition in the store window of D F. Leary this week and has attracted considerable attention.

A large number attended the social given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., at Union Hall Tuesday evening to those who assisted in making the recent bazar of the society the grand success that it was. Abare's orchestra furnished music for dancing. Refreshments, consisting of cake, ice cream and soda, were served and all present enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

The members of St. Mary's parish will hold their second annual coffee party and social in the church hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 23d. A meeting was held Monday evening to make arrangements which was largely attended and there was much interest shown. Committees were appointed who will have charge of the various departments including entertainment, refreshments, etc. Last year's affair was a decided success and the various committees are working hard to make this year's equally so. Tickets are now on sale and are meeting with a ready sale.

Sabin Parker, 62, died at his home on Pine avenue Wednesday morning after a short illness. The news of his death was a great shock to his friends who, while they knew that he had been ailing for some time, did not consider his condition serious. Mr. Parker was well known in town and was for several years employed as carpenter by the Thorndike Co. He is survived by a widow, one son, Berton, and two brothers, Andrew J. of this town and James, who resides in the eastern part of state. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 from the house, Rev. Mr. Taylor of the Congregational church officiating. Burial was in the Four Corners cemetery.

For Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises.

It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. L. ROLAND, Bishop of Scranton, Pa. says:—"On the 7th of this present month, as I was leaving the building at noon for lunch, I slipped and fell, spraining my wrist. I returned in the afternoon, and at four o'clock I could not hold a pencil in my hand. I returned home later and purchased a bottle of and used it five or six times before I went to bed, and the next day I was able to go to work and use my hand as usual."

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent antiseptic and germ killer—heals cuts, burns, wounds and contusions, and will draw the poison from sting of poisonous insects.

DOUBLE MEANING OF AN ENGLISH WORD

By EDITH F. BAKER.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

It was a sad day for Emery Blatchford when Fannie Ellsmere told him that she was engaged to Tom Edwards. And the girl who had chosen between these two young men did not choose wisely. Edwards never got on, while Blatchford, having one of those cheery dispositions that win people continually, found friends to drop plums into his mouth. And so it happened that while the former was spending what little his wife had when he married her the latter was prospering.

One year when the fall elections came round the managers of the party in power, fearing they would lose the fight, looked about for candidates who would be especially acceptable to the people. Among those they selected was Emery Blatchford, who was put up for sheriff and elected by an overwhelming majority.

Now, it happened that a year before this election Edwards had died, leaving his widow not only penniless, but with a chattel mortgage on her household effects, for the payment of even the interest on which there were no funds. One of the first duties devolving upon the newly elected sheriff was the serving of a writ upon Mrs. Edwards, which would deprive her of her only remaining possession, her furniture. When Blatchford came across this paper he sighed, put it in a pigeonhole, where, if he had had the power to keep it there, it would have remained till the crack of doom. Indeed he paid no further attention to it till the plaintiff in the case made such an ado about the delay that the sheriff was obliged to serve the writ.

He gave the paper to a deputy, but before the man had reached the door called him back. He couldn't bear that the unwelcome process should be enacted without being softened so far as possible. And to whom could he trust such softening but himself? Putting the document into his pocket, he waited till after office hours—indeed, till a proper hour for calling in the evening, then went to the widow's cottage. He was received with some surprise. When he had last visited Mrs. Edwards she was Miss Ellsmere and had told him that she was engaged to his rival. Blatchford beat about the bush for an hour before he could bring himself to mention the all important subject. Then he said:

"I presume you know that judgment has been entered against you in the matter of the notes secured by chattel mortgage on your furniture?"

"Yes; I had no money with which to even try to save what I have left," she replied, wiping a tear from her eye.

"And you may know," the sheriff proceeded, "of the attachment I have for you."

A sudden checking of tears, a movement indicating that something important had caught the widow's attention followed the sheriff's remark.

"I knew," she replied hesitatingly, "that you had an attachment for me, but—but I was not aware that it had endured."

"The attachment I have for you," he said gently, sympathetically, "is different from the one which you mention. It is a more practically important one. An attachment that"—

He was stalled. The widow essayed to help him.

"I can understand," she said, "the difference between the—the feeling one might have for a girl and that same feeling after all that has intervened between then and now. I, too, have come to understand myself better."

The sheriff, instead of opening his legal document, opened his ears, to say nothing of his eyes. This, however, the widow did not see since her own eyes were bent on the floor, while her ears were strained to hear the expected declaration. Blatchford could not feel any certainty that he was either understood to be entering upon a proposal or that, if so, he was encouraged. He resolved upon one more effort to make clear the business on which he had come.

"This word attachment," he began—"this word attachment has different meanings. It is at once a legal term and"— "I know," she sighed.

"I mean, too, a condition of the heart. My attachment for you is as warm, as deep, as unalterable as it ever was. Give me the right to stand as your protector."

Blatchford took her unresisting form into his arms, where she rested in happy contentment for some time without speaking. Finally she looked up into his face and said:

"Do you know that when you began to talk about the word attachment having a legal meaning, for a moment I was seized with an idea that you, being sheriff"—

"I being sheriff?"

"You having spoken about the horrid suit."

"Well?"

"That you were talking about that."

"How could you suppose," he replied, drawing her closer to him, "that I would have anything to do with that matter unless, perhaps, to bring you some good news concerning it?"

"What good news?"

"W-why, the plaintiff will renew the note."

"For what reason?

"It will be indorsed."

"What's that?"

"It's the result of the 'attachment' I was speaking to you about."

to users of Mother's Cereals

These cereals are famous for quality among the housewives of America.

Carefully our buyers collect the finest grain in all American markets. They are known as being finicky. Carefully our mills pick from this cream the ripest, choicest grains. Carefully our mill hands pick from these kernels the biggest, the fattest, the finest. Only the best grains ever find their way to a Mother's package. Carefully this product is selected from the select, is cleansed, then sterilized and packed in a Mother's sanitary package. Here is a list of Mother's Cereals. Every one is the best of its kind.

Mother's Oats
Not like other oats. Not only rolled to make their cooking easy, but crushed to make them easily digested.

Mother's Wheat Hearts
(The cream of the wheat)
Is a pure granulated wheat food, thoroughly sterilized and easily digested.

Mother's Corn Flakes (Toasted)
The best corn, big, full, sweet corn, shaved as thin as a whisper and toasted into a rich golden yellow.

Mother's Old Fashioned Steel Cut Oatmeal
Thoroughly pan roasted, all of the natural sweetness of the oats retained and makes the best gruel.

Mother's Yellow Corn Meal
The kind from which you can make the corn bread, cakes, mush and muffins.

Mother's White Corn Meal
Carefully prepared from the finest grains. Delicious for corn bread and cakes. The kind dearest to the heart of the southern housewife.

Mother's Granulated Hominy
Made from carefully selected white corn, by modern methods of manufacture. A food far superior to the ordinary hominy.

Mother's Coarse Pearl Hominy
Made from selected white flint corn of the highest quality. Coarser than Mother's Hominy Grits and requires a little longer in the cooking.

The Mother's Oats Fireless Cooker, given free with coupons found in Mother's Cereals, needs no fuel of any sort. Ask your grocer how you can get one free. If he doesn't keep Mother's cereals, send us his name and yours and we will send you free a useful souvenir.

A FINE NEW CHURCH.

Baptist Edifice Dedicated Tuesday Evening.

OLD CHURCH WAS BURNED YEAR AGO

New Structure Handsome and Commodious. Organ Recital Next Tuesday.

The people of the Second Baptist church, after having been without a house of worship for about 15 months, dedicated their new building this week, using it on Tuesday evening for the first time.

There was a large audience present at the dedicatory exercises. The auditorium was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums, generously sent by Dr. Everett Flood from the epileptic hospital greenhouses. An organ voluntary by C. B. Fiske, who has been organist of the church for over 50 years, was first on the program, followed by an anthem by the choir entitled "Sing unto the Lord a new song." After the invocation by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Williams, Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church read the Scripture and Rev. F. W. Gibbs of the Universalist church offered prayer. An anthem by the choir, "As Mount Zion," followed. In behalf of the builders, E. H. Cummings then presented the keys of the building to the building committee; C. E Fuller, as chairman of that committee, accepted them, and with C. B. Fiske, senior deacon, requested the minister to proceed with the service of dedication, which was participated in by the congregation. The dedication hymn, "O thou whose vast temple stands," was sung by the congregation, and this was followed by an address by Rev. F. W. Padelford, secretary of the Massachusetts Baptist Missionary Society. He took for his theme "The church of the future," his text being Psalm cvi:13, "Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy kingdom endureth through all generations." He said in part:

The grand mosque of Damascus is one of the most interesting monuments of eastern history. On the spot where it now stands there was originally erected a heathen temple. In the middle of the fourth century this was destroyed by Theodosius the Great, and on its ruins at the beginning of the fifth century Aroadius, his son, built a Christian house of worship. This church though for 300 years the cathedral of Damascus, became in the eighth century a Moslem possession, and for over a thousand years has been used as a Mohammedan mosque.

The most interesting feature of this historic old structure is a single sentence engraved in Greek characters over its vestibule. It reads: "Thy Kingdom, O Christ, is an Everlasting Kingdom, and Thy Dominion Endureth Throughout all Generations." For 1500 years this ancient inscription has borne mute testimony to the faith and confidence of Damascus Christians in the ultimate triumph of the kingdom of Christ. Many years ago your fathers built their former temple and dedicated it to the worship of God. It was their declaration of faith. Men said what is the use? The church is losing its power. The day is not far distant when the church will be forsaken. But they still built on and for many years their church stood, a silent witness to their faith and confidence in the ultimate triumph of the church Again this church has proclaimed its faith. Drawn by force of circumstances, you have erected this new structure. You have given of your treasure that you might have here a building worthy of this church and worthy of the worship of God.

The speaker alluded to the criticism of those who did not believe in the waste of money in building churches and their claim that the church was a failure, and said: The signs of the times are not signs of disaster, but of victory. This beautiful church is a declaration of your triumphant faith. He than pictured the church of the future and said "the church of the future is to magnify the Lord Jesus Christ. The church has been passing through a period of storm and stress. She has met critics from without and within. This is not altogether bad, for it indicates that the church and the world are constantly raising their standard of what the church ought to be and do. When did the church ever exercise such influence and enter so completely into the life of mankind as to-day?

A great struggle has been going on within the church. She has been re-examining the foundation of her faith and asking if they will stand the test of the modern day. The church has been deeply stirred by the modern study of the Bible and by the many questions that have been asked about it. Men of all tempers have been studying the Bible from every point of view to determine whether it is trustworthy as the word of God. The storm center of all this struggle is the person of Jesus Christ. The great question is, 'What think ye of Christ?' All other questions pale into insignificance besides it. Everything hinges on the final answer to the question: Who is Jesus Christ? The future of the church hangs upon its decision. The storm is still on, but the air is clearing. Jesus is emerging from the field of battle more glorious than ever. The thought of the world is focusing on him. This Christ whom the world is coming to recognize is the world's savior. Men have talked of him as friend, brother and teacher, and tried to Visit to the Cliff Dwellings — Of the Mesa Verde National Park of Colorado.

Paper read before a recent meeting of the Palmer Historical Society by Mrs. W. H. Fuller.

[Concluded From Last Week.]

The walls of the house are all constructed of dressed stone, generally firmly set in adobe mortar, the pointing of which is sometimes strengthened by the insertion of small stones and fragments of pottery. The front walls, which have been subjected to the rain and snow, have suffered because of the disintegration of the mortar, but the interiors of these rooms are little worn. They are generally plastered, and in some cases this is put on very smoothly. The hand must have been used in place of a trowel, for the finger prints can be distinctly seen where it was smoothed down The one-storied rooms have generally lost their roofs, but many with two stories have them entire.

As a rule the form of all living rooms is square or quadrilateral; there are, however triangular, pentagonal and round rooms. Fireplaces are ordinarily situated in one corner of the rooms, but in the circular ones they lie near the middle. The walls near the fireplaces and the ceilings are thickly incrusted with soot, which has become hard and shiny by the action of the elements.

There is, running from east to west, a court leading from the plaza to the rear of the cave, thus dividing the house into two parts. Along this street or court are evidences of fireplaces, which would seem to indicate that the rooms were used more as sleeping apartments, while the family cooking was done in the court. The rooms upon the second and third floors were reached in some cases by footholes in the side of the walls or by notched timbers propped against the building.

The rooms of the Spruce Tree House are well furnished with door ways; a few however are entirely walled in, shutting off all entrances, a circumstance that would indicate that these rooms were abandoned while yet others were inhabited. The sills are of solid stone, often much worn, and the lintels are commonly of stone slabs, but in some cases they are made of split sticks set in mortar. Seldom are the doorways more than four feet in height, and are generally about a foot above the level of the floors. The doors are of stone, which rest in a groove in the lintels and are held in place by sticks inserted in osier eyelets, the sticks being taken out and the door removed each time a person desired to enter the rooms. Dr. Fewkes has restored one of these doors in its original form.

There are beams and rafters in many of the rooms, and ceilings of small woven sticks. Remains of a balcony can be seen upon the second story in one section of the house, so that along this balcony the dwellers in these rooms passed from one to another. A few traces of a balcony upon the third story are found, but the elements, aided by the destructive hand of man, have removed all but portions of the ends of the rafters.

There are bins constructed of stone found in the house, the use of which can be only surmised; a most natural conjecture is that they were receptacles for storing corn.

Reference has already been made to the eight kivas or ceremonial chambers. All but one of these kivas lie in front of the dwellings and below the level of the plazas. With the exception of this one, which is behind some of the rooms at the east end of the house, they are all circular and alike in structure. Kivas built by the Hopi Indians are similar to those found at the cliff ruins in the major points, so it is reasonable to suppose that the religious ceremonies of the ancient dwellers of these houses and those of the Hopi Indians living to-day have many points of resemblance.

The kivas are about 15 feet in diameter and have six buttresses arranged at regular intervals along the wall for the support of the dome-like roofs. Between these buttresses are small niches which were for the reception of paint, meal or objects used in the worship. There is a fireplace or altar in each kiva, and between it and the opening which communicates with the outer wall of the kiva or floor of the plaza is an upright stone three feet high, which served as a deflector to distribute the fresh air throughout the kiva. Smoke from the fire made its escape through an opening in the roof.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the kiva is a small hole in the floor which is barely large enough to allow the insertion of the hand. This represents, symbolically, the ceremonial entrance to the under world, and is the same as that which the Hopi Indians call the sipapu. Around this hole, marking the place on the floor where altars were erected in ancient ceremonies, were performed the archaic rites, and through it the priests addressed the gods of the under world and through this sipapu communication was held with the dead. The Hopi Indians preface their worship with some such address as this delivered at the opening of the sipapu: "Spirits of the other world, we are about to begin our worship and beseech your presence and blessing, and hope it is well with you." Entrance to the kivas can be made through tunnels connected with some of the rooms of the house, as well as by means of the opening in the roof left for the smoke Dr. Fewkes has reproduced the covers over two of the kivas and constructed ladders leading from the opening or hatchway to the floors of the kivas. We crawled and wiggled down one of these tunnels, some ten feet long, and decided that this manner of going to worship would quite discourage the present custom of arraying oneself in his best for church attendance, and women with the prevailing styles of millinery could not be admitted.

Our guide called us to the evening meal, just as the sun was going down. He had prepared an appetizing supper to which we did ample justice, particularly enjoying his most excellent biscuits. Later as we gathered about the fire, he proved a good story teller and interesting entertainer; but sleep comes early at high altitudes when the days have been strenuous, and soon we were assigned to our tents to be lulled to sleep by the whispering of the winds through the cedars.

Our guide arose at dawn to round up the horses which had been taken the night before to the feeding ground some two miles away. Each one had been hobbled and had a bell tied about his neck when turned loose, but during the night they had drifted two miles further from camp. Nothing seemed to trouble the guide, though he had a four-mile walk and a four-mile ride back he prepared breakfast at the appointed time, regaling us in the meantime with bits of local history.

We esteemed it by no means one of the unimportant incidents of the trip that Dr. Fewkes and his party of 20 helpers were this summer clearing away rubbish and doing restorative work at Cliff Palace Therefore it was with anticipation of not only seeing the most extensive ruin of the Park, but of meeting the man who is such an eminent scholar in archaeology, that we mounted our horses for a two-mile ride to Cliff Canyon.

The horses soon learn to "savey," as the guide expressed it, and followed in Indian file along the narrow trail over the rocks and by the brinks of canyons without any attention upon your part, leaving you to study and enjoy the scenery along the way. There are many small cliff dwellings to be seen tucked in crevices of the rocks, impossible of access unless one were let down from above and then swung back and forth until a hold could be obtained and entrance thus made into the dwellings. We assured the guide that no member of our party desired to make any such aerial entrances but would confine ourselves to such places as could be reached by either crawling, creeping or sliding.

Cliff Palace is by no means as easy of approach as Spruce Tree House, for the visitor has to climb down steep paths, ladders and sheer rocks with foot holes cut in them, some 200 feet. Dr. Fewkes greeted us most cordially upon our arrival at the ruin, and proved most helpful in his descriptions and explanations. His scholarly expositions betoken his extensive study of the prehistoric ruins and their inhabitants in the southwest. He is a man of attractive personality, and so thoroughly wrapped in the work that you cannot fail to catch some of his enthusiasm.

Cliff Palace is larger than Spruce Tree House, having 146 rooms, including 20 kivas and a tapering loophole tower. It is located in a crescent-shaped cave and is about 300 feet from tip to tip of the crescent. The work of cleaning away the rubbish and strengthening the walls was a little more than half completed. Dr. Fewkes escorted us through the rooms and kivas, which are so like in structure and finish to those of the ruin already described that it will not be needful to enter into a detailed description of the Palace. We found lying upon the ground in the space at the back of the cave, behind the dwellings, small discolored corn-cobs. We had observed the same in the Spruce Tree House, but had refrained from taking any as curios, as the same regulations hold in Mesa Verde as at any National Park. Dr. Fewkes assured us that these corn-cobs were remnants of the corn supply of the inhabitants, and may be 1000 or more years old. It seems that they would have disintegrated long before this but no moisture ever reaches the back of these caves, hence their preservation. Dr. Fewkes presented each of the party with one of these mummy-like corn-cobs, and also with some fragments of pottery. Upon what is supposed to be the pulpit, at the east end of the Palace, we set up over cameras and secured some highly satisfactory results It is from this rostrum that the chiefs addressed the people assembled upon the plaza, giving them the news of the day and proclaiming whatever may have been for the welfare of the tribe. Similar rostrums are found in the Hopi Indian pueblos.

When asked concerning the age of the cliff dwellings, Dr Fewkes would give no estimate. From the size of some of the coniferous trees found among the ruins 1000 years may be an underestimate of their antiquity. Concerning the people Dr Fewkes said some mummies and bones found indicate they were of medium height and possessed the facial characteristics of Indians of to-day. From the weapons found it is thought that they were a peaceful people, hence they built where the natural characteristics of the country afforded a means of defense. The pottery, both in shape, material and design of decorations, resembles that found in the Aztec ruins in New Mexico.

The third ruin visited is that of the Balcony House, so called because the beams supporting a balcony are yet in place and because the balcony took the place of a plaza. This house is located in Cliff Canyon, one mile east of the Palace. It is as the relic hunters left it, with its broken walls and floors. It would certainly be a very unwise guide to conduct visitors to the Balcony House for their first experience at scaling rocks, where a mis-step would prove very serious. Balcony House is located higher in the cliff than the other ruins visited, and the walls of stone overhang the cavern in which the house is located, so that to reach it one has to climb down a difficult path some 300 feet, and then is appalled to find that the house is high above and can only be reached by scaling a rock whose front face is almost perpendicular. As an aid to the performance of the feat there is a long knotted rope tied to a tree above. Even visions of the successful climber from Illinois could not arouse one member of the party to emulation, and it goes on record that she clung to the nearest roots and branches and begged to be permitted to remain there, so that if the others insisted upon going on there might be one to return to tell the tale. Someone suggested that we take hold of hands, the guide leading. After much persuading and much hard work and really dangerous climbing, we found ourselves in the house, almost

FIRE WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Barn and Stock on Breckenridge Place Burned.

WITH HORSE, TWO COWS, TOOLS, ETC.

Loss About $6000. All Afire Inside When Discovered. No Theory as to Cause.

The large frame barn on the Breckenridge Homestead, about half a mile east of the village on the Warren road, was burned Wednesday evening, together with one horse, two cows, about 20 tons of hay, farming tools and vehicles. The loss is at least $4000 on building and $2000 on contents; there was $2200 insurance on the building and $2000 on contents, placed through the Leach agency of Palmer

The fire was discovered about 10.55 by C. T. Brainerd and his daughter, who had been in the village and noticed a light in the barn as they approached it on their return. Mr. Brainerd went at once to the front of the barn and attempted to enter, but the whole interior was ablaze and he was driven back by the flames and smoke An alarm was rung in and the fire department responded. In the meantime, William Lynch, the hired man, succeeded in turning loose one of the pair of work horses in the barn and it was not very badly burned. By means of a small hose and chemical extinguishers the flames were kept from the house, located only a few feet away, although it was badly scorched and the end of the woodshed nearest the barn was badly burned. Fortunately the wind was away from the house, or it could not have been saved.

It was some time before the steamer arrived on the scene, and until it did there was no fire stream on the blaze The water mains, when laid about 30 years ago, were put through South Main street and the then traveled way from Tenneyville to Blanchardville across the Boston and Albany tracks; this road has since been discontinued. The nearest hydrant to the burning structure is at Tenneyville, 1600 feet from the Brainerd house in a straight line. The steamer was placed here and forced water through about 1800 feet of hose to a siamese, where it was made to do duty from two nozzles and served to aid materially in protecting the house and deadening the flames. But 1800 feet is a long distance to force water through hose, and the streams were not forceful, though as good as could be expected under the circumstances. The new hose bought by the fire district last spring proved its necessity, as without it the firemen would not have been able to get a stream on the blaze.

Nothing is known of the origin of the fire. The barn was an unusually tight one and was closed and locked before 8 o'clock. When Mr. Brainerd opened the door the fire seemed to be thickest in the upper part of the barn, especially near where the light wires entered.

CHICKEN THIEF FOUND.

Wilbraham Boy Surprises Man at Work Dressing Fowls in Woods.

Wilbraham was visited by a chicken thief last Friday night, and as a result several of the residents found some of their poultry missing Saturday morning.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday morning, Everett Green, about 16 years of age, was hunting rabbits with his younger brother, Clinton, when they ran across a man dressing a lot of chickens on land owned by Henry C. Butler in East Wilbraham, near the Three Rivers road. He was standing beside a market basket packed full of chickens, and one large one was wrapped up in paper. The chickens were warm and had been dry picked, there being nine in all, weighing about 40 pounds. There were several bushels of hens' feathers near the spot.

The man was accused of stealing the chickens by young Green, but denied this, stating that another man had stolen them, and offered to assist Everett in capturing him. The boy did not credit the statement, and sent his brother after help, in spite of the protests of the stranger. Soon after Clinton had left the man became nervous and hurried through the woods through Three Rivers, followed by Everett with his repeating rifle. After a short time Everett decided he had better make sure of the chickens and returning to get them, carried them to the home of George Cady, sending word to the village of the trouble.

Two officers, accompanied by Everett Green and H. T. Green, hunted all through the woods for several miles and tracked the man for about a mile along a cart road near the river leading from Red Bridge dam. A man of the description given was seen at Red Bridge Saturday morning a little after 8 o'clock, and it is believed that he took the train on the Athol branch which leaves Red Bridge for Springfield at 9.35.

BAD FOREST FIRE.

Burned Over Large Tract of Land in Wales and Brimfield Saturday.

A forest fire, which threatened serious results, started on Waddaquoddock mountain, west of the hollow in Brimfield Saturday evening, but was extinguished by the combined efforts of companies of men from Brimfield, East Brimfield and Wales It was noticed about 5.30 by Brimfield people, presenting a magnificent as well as alarming spectacle, as it stretched along the crest of the mountain which is one of the western boundaries of the village of Brimfield. The blaze originated on land in Wales, and the first squad arrived from that town, and soon met a detachment under the Brimfield fire warden, Edward J. Prindle, and these were joined by a company from East Brimfield, headed by William Davenport, deputy warden. As there was little wind, this was very favorable to the work of the men. The fire ranged over a line of three miles along the mountain, but the loss was not as large as it threatened. Brimfield people felt especially anxious lest Principal Kenney's forest tract, where he is making valuable experiments in reforestation and which is on the same mountain lower down, should be overrun, but it was not in the path of the fire, while his large chestnut sprout lot which the fire nearly reached was saved by the timely arrival of assistance, soon after he reached the spot. Some of the land burned over was in Monson, in addition to that in Brimfield and Wales.

The Men's League of the Congregational church will hold a meeting Tuesday evening, November 30. Members of neighboring clubs and men in general are invited. State Forester F. W. Rane will give the address of the evening.

DON'T WASTE WATER.

Supply Getting Shorter Daily. Serious Condition if Freezing Comes Without Rain.

Don't waste a drop of water. It's good advice at any time, but is doubly and trebly worth heeding just now. For, unless there are long and copious rains in the very near future, it is almost a certainty that water even for domestic purposes will be a luxury long before the spring rains and thaws fill the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company.

Four weeks ago the company, realizing that the reserve supply had reached a minimum, ceased furnishing the railroads with water. Four weeks ago to-morrow the lower or service reservoir—the one from which the water is drawn into the mains—was practically full, but there was a negligible quantity in the upper or storage reservoir; it was too small to be taken into consideration. At that time the brook supplying water was furnishing a stream three feet wide and one inch deep. A visit to the reservoir yesterday forenoon revealed these conditions: The water in the surface reservoir has lowered about 12 inches; that in the upper reservoir has dropped three or four inches; the stream from the brook has decreased at least one quarter. The net result is that there is considerably less water on hand than a month ago, and less coming in. Should the cold weather set in before there are heavy rains—with the attendant still further lessening of the supply by freezing up the ground—a scarcity of water would be inevitable. Under the conditions every water user should see to it that not a drop goes to waste. Faucets which leak should be repaired at once, and every channel of waste should be closed.

For those who fear a conflagration it may be well to say that there is in all probability sufficient water to successfully fight any fire we may have—even the worst which might be imagined; there would be enough water for that, but—after the fire the amount available for domestic purposes would be very, very small.

TO GIVE HORSE BOWL.

Palmer Business Club Presents Stone Watering Trough to Town.

A special meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club was held Wednesday evening, when the club voted to present the town with a stone watering trough or horse bowl, to replace the iron tub now on Main street, in view of the marked improvement being made on that street by the introduction of brick paving. The bowl will be five feet six inches long and three feet wide, by two feet eight inches high, the usual height of such structures. It will have a rock face and cut top and edges, and will be suitably inscribed. A committee consisting of D. L. Bodfish, James Summers and C. A. LeGro was appointed to arrange all details.

DIPHTHERIA SCARE.

Only Seven Cases, But 114 Out of 250 Pupils Kept From School.

The school committee last Friday decided to close the grammar school in Three Rivers for one week on account of the large number of pupils absent, 114 of the 250 enrolled not being in attendance. There are several cases of diphtheria in that village, the total number being seven, but on Thursday afternoon of last week 85 pupils were absent and on Friday 114. Under the conditions the board of health and the school committee deemed it best to close the school for a week. The board of health did not and does not consider that there is any particular danger of a spread of the disease.

Pleasant Gathering.

Mrs. E. A. Clark of Palmer, formerly of Wales, entertained the Baptist Ladies' Aid Society of Wales, of which she was vice president, at her home on South Main street Wednesday. Among the members who were present were the president, Miss Emma Lanphear, the treasurer, Mrs. C. G. Thompson, Mrs. Elijah Shaw, Mrs. Lizzie Rourke, Mrs. Henry Worth, all of Wales; Mrs. Hattie Parker of Springfield, Mrs. Lottie Whittemore and Mrs Mary Nelson of Monson, Mrs. George Parker of West Warren, Mrs. E. B. Dolan, Master Winthrop Dolan and Mrs. Gates of Agawam, and Mrs. N. M. Stebbins of Palmer. An elaborate dinner was served at 1 o'clock, after which Miss Lanphear presented Mrs. Clark with a handsome cut glass fruit dish, in behalf of the society. The afternoon was spent in a pleasant manner, making aprons and patchwork, and the guests left on the 5 o'clock cars, going in various directions.

To Place Historic Marker.

The Women's Improvement Society of the Old Center has raised the funds for procuring a granite marker to be placed on the common near the old Frink tavern, in commemoration of the soldiers who often camped there before marching to the front in the wars of the French and Indian period, the Revolution and 1812

The marker will be dedicated with appropriate exercises next Wednesday at 2.30 o'clock p. m., but should the day prove stormy, the exercises will be held on the following Friday at same hour. Several members of the Palmer Historical Society have been invited to speak on the occasion The public is cordially invited to be present and it is hoped that there will be a glad response to this invitation, as an act of encouragement to a society which is patriotic enough to commemorate the deeds of our loved heroes of the past.

Better Trolley Facilities.

Beginning Tuesday, the street railway company began a new system of running its afternoon half-hour cars between Palmer and Springfield. These cars have formerly left Palmer at 3 45, 4 45 and 5 45 for Springfield, and left Springfield at 3.38, 4.38 and 5.38 for Palmer, these cars running through Main street and running accommodation to Ludlow bridge. By the new schedule an additional car is started from each end at 2 45, and the cars from Springfield now leave Court Square at 15 minutes of the hour instead of 22 minutes; they run express to Ludlow bridge instead of accommodation. If passengers for Palmer will take the 15 minutes of the hour cars they will relieve the congestion on the Worcester cars at 15 minutes past the hour and find conditions more agreeable during the rush hours.

Building Lots Valueless.

Patrons of Forest Lake last summer will remember that for about two weeks there were drawings of lots on Long Island or some other place in the vicinity of New York city, the holders of the lucky tickets being entitled to a building lot without any charge whatever. The South Brooklyn Home Circle, under date of November 3, contains an account of the doings of the Metropolitan and Suburban Real Estate Company of Brooklyn, which was the company operating in this section, and the issuance of a fraud order against it by the post office authorities at Washington, as it was using the mails to defraud. The lots which were "given away" were not considered worth enough to pay for the deed which the company required the lucky person to take and pay for.

Report on Accidental Death.

Judge T. W. Kenefick filed Monday a report of the inquest which was held Saturday in the district court on the death of John Delmont of Monson, whose body was found November 4th on the tracks of the Central Vermont railroad near the station in Monson He had been employed by the railroad company as a section-hand and was discharged the day before his death. He was between the main line and a side track on which an engine and two cars were backing toward the siding of the Flynt granite company. He was struck and run over by a light engine going in the opposite direction on the other track Judge Kenefick finds that he was a trespasser and that no one but himself is responsible for his death.

Probate Court Business.

At a session of the probate court in Springfield Wednesday the following was included in the business transacted:

Will proved of—Louisa H. Neff, late of Wales, Bessie E. F. Melhourn of Wales executrix.

Administrations granted in the estates of Mary Gokee, late of Wales, Mary E Ferguson of Wales administratrix; Francis Root, late of Palmer, Louis Girard of Palmer administrator; Francis Wright, late of Holland, Henry B. Montagne of Southbridge administrator.

Railroad Wants Land in Brimfield.

The Boston and Albany railroad has filed a petition with the county commissioners for additional land required by the company in the town of Brimfield adjoining the Quaboag river. The land required is a narrow strip 71 feet wide and 840 feet long. Nathan H. Powers is said to be the owner of the land, and the railroad company is unable to agree about the price and so the commissioners are asked to give the right to take the land without the consent of the owner.

A still alarm was rung in last Friday, calling the department to a brush fire in Blanchardville. It was principally on land of the Boston and Albany railroad and C. A. Lanphear.

The body of Rachel, the seven-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nordstrom of Westfield, was brought to Palmer Wednesday for burial in the Four Corners cemetery.

Mrs. A. J. Adams entertained the Fortnightly whist club at her home Monday evening. Mrs. Adams and J. M. Allen won the first prizes and Mrs. M. S French and Frederick Thompson the booby prizes.

C. W. Johnson, who was so seriously injured ten days ago by the caving in of a sewer on North Main street, is very much improved and it is now expected that he will recover. For a time it was thought there was no hope for him.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. L. E Chandler on North Main street Monday afternoon and voted to assume the cost of an organ for the new church. The instrument is to cost about $2400, and the society has a part of that sum on hand.

A public installation of Thomas lodge of Masons will be held next Monday evening, to which Masons and their families and invited friends will be welcome. The installing officer will be Wor. Chauncey E Peck, Grand Lecturer, of Wilbraham; Wor. Byram Woodhead will be marshal.

The trolleymen will hold their third annual concert and ball in the opera house this evening, with music by Heffernan's orchestra of Springfield. In the contest for the watch to be given the most popular ball player in town, D. Foley is ahead with 236 votes, E. Furkey 235 and A. Rogers and D Balisle 58 votes each. The contest will close to-night at 12.

Baptist church services next Sunday will be held in the new building on Thorndike street as follows: Prayer meeting at 10 15; public worship and sermon by Rev. Willard E. Waterbury of Boston at 10.45; Bible school rally at 12, address by Mr. Waterbury; men's rally at 3 30, address by Rev. George V. Daniels on "Religion With An Axe to Grind;" C. E. rally at 6; evangelistic rally at 7, under the direction of Mr. Waterbury. All are invited.

A large buck, weighing 140 pounds dressed, was struck by a train Wednesday morning on the Boston and Albany railroad near West Brimfield, nearly opposite the old Brainerd farm. The animal was found by a passing automobilist, who found it to be so badly injured that it was necessary to kill it. Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner J. F. Luman was notified and the carcass brought to Shaws' market, where it was distributed to those who wished any.

Adds wholesomeness to the food.

forget his Saviorhood. Even of late men have talked of a new religion, and left Christ out, but no religion that leaves Christ out will ever gain a hold on the heart of the world.

The Second Baptist church of Palmer was organized August 8, 1852, by 20 members, who took letters from the First Baptist church at Three Rivers, which was constituted in 1825. Services were held in halls early in 1852 and among the first preachers were Rev. Dr. Pattison, Rev. Mr. Gunnison and Rev. Judson Chaplin. In September of the same year Rev. A. Samuel Collins Jr. was publicly recognized as pastor and the next year steps were taken toward the erection of a church, which was completed and dedicated in March, 1854 It was built near the railroad station and occupied the original site until it was burned August 13, 1908. The other pastors have been Andrew S. Bullock, 1855-1860; Rev. G. Sherman Smith, 1860 1863; Rev. E. M. Haynes, 1866 1869; Rev. J. H. Tilton, 1869-1870; Rev. E D. Daniels, 1870-1871; Rev R. R. Riddell, 1872-1873; Rev. E. A. Goddard, 1874-1876; Rev. Philip Berry, 1877-1878; Rev. T. C Russell, 1878-1881; these were joint pastors of the two churches. Rev. O. R. Hunt was pastor of the Palmer church 1883-1885; Rev. A. W. Weeks, 1885-1892; Rev. Samuel Frost, 1892-1894; Rev. C. R Minard, Rev. E. C. Stover, Rev. C. W. Williams, September, 1903, to the present time.

The church was burned on the evening of August 13, 1908. The society immediately began plans for the erection of a new building in a more desirable location. After considering several sites, the Atkins property on Thorndike street was purchased and the new church built on the vacant lot adjoining the dwelling house.

The plans for the building were drawn by Clifford A. Tinker of Springfield; the contractors were the H. P. Cummings Construction Company of Ware. The building is 88 by 56 feet in size, built of concrete up to the grade line; from there to the windows the material is red brick laid Flemish bond. The walls are of stucco, with shingle roof, and there is a tower 12 feet square by 50 feet in height The main auditorium is 38 by 44 feet, with the pulpit in one corner, and a platform for organ and choir. At the rear is a Sunday school room 28 by 25 feet, with movable platform next the auditorium, and a primary room 11 by 23 feet, with five class rooms opening into the main Sunday schoolroom. All can be thrown together with a total seating capacity of about 400.

The dedication exercises were continued Wednesday, when there was a home gathering, social and praise service at 6 in the evening, with supper. The usual church prayer meeting was held last evening. This evening the church will be dedicated to denominational interests, when it is expected that there will be many visitors from the churches in the Westfield Baptist Association, of which the local church is a member. There will be addresses by Rev. B. H. Hahn D D. and Rev. A. W Weeks D. D. of Springfield. Next Tuesday evening there will be an organ recital by Mr. J. S. R. Coy of Spencer.

BRIMFIELD.

The senior class of the Academy, with the faculty, were entertained at the home of C. S. Tarbell last Friday evening by Miss Gladys Munroe of Fiskdale and Munroe Tarbell.

At a special meeting of the Grange last Friday evening, Principal George F. Kenney, Dr. William Pearsall and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Moore received the third and fourth degrees of membership.

Miss Eva L. Stacy was given a surprise visit by a number of her friends one evening recently at her home on Indian Hill farm. She was presented with a handsome bracelet. Musical selections were given during the evening by the Misses Stacy and Mildred St. George, and there were also vocal selections by Henry Forrant of Warren.

WARE.

A valuable rabbit hound, belonging to Patrolman B. W. Buckley, was shot by some person near Beaver lake Saturday afternoon and died Sunday.

A. B. Paton will move his family to Dover, N. H., next week. Mr. Paton has been a resident of the town nearly 20 years, the greater part of which time he was superintendent of the George H. Gilbert Manufacturing Company. He resigned his place four years ago to engage in business in Stafford Springs and later giving up this enterprise he accepted a position as superintendent of the Sawyer woolen mills in Dover. His departure from town while not unexpected will be regretted by a large circle of friends and former associates in business. Mrs Paton and Miss Alice Paton, the daughter, will also be much missed. The former has been much interested in the cause of the district nurse and has given freely of her time in the past to promote the success of this cause. Both Mr. and Mrs. Paton have been active workers in the East Congregational church and Mrs. Paton and Miss Alice have often sung at the services.

Verdict For Defendant in Hampden Case.

The case of Rose Ballard of Hampden, who brought suit against Edward Courtney of Somers, Ct., for the sum of $115, which she claimed he owed her for three cows, was heard in the superior court in Springfield this week, and a verdict rendered in favor of the defendant. Mr. Courtney admitted that he bought the cows, but said that he bought them from the husband, A. F. Ballard, and that he paid for them. It was therefore up to the jury to decide whether or not the plaintiff sold the cows Their decision was that she did not sell him the cows. While Mr. Courtney was paying Mr. Ballard for the cows, George Kibbe of Somers, who is the constable of the town, served an attachment on him to satisfy a bill of Dr. L. Hurd of Somers against Mr. Ballard. The jury decided therefore that in paying Mr. Ballard for the cows, even if the money was immediately attached so that he could receive no benefit from it, yet he had been legally paid for the cattle, and could not expect to be paid again. S. S. Taft and H N Cross were for Mr. Courtney, and Ballard, Buzzell & Weston represented the Ballards.

For Aged People.

Old Folks Should be Careful in their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

With advanced age comes inactive bowel movement and sluggish liver. Nature is unable to perform her proper functions and requires assistance. Otherwise, there is constant suffering from constipation and its attendant evils Old folks should never use physic that is harsh and irritating.

We have a safe, dependable and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitution who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorder. We are so certain that it will completely relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer them with our personal guarantee that they shall cost the user nothing if they fail to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy. They have a soothing, healing, strengthening, tonic and regulative action upon the dry mucus lining and the relaxed muscular coat of the bowels. They produce a natural, successive contraction and relaxation of the muscular fibres of the bowel walls, generating a wave-like motion which forces their contents onward and outward; thus simulating nature in perfect bowel movement. They tone up and strengthen the nerves and muscles and restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity. They may be taken at any time without inconvenience; do not cause any griping, nausea, diarrhœa, excessive looseness, flatulence or other disagreeable effect. Try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee: 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. Lynde & Gould, Palmer.

TO THE MASSACHUSETTS HIGHWAY COMMISSION.

Gentlemen:—

Your petitioner, the President of the Springfield & Eastern Street Railway Company, represents that public necessity and convenience require that the location and grade of the tracks of said company on the State highway in Palmer, between the bridge over the Quaboag River (station 123) and the easterly end of the section of State highway laid out in the town of Palmer in the year 1909 (station 132), be altered in order that the most suitable location and grade may be secured for said State highway.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that your Commission will cause the location and grade of said tracks to be altered, in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 463 of the Acts of the year 1906, as amended.

Dated at Springfield this 9th day of November, 1909.

L. S. STORRS,

BOARD OF SELECTMEN,
TOWN OF PALMER.

Respectfully represents the SPRINGFIELD & EASTERN STREET RAILWAY COMPANY, a street railway corporation duly established by law, that it is possessed of certain rights and franchises in the Town of Palmer, namely: that it has a certain layout for its tracks on Main street in said Palmer and thence along the highway leading from Main street in said Palmer to Springfield and over private land to the Quaboag River, that said highway leading from Main street in Palmer to said Springfield has been relocated, that public necessity and convenience require that a portion of the tracks of your petitioner on Main street and the Springfield Road and over private land as aforesaid be relocated and all as set forth in the following description:

(1) Beginning at a point at easterly end of 1909 State highway layout, said point being 8.5 feet southerly of the center line of county highway, and running thence N. 75° 12' 50" E. 442 feet to a point; thence by a curve to the right, with a radius of about 350 feet, arc about 368 feet to a point in present center line of track of said Company in Main street, and all as shown on a plan made by Durkee, White & Towne, Engineers, marked E-20-A and filed herewith.

(2) Beginning at a point in present center line of track of the Springfield & Eastern Street Railway Company, the said point being about 110 feet easterly of the easterly abutment of Street Railway bridge over the Quaboag river in said town; thence by a curve to the right with a radius of about 1432 feet, arc about 50 feet to a point; thence easterly about 300 feet to a point; thence by a curve to the left with a radius of about 2865 feet, arc about 167 feet to a point, said point being 8.5 feet southerly of the center line of county highway; thence N. 75° 12' 50" E. 396 feet to a point at end of 1909 State Highway layout. The above description is the center line of main track.

(3) Also a location for siding, or turnout track as follows: Beginning at a point about 200 feet easterly of easterly abutment of Street Railway bridge first above described and in center line of proposed new location, thence by diverging and reversing curves about 100 feet to a point, said point being 9'—6½" southerly of center line of proposed main track; thence easterly 9'—6½" southerly from and parallel to said proposed main track about 300 feet to a point; thence by a converging and reversing curve about 100 feet to a point in center line of proposed main track, and all as shown on a plan prepared by Durkee, White & Towne, Engineers, marked E-20.

Wherefor your petitioner prays that after public notice and a hearing as required by law, your Honorable Board will grant to your petitioner a relocation for its tracks as above set forth, together with the right to construct and equip the same for the operation of its cars thereon by overhead system of electric motive power and all in accordance with the prayer of this petition and the provisions of law therefor made and provided.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Pictures for the Holidays.

The holiday rush has commenced at A. N. Gaouette's studio. From all appearances there will be a large demand for portraits during the next three months, to use as gifts. Owing to the fact that pictures have become a proper and most pleasing article both to give and receive, it has been impossible many times in the past to wait on all who desired work done at my studio. For this reason I desire to inform all those intending to have work done that it is important to come early or at once, as we take extra pains to send out good and satisfactory work.

UNIQUE WHIST PARTY.

Golf Club Members Have Fine Railroad Trip on Tuesday Evening.

An event of more than usual interest was the bridge whist party given at the Qnaboag Country clubhouse Tuesday evening by Miss Holmes, Miss Wingate, Miss Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Cushman. On the roof of the piazza over the entrance was an illuminated sign "Bridgeton," while inside the room gave every appearance of a railroad station. There was a genuine ticket office, an express and baggage room, signs indicating the direction to the elevated and the subway, list of stations on the line, and other transportation accompaniments. After the company had assembled the ticket office was thrown open and the travelers were obliged to purchase tickets on the "Funville, Frolicktown R. R." There were four coupons on each ticket, with important information on each. The tickets read "Bridgeton to Green Circle," or some other table, and seats were found in this way. When ready to play Mr. Cushman appeared in the uniform of a brakeman and announced that the train was about to leave and called "All aboard!" After four hands had been played it was announced that the train would stop five minutes for refreshments, and a typical railroad lunch was disclosed when a curtain at one side of the ticket office was drawn aside. All the familiar railroad lunch counter eatables were displayed and, contrary to the usual custom, distributed without charge. During the next round Mr. Cushman again appeared in the guise of an express messenger and distributed prepaid packages to the guests, each being required to sign an express company's receipt. Every player was given a favor, and there were numerous good hits in the lot. There were two prizes, for highest and lowest scores; the former was a ticket to Boston, and the latter transportation over the Central Vermont road to State Line. About 75 were present, and all voted the occasion the most enjoyable of any ever held in the clubhouse.

Curley—Murphy.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Curley, daughter of John Curley of Harrison avenue, and Robert J. Murphy of Pearl street took place Wednesday morning at 10 in St. Patrick's church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe. The wedding march was played by the organist, Miss Mary McKenna. A large number of friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Olive O'Toole of Worcester, a cousin of the bride, and Frederick J. Sullivan acted as best man. The bride wore a three-piece suit of walnut chiffon broadcloth, and hat to match, trimmed with a willow plume and gold lace band. The bridesmaid was attired in a three-piece suit of amethyst serge, and she wore a hat of white moire trimmed with black plumes. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride after the ceremony. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was an amethyst necklace and the groom's gift to the best man was a solid gold scarf pin. The bride's traveling suit was of blue serge with hat to match. The couple received a number of beautiful presents, including cut glass, china, silverware, and also several checks. After an extended wedding trip to New York and vicinity the couple will be at home after January 1 at Mr. Murphy's newly-remodeled house at 51 Pearl street.

Death of Mrs. Josephine Wood.

Mrs. Josephine Wood, 65, died Saturday morning at 10 30 at the home of Mrs. E. M. Harris on Main street, with whom she had made her home since the death of her husband, which occurred six years ago. She had been sick for some time and death was due to Bright's disease and cancer of the stomach. Mrs. Wood was formerly Miss Josephine Robbins, was born in this town and had always lived here. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Woman's Relief Corps and of the Qnaboag Rebekah lodge. She leaves one brother, Everett Robbins of this town. The funeral was held from her late home Monday afternoon at 2, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating. A large delegation of the Woman's Relief Corps and Qnaboag lodge of Rebekahs attended. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

He left here and went to Somersville for a time, where he was associated with his father and brothers in establishing the Somersville Manufacturing Company. After a time he returned to Monson as paymaster and bookkeeper for R. M. Reynolds & Co. He remained two years, leaving here and engaging in manufacturing business in other places until he went to Hartford in 1897. He is survived by his son.

Academy Notes.

Now for basketball.

Robert Squires of Worcester Academy spent Sunday in town.

Principal Dewing gave up his recitations this week and spent his time in classroom inspection.

Principal Dewing and Prof. Lee attended the Harvard-Dartmouth game at Cambridge Saturday. Mr Dewing will attend the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge tomorrow.

Ralph Entwistle, who had his hip injured in Southbridge two weeks ago, is improving, and is able to walk around the house. He will return to school Monday but will be unable to play football again this season.

The football team was defeated in an exciting game at Springfield last Friday by the Springfield International college by the score of 5—0. Monson was penalized and the team thinks there was some partiality shown. Harding and King played well for Monson.

The Herring.

A peculiar feature in the herring trade is that an exceptionally large catch during one season has no effect whatever upon the next year's supply; also, large as is man's consumption of herrings, naturalists say the number killed by fishermen is quite insignificant as compared with the quantity destroyed every year by sharks, porpoises, cod, dogfish, ling and other fish, each of which must have its daily meal of from one to two score herrings, to say nothing of the sea birds, which practically live on surface feeding fishes Herrings are not at all a modern article of diet. A vast commerce in them was carried on in northern Europe all through the dark and middle ages. The herring's chief food consists of minute organisms, which it strains from the water by its gills, but it also eats worms and at certain seasons its own young, sprats and sand eels.—Pearson's Weekly.

Rule of the Corset.

If Cleopatra wore corsets she may rank as a royal champion of them with Catherine de' Medici, who is credited with having introduced the busked corset in France from Italy. Male monarchs have been less friendly Joseph II. of Austria tried to discourage the corset by making it part of the costume of a convicted woman of bad character. Napoleon, shaking his head over the tight lacing of his day, told Dr. Corvisart that he saw in it a sign of frivolous tastes and a menace of coming decadence. The restoration kings, Louis XVIII and Charles X., were equally hostile Formerly, said the latter, France had been full of Venuses, Dianas and Niobes, but now there were only wasps. The revolution alone temporarily put down the garment that has triumphantly defied kings.—London Spectator.

One of Belasco's.

"Once, when I was a reporter," said David Belasco, "I spent two days with a gang of tramps.

"These tramps had as many stories to tell as the end man of a minstrel show. One said that a friend of his, one cold day in January, knocked at the kitchen door of a farmhouse.

"'Well, said the farmer's wife. 'You here again?'

"'Yes, ma'am,' said the tramp respectfully. 'I want to know, ma'am, if you'll be kind enough to give me the recipe for that mince pie that I had here yesterday?'

"'Land sakes, man, what do you want that receipe for?'

"'To settle a bet,' replied the tramp. 'My partner says you use three cups of Portland cement to one of molasses, but I claim it's only two and one-half.'"—Boston Record.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear If the Advice of Palmer Citizens Is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidneys' fault.

Backache is really kidney ache;

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Palmer women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Julia Dewey, School St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for some time and from my experience I feel that this remedy cannot be praised too highly. My work is very hard on my back and at times I suffered from acute attacks of backache. These were accompanied by severe headaches and dizzy spells and at night I was subject to chills. When suffering in this way Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at Lynde & Gould's Drug Store, have never failed to bring relief. I have never heard of a case where this remedy did not live up to representations."

Miss Sweet—Don't you think the opening lines of Tennyson's little poem, "Break, break, break" are plaintive and sad? Stock Broker—Yes. But I think "Broke, broke, broke" is a good deal sadder.—St. Louis Times.

The question of women wearing hats in church recalls the fact that men also formerly wore theirs at worship. Pepys shows that in the 17th century both men and women wore their hats to worship. "To church," he writes, "and heard a simple fellow open the praise of church musique, and exclaiming against men wearing their hats on in a church." Later he notes that he saw a minister "preach with his hat off . . . which I never saw before." The hat was then an integral part of both male and female costume, and Pepys catches "a strange cold in my head by flinging off my hat at dinner."

Smokeless

Until science discovered a way to construct the Automatic Smokeless Device, and make it completely dependable, all oil heaters had one common great fault—smoke.

With the advent of the Automatic Smokeless Device, and its practical application to the

PERFECTION Oil Heater

(Equipped with Smokeless Device)

the smoke problem was successfully solved.

The Perfection Oil Heater is the only heater equipped with this

which insures a steady, full-glowing heat with the wick turned up as high as it will go, without a shred of smoke. Reverse the motion, turn the wick down—there's no odor.

The smokeless device automatically locks and prevents the upward movement of the wick beyond the proper exposure. That is the secret. This splendid result gives leadership to the Perfection.

You may now have all the heat you want—when you want it—and where you want it—without the annoyance of smoke or odor.

Brass font holds 4 quarts of oil, which permits a glowing heat for 9 hours. Brass wick tube—damper top—cool handle. Cleaned in a minute.

The Perfection is beautifully finished in Nickel or Japan.

Stunning New Models in

Fancy Coats

The phenomenal garment business we have done this season has been due to the variety, the beauty and the originality of the coats we have shown—styles, fabrics and colors refreshingly different from previous seasons.

We have just received from A. Beller & Co., the foremost tailor of America, a large number of these beautiful coats in their very latest and most exclusive models, fancy dressy garments in solid colors. They include the finest broadcloths, fine and wide wale cheviots in all the staple dark colorings as well as the very newest fashion shades and high colorings. These coats are quite dressy with fancy collars, some in the shawl shapes, some buttoning high in the neck, others buttoning at the side, giving the shield front effect. Included in this new lot is a select showing of coats in handsome and exclusive plaids.

At $25, $30, $35, $37.50, $42.50, $45, $50, $55.

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

What are Ayer's Pills? Liver Pills. How long have they been sold? Nearly sixty years. Do doctors recommend them? Ask your own doctor and find out.

The contest between the red and the blue teams of the M. E Sunday school is now on, and so many junk gatherers were never seen in Bondsville before. Leslie Banister captains the red and Harold Albro captains the blue, and at all times in the day may he seen children of all sizes with baskets and carts eagerly searching for newspapers, magazines and rubbers. Everyone seems glad and willing to help along the good cause.

too much concerned over the getting ont to enjoy the really fine view far down the canyon.

Here were pointed ont what were supposed to he turkey roosts, for turkey bones are found together with those of sheep in the debris, hence the conclusion that they domesticated both sheep and turkeys There are 25 rooms and one kiva in the Balcony House. As we looked from the ruin down the base of the cliff someone remarked that this must have been the bachelor headquarters, for certainly it was no place for children

When we reached camp we found a too-friendly squirrel had made way with the bread, so the guide added some of his excellent biscuit to the menu. There was a charm about that pleasant camp among the cedars upon the brink of the canyon which made us loath to leave it, for it is seldom one can go 25 miles from the sound of the telephone and the railroad and enjoy, with congenial companions, a carefree life, wandering among ruins of a race who had their homes in the fastnesses of the cliffs.

The return trip to Mancos was made without incident. We found our carriage undisturbed at the foot of the mesa, and also the various articles we had left at the camp, for there is a courtesy and good comradship about all travelers in these mountain districts which respects the possessions of others.

For the comfort of mind of those who contemplate a trip to Mesa Verde it may be well to state that a survey for a carriage road up the cliff has been made, and when it is decided h the powers at Washington to spend $20,000 upon the building of a road up the 2000 feet of cliff to the mesa the travelers may enjoy the comforts of a cushioned seat rather than a saddle the last 10 miles of the trip.

Our friendly clerk greeted us at the hotel as if we had heen to a far country, and so it seemed to us

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Noah, Ky. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from headaches, nervous prostration, and hemorrhages.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong, so that I can do all my housework, and attend to the store and post-office, and I feel much younger than I really am.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all kinds of female troubles, and I feel that I can never praise it enough." — MRS. LIZZIE HOLLAND, Noah, Ky.

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills — inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

We never publish a testimonial without the special permission of the writer, and then only when we are sure it is genuine. Such testimony should create confidence in all suffering women.

FOOTBALL.

Monson 0, Independents 0.

A large number attended the game between Monson and the Wesleyan Independents on the Norcross field at Monson Monday. The teams were very evenly matched, neither being able to score, although the honors belong to Monson, as the ball was kept in Wesleyan territory every minute of the first half, and all but a few minutes of the second half. The work of Harding, Iwado and Kerrigan was commendable, but it was team-work that made Monson show to such good advantage. The line-up:

WARREN.

At the meeting of the board of selectmen Monday Thomas Manning was appointed weigher of coal.

George Dempsey has taken a position in the repair department of the Knox Automobile Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Sirrell Brosseau went to Providence the first of the week to attend the funeral of his brother, Theodore H. Brosseau, who formerly lived in Warren.

Arcturus lodge of Odd Fellows conferred the second degree on four candidates last evening. Wednesday evening the first degree team of the lodge went to Palmer and conferred the degree for the Palmer lodge.

Warren Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, held a special meeting Wednesday evening and conferred the first and second degrees on two candidates. At the regular meeting this evening the third and fourth degrees will be conferred on a class of 25 candidates.

Dr. C. A. Deland removed Peter Kozura and Miss Anna Locka, both of whom live in the brick block on Main street in West Warren, to St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester last Friday. Both had been ill for a week with what threatened to be serious cases of typhoid fever, and it seemed best to get them into a hospital where they would have the best care. The journey was made from West Warren to Worcester in a taxicab.

At a meeting of the American Benefit Society last Friday evening, these officers were installed by District Deputy James P. Smith of Springfield: President, William F. Taylor; vice president, Mrs. Albert Woodard; orator, Mrs. John M. Drake; past president, John M. Drake; secretary, Mrs. B. Frank Dillaher; collector, Albert Woodard; treasurer, George Coolege; chaplain, Mrs. Albert Woodard; marshall, Henry A. Perry; warden, James Riddle; sentinel, Frank Lincoln. Following the installation there was a musical and literary entertainment and refreshments were served.

A choral union has been organized and these officers chosen: President, William Hallows; secretary and treasurer, Frank W. Bliss; executive committee, Miss Susie Dexter, Miss Sarah Cavanaugh and Alexander A. Gendron; librarian, Henry Forrant; musical director, Dana Pratt of Worcester. The meetings will be held Monday evenings in Memorial Hall. Among the members are Mrs. Charles L. Kent, Miss Dorothy Smith, Miss Frances Morgan, Miss Carrie Benson, Miss Susie McCorrison, Miss Ellene McKelligett, Mrs. G. Lewis Covell, Joseph Perry, S. N Cutler, Leslie Anoney, Adelbert Martin and Herbert Tarbell.

Stops Neuralgia Pains

The shooting, tearing pains of neuralgia are caused by excitement of the nerves. Sciatica is also a nerve pain.

Sloan's Liniment, a soothing external application, stops neuralgia pains at once, quiets the nerves, relieves that feeling of numbness which is often a warning of paralysis, and by its tonic effect on the nervous and muscular tissues, gives permanent as well as immediate relief.

One Application Relieved the Pain.

Mr. J. C. LEE, of 1100 Ninth St. S. E., Washington, D. C., writes: — "I advised a lady who was a great sufferer from neuralgia to try Sloan's Liniment. After one application the pain left her and she has not been troubled with it since."

The Food of Vim and Energy

One plateful of MOTHER'S OATS will produce more vim and vigor and energy and action—more vitality, more enthusiasm and more endurance, than many times the same bulk of meat, fish, fowl, or cereals of lower food value. MOTHER'S OATS are different from other's oats and different from ordinary oatmeal. They are put up in sanitary sealed packages. But there's more to MOTHER'S OATS than the package; they are the best oats in the world, the best selection of the best crops. Every batch that comes to our mills is screened and only the ripe, big grains are marketed. They are not only sterilized, but steamed (to burst the proteid cells); then rolled (to render the cooking easy), and after that, MOTHER'S OATS are crushed (to hasten their digestion)—easy work for the stove, easy work for the stomach and more work for the man.

There's a coupon in every package of Mother's Cereals. You can collect enough of them in a little while to own a Fireless Cooker for nothing. Your grocer will tell you how to get it free. There are a number of ways and all of them make it worth while to buy Mother's Cereals: Mother's Oats, Mother's Corn Meal (white or yellow), Mother's Wheat Hearts (the cream of the wheat), Mother's Hominy Grits, Mother's Corn Flakes (toasted), Mother's Coarse Pearl Hominy, Mother's Old Fashioned Steel Cut Oatmeal, Mother's Old Fashioned Graham Flour.

THE SELECTMEN OF PALMER GIVE THEMSELVES A WEIGH.

THIS cartoon is supposed to represent a scene in Main street of Palmer. The three distinguished gentlemen on the hay scales may or may not bear some resemblance to the honorable board of selectmen. The other characters in the picture speak for themselves, especially the groups of protesting citizens. What is it all about? you ask. Simply this and nothing more:

Palmer is a growing and prosperous town. Its citizens appreciate that with growth comes added responsibilities. They agree with Prof. Zeublin that civic improvements are not incompatible with business development. Hence they decided to make their town as attractive as possible, and to this end they have gone to considerable expense, to wit, $15,000, to pave their Main street with vitrified brick.

Desirous of doiug a good job they persuaded the water company to lay new mains under the paved portion of the street that leaks might not occur to necessitate ripping up the pavemeut. They also prevailed on the telephone company to put its wires under ground, and at their earnest request, the electric light company found new locations for its poles. The gas company also put in new leak-proof pipes, and even the street railway company caught the spirit of municipal progressiveness, put in new rails and agreed to pave between them. All these things were matters of great rejoicing to the good people of Palmer. But when it came to removiug the hay scales that occupy considerable space midway between the car track and the curb, the beautification of Palmer received a rude jolt.

The selectmen could not see why the scales should go. Had they not been there for some 20 years, and were they not convenient for the ice man who draws his daily load to the Armour branch, and did not the coal man and the hay man find them equally convenient? Of course they did, and if you doubt it, you can find five citizens of Palmer who share this view. What boots it, then, that all the rest of Palmer wants the scales removed, or of what avail should be the resolutions unanimously passed by the Palmer Business Men's club!

It has been pointed out that there is some impropriety in granting private rights in a public street, and if the scales remain for 20 years more some doubt exists whether any authority can be found in law to compel their removal, but the selectmen seemingly care little for this phase of the situation. They believe in hay scales, and in their estimation no place in Palmer is too good for such scales. If the street all around the scales is paved, so much the better for the scales. Furthermore, the selectmen are good fellows, who would rather the matter of removing the scales should be settled in town meeting than lose the esteem of those who have occasion to use the scales.

Whether the three selectmen, plus the five other citizens, will be able to maintain the scales in their present location against the wishes of all the rest of the people is a matter for the future to determine. At any rate, our cartoonist has given to the selectmen food for thought, and he has perhaps contributed something to the gayety of life in Palmer.

From the Springfield Union, Saturday, Nov. 20.

HAY SCALES WILL STAY.

Selectmen Make No Reply to Business Club's Protest.

BUT OLD LOCATION BEING FIXED UP

Scales Will Have Brick Surface When Completed. Work Being Done at Fillmore's Expense.

The work of paving Main street, which was interrupted by the snow storm of Wednesday, was resumed this morning and is being pushed as rapidly as possible. It is expected that, with the exception of the space about the new horse bowl which the Business and Social Club is to present to the town, and the space about the hay scales, the laying of the brick will be completed to-morrow night. The work of cementing will take a little longer

The hay scales are to remain in the center of the traveled way notwithstanding vigorous efforts to have them removed. The feeling against their retention in the present location is very strong and indulged in by a very great majority of the business men of the place. When it was announced that the scales were likely to be allowed to remain in the street the Palmer Business and Social Club, which assumes the functions of a board of trade, took the matter up. First the village improvement committee of the club discussed the situation and recommended that the club ask for the removal of the scales. The club adopted the resolution and two weeks ago sent a communication to that effect to the selectmen, but up to the present time no notice has been taken of it by the board; that is, no reply has been received by the club, either by the acknowledgment of the receipt of the communication or stating whether any action has been taken. However, the action of Mr. Fillmore, the owner of the scales, gives the answer, and that is that the scales will stay.

Mr Fillmore is building a concrete wall around the pit occupied by the machinery of the scales. This is in the original location, and not about four feet nearer the sidewalk, as has been suggested if they are to remain in the street. New scales have been secured, and when completed the surface will be covered with brick, thus conforming to the rest of the surface of the street. This work is being done at Mr. Fillmore's expense.

This does not settle the matter by any means, if the present temper of those who oppose the street location holds good until the annual meeting in March. It is freely talked that the matter will be brought before the voters at this meeting, and if present indications hold good there will be numerous arguments for their ultimate removal.

WARREN.

Mrs. Mary L. Hastings is spending the week with Dr. and Mrs. Robert W. Hastings of Brookline.

Mrs. George M. Faulkner of Brookline is spending the week with her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Ramsdell.

Mrs. Herman Chapin and daughter of Pine Meadow, Ct., have been guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs Ira M. White.

Miss Priscilla Shumway and Harry Scott of Holyoke spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Sibley of Main street.

Warriner Bliss was pleasantly surprised at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Bliss on Washington street Tuesday evening. He was presented with a fountain pen. Refreshments were served and the evening spent in playing games.

Arthur Price, who is on a furlough from the Massachusetts nautical training ship Enterprise, and is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Gilbert of Southbridge street, was given a party Monday evening in honor of his 17th birthday. He was presented with a handsome silver clothes brush by Robin Harwood in behalf of those present.

A regular meeting of Warren Grange was held last Friday evening, guests being present from West Brookfield, Ware, Brimfield, Sturbridge and Southbridge. The occasion was the conferring of the third and fourth degrees upon 25 candidates, which brings the membership up to 187. The third degree was conferred by the regular officers. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Bordeaux, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bliss and Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Bliss, and a social hour was enjoyed.

WEST WARREN.

Death of Miss Fannie Conroy.

Miss Fannie Conroy, 36, died last Friday evening at her home on North street of heart disease, which culminated in cerebral embolism. Miss Conroy had been in poor health for some time, and Thursday, the 11th, she was taken seriously ill at her millinery parlors in Warren, and was removed to her home in a semi-conscious condition. She had been confined to her home since that time, but seemed to be gaining every day. The second attack was unexpected and she rallied but a few moments. Miss Conroy had conducted a millinery parlor in Warren for the past 15 years. She was a member of Court Warren circle, Companions of the Forest. She is survived by one sister, Miss Annie Conroy. The funeral was held Monday morning at 9 in St. Thomas' church and burial was in Ware.

Rev. J. P. Hess, pastor of the Methodist church, is spending 10 days with his mother in Glencoe, O.

Edward M. Prindle, who lives on the Tagan farm on the North street extension, was painfully injured Monday. He was at work over a sick cow, when the animal unexpectedly developed additional strength, and with a vicious kick, knocked him over on the barn floor. He was carried to the house and Dr. H. H. Moore summoned. It was found upon examination that his right leg was broken above the knee and again between the knee and the ankle. It will be some time before Mr. Prindle is able to attend to his farm duties.

A blaze was discovered Sunday evening about 10 o'clock in the large pile of flax waste belonging to the Warren power and mills company. In a short time the firemen had a stream on the fire and soon had it under control, although it was necessary to keep the water pouring into the pile until morning before the fire was entirely extinguished. The loss is difficult to determine, as the stock is all used, but there is no insurance. The fire is supposed to have caught from a spark from the railroad, but it is quite possible that it is from spontaneous combustion. Fire broke out in the same pile two weeks ago Sunday about noon, but it was soon extinguished without great loss.

CAMP GROUND MARKED.

Monument For Gathering Place of Soldiers of Three Wars.

In the midst of a storm of driving sleet and snow Wednesday afternoon, the memorial tablet erected by the Woman's Improvement Society of the Old Center was dedicated. Mrs. Ella King Ogle, president of the society, in their behalf, presented the tablet to the town. Selectman George S. Holden, in a few well-chosen words, accepted the gift.

The tablet is of Quincy granite, about two feet and six inches long, eighteen inches wide and two feet high. It is rock face, with a polished surface for the inscription, which is as follows: "To commemorate this camping ground of our soldiers of the French and Indian wars, the Revolution, and the War of 1812." It is erected on a little triangular plot on the common, across the way from and facing the old Friuk tavern. This old common was the place where the soldiers for the Colonial wars, the War of the Revolution and the War of 1812 were mustered into service. To the west about an eighth of a mile was located the old muster field, where the Minute Men were trained previous to the War of the Revolution. From this common, on the 20th of April, 1775, 44 men under the command of Capt. David Spear, marched to the defense of Boston. News of the battle of Lexington had been received the previous evening.

After the presentation of the tablet, the party adjourned to the schoolhouse, where the remaining exercises were held. The children, under the leadership of Miss May Mahoney, sang patriotic songs. Mrs Ella King Ogle introduced J. B. Stone, president of the Palmer Historical Society, who congratulated the ladies upon their success in erecting the monument. He also expressed, in behalf of the Historical Society and of the Grand Army of the Republic, the thanks of those organizations for the work which had been done. He said in part: That the monument commemorated the work of the soldiers of three wars, each of which was a righteous and an inevitable war. He spoke of the result of the colonial wars in settling the possession of New England; of the Revolutionary War in the establishment of the right of the people to rule, and said that it was the beginning of the free government of the people by the people. He prophesied that ere the dawn of the 21st century there would be another universal holiday which would be celebrated as broadly as that of Christmas or the Fourth of July; the one was the beginning of religious life and the other the commencement of free government. He said that the colonial wars gave to the colonies English laws and English speaking people and an English government.

O. P. Allen was the next speaker. He expressed the same congratulations to the club on the accomplishment of their work. He said in part: That the erection of a monument was not a matter of sentiment. It is a mark of patriotism or of filial love. The present memorial was erected in a spirit of patriotism in memory of those who fought bravely in the years gone by. The erection of monuments was not a new thing, but we find that they have been erected throughout the past ages. This particular part of Palmer is one of the richest in historic value in the town, and contains many interesting mementoes of the past. One hundred and eighty-five years ago it was a primeval forest and was settled in 1725 by four men. Seven years later the first tavern, Quinton tavern, was erected, and four years later John Thompson erected another upon the spot where the present Friuk tavern now stands; in 1725 the first church was built on the little plot opposite the schoolhouse, and for 70 years the religious and civil affairs of the town were conducted within its walls. In those days there were but 600 or 700 people in town, and yet it was continually sending men to the Revolutionary War. He also spoke of the adoption of the local Declaration of Independence three weeks before the memorable document adopted at Philadelphia July 4, 1776.

George S. Holden congratulated the children upon their efforts in the singing of patriotic songs, and spoke of the value of the teaching of patriotism on their future lives.

D L Bodfish was next and said that the erection of a monument like the one located was of value in two ways, first as a reminder of what our country had cost and of the sacrifices of the men who in the years gone by have marched out from this village over the hills of Massachusetts and Vermont to drive back the savage foe that were threatening our homes; and secondly it is of value as teaching us our own duty in the future. We have had transmitted to us as a heritage the nation which we now enjoy, and it is our duty to see that it is passed on to the next generation with its name untarnished.

BRIMFIELD.

Miss Cox of Mattapan is the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. D. Llucolu.

Mrs W. C. Lawton of Springfield has been spending a few days at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hitchcock entertained about 30 friends and neighbors Saturday evening, the occasion being the 20th anniversary of their marriage. Refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs Hitchcock were presented with two handsome oak rocking chairs.

George A. Harris of Cambridge, a former agent at the union station here, called on Palmer friends Wednesday.

"COFFIN NAIL" BLAZE.

Carelessly Tossed Cigarette Starts Fire, But Soon Discovered.

Thanksgiving merrymakers were rudely startled about 8 30 last evening by an alarm from box 68, at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, the heart of the business section. A round from this box always draws a large audience, with visions of fire in basements or under good headway in some dangerous spot, and there was no exception in this instance Even the early comers were happily disappointed however, for the fire was all out and hardly a trace of smoke even was left to tell the tale.

The fire was in the cellar of the corner store in the Converse block, occupied by J. F. Foley as a grocery, and was in a pile of empty potato sacks. One was burned, but that was about the extent of the damage. The blaze originated in a peculiar manner. A portion of the office of the Converse House, next door, is over the cellar, and in making changes a long time ago a sink in the room was removed, but the hole in the floor, through which the pipe passed, was not covered. Last evening someone threw into that corner under the stairs a partly-smoked cigarette; it dropped through the hole in the floor and onto the pile of sacks and got busy. Occupants of the office smelled the smoke which began to arise and promptly investigated. The fire was found and put out with hand chemical extinguishers before the department had time to respond to the alarm.

HAMPDEN.

The oldest son of George Dio fell from the piazza of his home one day last week and was severely bruised.

Melvin Mulroney has been spending the week with his parents. He returned to Lowell, N. Y., to-day.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Grace Union church has extended a call to Thomas E Williams of Hartford theological seminary to become its pastor. Mr Williams has accepted the call, and will enter upon his duties the first Sunday in December.

The Wednesday afternoon whist club met at the home of Mrs. F. A. Fuller on Maple street Tuesday instead of Wednesday as usual. Miss Marjorie Perry won first prize and Mrs. L G. Stacy took second prize.

Mr. and Mrs H. M. Green held an old-fashioned husking bee in their large barn in East Wilbraham last Friday evening, over 150 being present. After a quantity of corn was husked, dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Francis B. Green and Mrs. Sackett of Springfield, assisted by local talent, with prompting by Mr. Connor of Palmer. Refreshments were served.

PALMER NEWS.

OFF AGAIN, ON AGAIN.

Train Service Restored at Request of Business Club.

A change of time which went into effect on the Boston and Albany railroad last Sunday dropped two trains which had been making the Palmer stop, the 8.06 a. m. train east, and the 6.23 p. m. west, both expresses. This left Palmer with a decidedly "rotten" service, for there was no express for Boston between 6.58 and 9.32 in the morning, and no express from Boston making the Palmer stop between 3.48 and 7.58 in the evening. Former trains carried many people from this section who had business in Boston. The Palmer Business and Social Club took the matter up with the passenger department of the road, with the result that, commencing last evening, the 8.06 a. m. express east and the 6.23 express for the west, will stop at Palmer. These will take the place of the other trains, which have been discontinued for the season.

Sunday School Juniors' Good Work.

Ever since the burning of the Congregational church last February and the start of the building fund for a new structure, the Junior department of the Sunday school has been hard at work to raise funds. This has been done in numerous ways, the classes, with the assistance of their teachers, holding sales, etc., with the intent of turning over the money to the general fund. A generous church member agreed to double any sum the Juniors might raise up to $100, and last week was called upon to make good the promise to the amount of $100, the announcement being made Sunday that the Junior department of the Sunday school had contributed $200 to the building fund of the church.

Baseball Pictures at Elite.

Among the pictures to be shown at the Elite this evening and to-morrow afternoon and evening will be a film showing scenes in the games for the world's championship between the Pittsburgs and Detroits, recently played. These will naturally attract all lovers of the national sport, and performances will be given at 7, 8 and 9 o'clock, sharp. To-morrow afternoon there will be a matinee from 2.15 to 5.15 to which children will be admitted free if accompanied by parents.

Horse Bowl Ordered.

The contract for the horse bowl for Main street, which the Palmer Business and Social Club last week voted to present to the town has been awarded to the William N. Flynt Granite Company of Monson. The stone will come from the quarries at Stonington, Maine, and will be mottled granite with a pink tinge. The front will have a panel inscribed, "Erected by the P. B. and S. Club, 1909." It is expected to be ready about the last of the month.

Men's League Meeting.

State Forester F. W. Rane will address the Men s League of the Congregational church in Memorial Hall next Tuesday evening at 8 o clock. His subject will be "Forestry." All men interested are cordially invited to be present.

Miss Elizabeth Smith is visiting relatives in New York.

Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Gibbs spent Thanksgiving in Somerville.

Mrs. S. C. Hunt is spending the week with friends in Vermont.

Joseph Rogers of Ware has taken a position with the street railway company.

Rev. W. A. Moore and family of Meriden, Ct., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fish.

Mrs. William Granger of Park street spent Thanksgiving Day with her daughter in Brookfield.

Charles L. Waid has brought his launch from the Connecticut river to his home in Palmer for the winter.

Preston Thomas of Warren, Pa., has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Theodore Norman of Pearl street, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Jones and children were guests yesterday at the home of H. W. Burbank in Wilbraham.

Mr. and Mrs. William Whiting of the Forest Lake district entertained Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Scott and family yesterday.

Joseph F. Butler and daughter Helen of Fitchburg spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Holbrook on North Main street.

Miss Rose Duffy and Miss Beatrice Dillon of the Westfield Normal school are spending the Thanksgiving recess at their homes here.

Harry Leedham has received an appointment as special officer in the town of Ludlow during the strike, and began duty Tuesday.

There will be a special convocation of Hampden chapter Tuesday evening, when there will be a visitation. A collation will follow the meeting.

Mrs. Silvia Rossean of Westford, Vt., with her son and daughter, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. Fortier at Palmer Center. They will live in Palmer.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. O. C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

John Barrett, of nowhere in particular and many places in general, was convicted in the district court Wednesday of vagrancy and sent to Bridgewater.

John Foley of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Foley of Park street, a part of the week.

A house call was rung in Saturday evening at 5.30, summoning the department to a fire on Mt Dumplin, started probably by a spark from a passing engine. Considerable territory was burned over.

Mrs. Jane Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Sherman and son Donald of Ware, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hamilton and son James of Forest Lake spent yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hamilton on Park street.

Mrs Jennie Rokenbaugh of New York has been a guest this week of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Eager of Walnut street. Mr. Rokenhaugh was in town today. F L Eager of Waterbury, Ct., was also a guest there yesterday.

Among those who attended the Harvard—Yale football game Saturday from Palmer were Judge T. W. Kenefick, J. B. Stone, E. E. Hobson, J. F. Foley, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Holbrook, J. L. Stone, Miss Margaret Stone and Dr. B. E. Loring.

Mrs. Mina Morgan has bought of William E. Cary of Spencer the "Caryl" house on North Main street, now occupied by Dr. S. R. Carsley. Mrs. Morgan will take possession in the near future and it is understood will conduct a boarding house.

"The Forgiveness of Sins" is the subject of the sermon by the pastor of the Congregational church at the service next Sunday. Sunday school meets at 2 o'clock, church service at 3.15, C. E. service at 7; subject of the meeting, "Life Lessons for Me from First John."

The entire $15,000 stock of goods in the Bodfish store is to be disposed of in ten days, beginning next Wednesday, December 1, by G. W. Groves & Co. of Buffalo, N. Y. The store is closed for a remarking of the stock, and will remain closed until the opening of the sale.

The union Thanksgiving service of Protestant churches was held in the Baptist church yesterday morning. Rev. W. A. Moore read the scriptures, and prayer was offered by Rev. C. W. Williams. Rev. F. S Brewer took for his subject "A wise use of our inheritance."

The Veteran Firemen had only a small attendance at their dance Wednesday evening, due without doubt to the inclement weather. Although not numerous, those who attended had the usual good time which goes with these functions when managed by the Major Morgans.

The trolleymen's ball last Friday evening in the opera house was well attended. The gold watch to be given the most popular ball player in the Palmer Town League was awarded to E. F. Furkey of Thorndike, who received 897 votes, with D. Foley of Palmer, second, with 803.

Miss Lillie M. Allen, daughter of O. P. Allen of Church street, who has held the position of assistant postmaster in Deerfield for the past six years, has passed the civil service examinations, and has received the appointment of postmaster at Deerfield, to succeed the late Mr. Cowles, deceased.

The Baptist church services next Sunday will be as follows: Prayer meeting at 10.15, morning worship and sermon on "The Church and the Work," at 10 45. Sunday school at 12, Y. P. S. C. E at 6, evening praise service and sermon on "A Useless Fire Escape," at 7 o'clock. All are invited to these services.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's church will hold its annual fair in the church parlors the afternoons and evenings of December 7 and 8. The sale will begin each afternoon at 4 and will continue throughout the evening. The first evening a turkey supper will be served at 6 30, and the second evening there will be two farces, with music.

Mrs. Carrie E. Bird, 53, daughter of Mrs. Julia B. and the late Stillman B. Ellis, died yesterday at the home of her mother on Central street. She leaves, besides her mother, one sister, Mrs Minnie Converse. The funeral will be held at the home to-morrow afternoon at 2 30 and burial will be in the family lot in the Palmer cemetery on Thorndike street.

The turkeys offered to the two women who guessed nearest the total attendance at the Palmer Opera House for the two weeks ending last Saturday night were awarded Monday evening to Mrs. J. P. Robarge of Knox street and Mrs. E. W. Taylor of Park street. The vaudeville act for the last of this week is by Burney and Chapman, comedians, character singing and dancing.

Charles B. Doherty, who has been sick at his home on Park street for several weeks with typhoid fever, was removed to the Springfield hospital yesterday morning, the trip being made in the ambulance of that institution. The fever ran its course some days ago, but complications arose which made an operation necessary. An abscess formed in the side, aggravated, it is thought, by the injury received some time ago, when he was knocked by an automobile from the running board of the car on which he was acting as conductor.

Frank H. Lee of Palmer was elected one of the trustees of the newly-formed Western Massachusetts Society of Optometrists in Springfield last Friday evening. Optometry is defined as being "The employment of any method or means, other than the use of drugs, medicine or surgery, for the measurement of eye conditions and the adaptation of lenses for their aid." The new society will assist in obtaining legislation tending to regulate the practice of optometry and raise the standard of all who attempt to examine the eyes.

Mrs. Sarah B. Atwood, 95, widow of Samuel Atwood, a resident of Three Rivers for many years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry M. Stebbins, in New Haven Monday. Mrs. Atwood leaves, besides her daughter, one son, James B. Atwood of Springfield; four grandchildren, Mrs. J. J. Rafter of Newark, N. J, Mrs. L. A. Flynt of New York, Mrs. Carl Johnson of New Haven, and Miss Edith Stebbins of New Haven, Ct; four great-grandchildren, Miss Endocia F. Flynt and Lyon K. Flynt of New York, Rufus Flynt of Palmer and Carl Johnson of New Haven, and one great-great-grandchild, Miss Constance Flynt of Palmer. The funeral was held in New Haven Wednesday morning and the body was brought to Palmer for burial in the Four Corners cemetery.

A regular meeting of Thomas lodge was held Monday evening in Masonic hall at 7.30. At 8 the lodge was opened to the public, and the newly-elected officers were installed by Chauncey E. Peck of Wilbraham, grand lecturer, assisted by Byram Woodhead, as marshall. The Gatchell mandolin quartet of Springfield furnished music. Refreshments were served after the installation to the guests of the lodge. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Worshipful master, Joseph F. Davis; senior warden, Charles L. Wald; junior warden, Charles M. Kempton; treasurer, Charles A. Tabor; secretary, David L Bodfish; chaplain, Edward B. Taylor; marshal, Frank H. Lee; senior deacon, Lee T. Grey; junior deacon, Albert C. Martineau; senior steward, James T. Campbell; junior steward, James Wilson; inner sentinel, Albert Fenton; organist, Harrie M. Howe; tyler, James Knox. Thomas A. McCrea, the retiring master, was presented a gold past master's jewel.

PALMER CENTER.

T. Johnstone is on the sick list.

There was a pleasant gathering at the home of Miss Mahoney Wednesday evening, members of her class in school being present.

After dedicating the marker Wednesday a bountiful collation was served for club members and their families at the home of Mrs. Reuben Lamb.

The New Superior Court Justice—Interesting Election Figures—Boston Mayoralty Candidates—Taxation Commission Meeting.

BOSTON, Nov. 24, 1909.

Charles F. Jenney, whom Gov. Draper has nominated to-day to be justice of the superior court in the place of the late Judge Robert R. Bishop, deceased, commands the respect of those who have been familiar with his career in the Legislature His record in the Senate in 1907 and 1908 was such as to mark him as a man of high character and solid ability. He will not be a showy judge, but he will be of just the class which has maintained the dignity of the bench ever since the constitution was adopted. He is by nature a conservative, and his associations have been in the same line. So it remains to be seen what he will do when questions come before him which involve the radical tendencies of the times. In way of professional career, experience and standing, there was ample warrant for nominating him Governor Draper seems to have considered Worcester county, in the willingness to nominate City Solicitor Vaughan of Worcester, as much as due regard to other counties required.

In addition to the official figures of the state election, which were given out to-day by the governor and council, there are certain comparisons and observations which the reader is left to make for himself. Draper's vote of 190,186, while 7034 more than the 182,352 of Vahey, is yet 5320 less than a majority of the total of 391,013 which was cast, including the 16 scattering, When put into the form of percentages, Draper had 48 69 per cent of the total, while Vahey had 46 61 per cent. This is the closest the Democrats have come for a long time. The official computation of percentages for the election of 1908 gives Draper 51 59 per cent of the total vote Vahey had exactly 38. Osgood, candidate of the Independence League, had 5.22; Carey of Haverhill, Socialist, had 3.26; Wylie, Prohibitionist, had 1.35; Hoar of Worcester, Socialist Labor, had 0 58 per cent. For the year before, Guild, for governor, had 50 33 per cent. The combined vote of Hisgen, Whitney and Bartlett amounted to 45 68 per cent; the Socialist, John W. Brown of Worcester, had 2 04 per cent, and the other parties still less. So that it is evident that this election leaves the field of next year to be more stoutly contested than for a long time. The drop in the Republican vote from 51.59 per cent to 48 69 and the rise of Vahey's from 38 to 46 61, or a difference of only 2 08 per cent, or so that 1 04 per cent of the total vote will tie the parties and anything over that for the Democrats will elect their man is such a showing that is sure to make the parties play politics all the time from now on, and will force the campaign early next fall.

In view of the apparent certainty that Draper and Frothingham will head the Republican ticket again, and the probability that Vahey and Foss will lead on the Democratic side, further peculiarities of the official vote are to be brought out. Frothingham was the lowest of the six candidates on the Republican state ticket. Draper was next to the lowest and Draper was 12,019 votes under the vote of Secretary of State Olin, who stood first with 202,205. On the other hand, Vahey and Foss ran very far ahead of their fellow candidates on the ticket. Vahey's 182,252 was 38,277 higher than the highest of the four minor candidates, James H. Bryan of Westfield, the candidate for treasurer, while Foss had 180,659, or 1593 below Vahey. The lowest Democratic vote on the ticket was 138,781 for Alexis Boyer, Jr. of Southbridge, the candidate for auditor. The fair Democratic party straight vote was, therefore, about 140,000. The figures show Vahey's strength and also Foss's.

These figures will go far to settle the question whether Vahey shall be the Democratic nominee next year. He has made a remarkable run. Some people say that if Hamlin had been nominated he could have been elected. But it is to be remembered that Vahey got many votes which Hamlin would probably not have got, and the unwisdom of throwing overboard such a candidate as Vahey proved himself this year, is evident to the practical politicians.

One of the consequences of the closeness of the election seems to be the changed attitude of the Republicans toward direct nominations, if the support of Speaker Walker for that proposition indicates the attitude of the party. Senator Lodge has been active against direct nominations and the Republicans have used their influence to defeat the bill. But the plan of Speaker Walker to let the matter be settled by each district for itself, establishing a local option on the change, shows that the Republican managers will make some concessions to popular sentiment the coming year.

In Boston politics, it is all confusion. Yet this developement which is in progress is of large importance to the country, for here is one of the largest cities in the country, just trying a new charter in this era of charter-making, which may be the solution of the great problem, or it may be—and that seems more likely—the warning which will prevent other reformers from passing this way again. By putting Mr. Brand in nomination for the new city council of nine, the managers have reduced the mayoralty candidates to five. Only three of these are serious, those of Storrow, the candidate of the citizens' municipal league, Hibbard, the present mayor, and Fitzgerald, the predecessor of Hibbard, whose lapses were so set forth by the commission that the new charter was the result of their agitation.

This Boston campaign is of high rank as a precedent, and it concerns the remainder of the large cities how this unique effort at municipal reform works itself out. Nominating conventions are abolished, and one consequence is that there are about 20 mayoralty candidates in the field. About 35 papers were taken out, but the candidates are said to be about a score. With the withdrawal to-day of Chairman Brand of the aldermen, who has been entered for one of the new council of nine members, only the above-named three are to be considered. The new charter abolishes partisan politics, or it is supposed to do so. But the Republican city committee have under consideration the plan of indorsing Storrow, while it is a question whether the Democrats shall back Fitzgerald. There is nothing to forbid, whether they do not. Will this supposed valuable reform prove wholly futile? That is the question. At any rate, party designations cannot appear on the ballot, but most voters will know who their party candidate is.

Another consequence of abolishing party politics and putting it upon each candidate to get 5000 names to his nomination papers is that the candidates do not seem to represent any principle or body of men, but the campaign seems to be a personal scramble between the candidates. The only exception is that there is a Citizens' Municipal League behind Storrow, but even his personal headquarters are separate from those of the league. Again, the campaign for the nine councillors is independent of the campaign for mayor, and, again, there is no identification of candidates with any principle or policy of administration. Confusion reigns and it is a personal scramble for positions. Perhaps the situation will clear up before the election January 11, but it does not yet appear to be any great superiority in the new charter. December 17 is the last day for getting names on nomination papers.

To-day the special commission on taxation has been listening to arguments of prominent publicists and counsel for wealthy interests. The Boston chamber of commerce has been represented by John C. Cobb, chairman of the committee on taxation. Professor Charles J. Bullock of Harvard University, who was a member of the taxation commission two years ago, is their specialist before this commission. Ex Judge James R. Dunbar represents, as counsel, the legislative committee of merchants and manufacturers Ex-Mayor Matthews, who spoke so long and strongly last week against the pending constitutional amendment to permit the three mill tax, was on hand. So was Thomas Hills, former chairman of the Boston assessors, and others. It is evident that this discussion aims to reach the bottom of the subject. It still looks as if the pending amendment, whose purpose is to secure the three-mill tax, were to be defeated. As it had a vote of 156 to 30 last year, it would seem as if it were sure of passing. But there was no particular opposition to it. then. This time there is plenty of fight and it is a hard task to get two votes to one.

This is the last week of the exposition under the auspices of the Boston 1915 movement. It has been a very instructive display, and those who have not seen its vast accumulation of material for the study of civic betterment would do well to take advantage of the last day which remains. There is a great deal of energy in the management and something good seems sure to come out of this effort to put Boston further to the front. There is nothing to hinder every other city in the state from picking up many points for its own advantage.

Day before Thanksgiving finds a cold, driving northeast snowstorm, marking a phenomenal drop from the summer temperature of yesterday forenoon. Turkeys are too high for many to reach, and it promises to be a dull holiday for many.

Receives Four Months' Sentence.

Joseph Saletnek, a Polish merchant, who created considerable excitement Saturday and who sent a threatening letter to William J. Irwin, paymaster for the G. W. Gilbert Manufacturing company, was arraigned in the district court Monday morning. He pleaded guilty to the charges of drunkenness and disturbing the peace and was sentenced to four months in the house of correction. Judge Davis also ordered that he furnish bonds of $500 to keep the peace for one year on his release from confinement. About a week ago Saletnek called at the office of the Gilbert company and asked to see one of the employes against whom he had a bill. Mr. Irwin told him that it was against the rules to call anyone from their work for such a purpose. Saletnek became abusive and was ordered to leave at once, which he did, but returned in about an hour, leaving a letter for Mr. Irwin, containing a threat to "get even." Saturday afternoon Saletnek drove to Mr Irwin's home on South street and rang the bell. He stood on the veranda and his actions were so peculiar that he attracted the attention of passersby. He was asked to state his errand and a Polish boy was called upon to act as interpreter. Saletnek meanwhile continued loud talking, and fearing he might pull out a knife or other weapon the police were summoned. Saletnek suddenly ran to his team and drove furiously down the street. Officer Rennison followed him to Water street, and after a strenuous time succeeded in overpowering Saletnek, and brought him to the station. He was searched and a knife was found in one pocket. Saletnek has a court record, and has participated in stabbing affrays in the past, having spent a time in the county jail a few years ago.

Monson News.

HAVE BEEN MARRIED FIFTY YEARS.

Neighbors and Friends Gather Yesterday on East Hill to Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William Holdridge celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at the home of their son, Wilbur H. Holdridge, on East Hill Thursday. The house was prettily decorated in honor of the occasion, and a large number of relatives and friends were present to offer congratulations to the aged couple. The three sons, Wilbur H., Georgie H. and Orrilus P., were there with the six grandchildren; also Mrs. Holdridge's sister, Mrs. Myra Burbank, Mr. and Mrs.

Addison Perry of Vermont, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Parker and daughter of Warren, and Henry Pike of Amherst.

Mrs. Holdridge was before her marriage Charlotte B. Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Parker of Philadelphia, but had spent most of her school days in Monson. Mr. Holdridge was born in Williamstown and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arson Holdridge. He received his education in North Adams schools and came to Monson in 1855. The couple were married in November, 1859, by Rev. Jayson Morse, a Congregational minister of Brimfield. They began housekeeping in Monson in the house that formerly occupied the site of the present Universalist church. Mr. Holdridge worked for the Merrick & Fay Company for thirty winters, following his trade as a painter in the summers. Mr. Holdridge is in very poor health at present, having been confined to the house for seventeen years by paralysis. Mrs. Holdridge is in excellent health except for some trouble with rheumatism. Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge were presented with two purses of gold. Herbert D. Vaille made a fitting presentation speech in behalf of the one given by the neighbors A purse was also received from the fellow workmen of Mr. Holdridge of the Merrick & Fay Company.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Pictures for the Holidays.

The holiday rush has commenced at A. N. Gaouette's studio. From all appearances there will be a large demand for portraits during the next three months, to use as gifts. Owing to the fact that pictures have become a proper and most pleasing article both to give and receive, it has been impossible many times in the past to wait on all who desired work done at my studio. For this reason I desire to inform all those intending to have work done that it is important to come early or at once, as we take extra pains to send out good and satisfactory work.

Scarcity of Water in Rural Districts.

The supply of water in nearly all of the rural districts is gradually becoming exhausted, and the lack of rain has caused a drought which has not been witnessed in this town for over fifty years. The farmers in the vicinity of East Hill seem to be the most seriously affected. The supply at the town farm is causing the selectmen and warden considerable anxiety; the spring which has always given a sufficient supply is so low that there is no available supply near the farm buildings. A large number of stock has always been kept at the town farm and it will be impossible to drive them out to water when the surface water is frozen up in the winter. The board of selectmen have visited the town farm and find the only possible way to obtain water unless there is considerable rain is to get it from some of the small springs which are in the vicinity of the town farm and are not yet affected by the drought.

Given Farewell Party.

Members of the Epworth League and of the choir of the Methodist Episcopal church gave Miss Olive Morgan a surprise party at the residence of Rev. J. M. Gage, pastor of the church, Monday evening. The party met at the church at 7.45 o'clock and went to the parsonage, where Miss Morgan had been invited to tea. The affair was an expression of the esteem in which Miss Morgan is held. She is about to leave town, having resigned as bookkeeper and stenographer for Squier & Co. Miss Morgan is a prominent member of the church and one of its most earnest workers in the different societies, and her departure will be keenly felt. There were games and refreshments, a solo by Miss Lillian Bradway, a reading by Miss Lydia Eaton and a farewell reading by Miss Cora Carew. Miss Morgan was presented with an elegant writing desk. The presentation was made by Rev. J. M. Gage.

Connell—Hopton.

Miss Nellie Connell of Pease avenue and Jesse Hopton of Central Village, Ct., were married yesterday morning at 11 30 at the parsonage of St. Patrick's church, Rev. Thomas O'Keefe performing the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the bride's home on Pease avenue. The bride wore a suit of gray broadcloth, with hat to match. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie Tobin of Providence, R. I., and she wore a suit of blue voile. The best man was John Connell, a brother of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain set with a diamond. Guests were present from Springfield, Providence, R. I., Easthampton, Central Village and Stafford Springs, Ct. Mr. and Mrs. Hopton will remain at the Connell home on Pease avenue for a week; they will make their home in Central Village, where Mr. Hopton is employed in a department store.

Crowley—Roach.

Miss Ella Crowley, daughter of Patrick Crowley of this town, and Edward Roach of Hartford, Ct., were married in Hartford yesterday morning. Miss Annie Crowley of this town was bridesmaid and John Roach of Hartford was best man. Miss Crowley was well known in this town, having lived here until a year ago, when she took a position as stenographer in Hartford. She was a graduate of Monson Academy, class of 1907. The following relatives of the bride from this town attended the wedding: Patrick Crowley of Cushman street, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crowley of Gates street, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Crowley and Mr. and Mrs. John Crowley of Bridge street and Michael and Miss Annie Crowley.

Ryan—Ritter.

Bruno Ritter and Mary A. Ryan, both of this town, were married Tuesday morning at the parsonage of the Catholic church by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe. The bridesmaid was Miss Ellen Ryan, a sister of the bride, and George Ritter of Holyoke, a brother of the groom, was best man. The bride wore a costume of Mediterranean blue chiffon broadcloth, and wore a picture hat to match, and carried an amethyst rosary. The bridesmaid's gown was of catawba fancy broadcloth with hat to match. After a short wedding trip they will live in Monson. The couple received a number of valuable presents, including furniture, cut glass and silverware.

BRIMFIELD.

Congregational Pastor Resigns.

Rev. Samnel Eaton read his resignation as pastor of the Congregational church at the morning service Sunday. The announcement came as a great snrprise to his parishioners, who deeply regret his intention to leave. Mr. Eaton has been active in his pastoral dnties, which he has extended throngh the entire town, and he has been a sympathetic friend in the families that have come nnder his ministrations. In addition to his office as minister of the church in Brimfield Center, Mr. Eaton has served as pastor of the church in East Brimfield for abont two years, preaching there in the afternoon. Previonsly he officiated in the same way as pastor of the Congregational church in Holland. Mr. Eaton has taken an active interest in the affairs of the town. He is a member of the prndential committee of the trnstees of the Academy, a member of the school committee and of the trustees of the public library, and is president of the Brimfield Improvement Society.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mrs. Oleson of Worcester is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Moore.

Miss Dorothy Holland and friend, Miss Wilcox of York, Pa., spent Thanksgiving at the home of Miss Holland.

Mr. Ellenwood, formerly snperintendent of the Belchertown and Enfield schools, was in town Tuesday.

Miss Lillian Barter and Andrew Sears were married Monday morning in Bondsville. Mr Sears is a gradnate of the Belchertown high school. The couple will live in Boston.

News has been received from Mrs. William H. Sanford, who moved to California four years ago, that Philip, her 18 year-old son, had the misfortune to have his right arm broken in three places recently, the elbow having been crnshed by the te der of a tramcar. The boy had presence of mind after he was knocked down to move his head, which only escaped by a few feet.

Services were held Snnday in the Methodist church which has been closed for some time for repairs. The undertaking was planned and partly executed during the closing months of the pastorate of Rev. George R Moody, who left Belchertown last April. His snccessor, Rev. W. T. Hale, entered into the task enthusiastically and assisted effectively in its completion. The alterations and improvements incinded the lowering of the ceiling four feet and covering it with pressed steel of attractive design, decorating the walls and laying the new carpet, costing $220, the gift of the ladies' society. There was considerable painting and varnishing done also, the total cost of the improvements being $1050. Keen interest has been taken in the work, the men of the church giving inmher and labor, while the women and yonng people assisted in every way possible. The service Snnday morning was farnished by a donble quartet, and Dr. J. P. Kennedy of Springfield, district snperintendent, and Rev. E. R. Thorndike gave addresses.

THE GRURING VILLA.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"Whose is that villa?" asked a tourist, pointing to a residence on the Lake of Como. The person questioned replied by a story. And this is the story:

Two men stood on the steamboat landing at Menaggio, on the northern shore of the lake. Herman Trupp, the elder, said to the other, a youngster of twenty:

"Martin, I have something to say to you. You know how near us is the boundary line of Switzerland. Well, for years I have been smuggling goods over the border to the lake and once across it have had no trouble in selling them in Italy. But the government revenue boat which they have recently put on the lake turned its searchlight on me last night while pulling a boat load from shore to shore. I was stopped and arrested. I will be tried, fined and imprisoned. I made a mistake. I should have divided my profits with the revenue officers."

"Well?" said the other

"You wish to marry Sophie Reusser, but you and she are both too poor to marry. I will enable you to wed. I have bribed the officers to give me but six months' imprisonment and to accept a substitute. If you will serve my term for me I will give you 5,000 francs."

Martin Grurring was thoughtful for a time, then said, "I will talk with Sophie about it."

"That I must forbid," said Trupp. "I would not trust a woman with such an important secret."

"But what will she think?"

"Oh, you can tell her you are going away for a short time to earn the wherewithal to set up housekeeping."

The result of this proposal was that Martin acted as Trupp's substitute in prison, first telling Sophie the story that had been suggested. He had no sooner been imprisoned than Trupp told Sophie that her lover was deceiving her—that he had committed a crime for which he was being punished. To prove what he said he took her to the prison where Martin was confined and showed her her lover behind bars. Then he held his wealth, 500,000 francs, up before her as a bait and succeeded in catching her for his wife. Soon after the marriage the couple disappeared from the Como region.

One summer an elderly American gentleman and his wife rode up in their automobile to a hotel in Interlaken, Switzerland, and called for a guide. One was introduced, and the American engaged him to conduct himself and wife to the summit of the Jungfrau. Then the landlord said that he had been a mountaineer in his youth and only one guide was needed. He would himself act as such. The party after proceeding on the mountain railway to the snow line started from there to make the ascent of the peak, the guide in front, the lady next, and the husband in the rear, all bound together by a rope.

At one place in the ascent their path led along the edge of a rock that sloped nearly straight downward on both sides. Suddenly beneath the American's feet the ice gave way and he went down. His wife fell on her face, and the guide, realizing that she would be pulled down by her husband, let himself over the other side for a balance. Suspended thus he at once set about cutting steps and soon secured a foothold. But the American was a heavy man and the rope was greatly strained. At one point it crossed a sharp rock and the efforts of the man hanging over the chasm to save himself gradually wore it thin, and at last it broke. He slid down thousands of feet below to his death.

Meanwhile the guide, foreseeing what must eventually happen, and knowing that when the rope broke the shock might dislodge the lady, had been hacking the ice with his ax and climbing until he had secured a firm position. When the rope parted she fell toward him, and, catching her, he lifted her again into position. Then, when she was sufficiently recovered to stand, he cut his way up to the edge of the rock and the two began to descend. Reaching a point of safety, the lady fell in a faint. The guide caught her in his arms. Placing his flask—all guides carry flasks—to her lips, she revived and met the two eyes of the guide looking down into hers. But she saw only the horror of her husband suspended over that awful abyss. She shuddered and moaned.

"Sophie," said the guide with a world of sympathy.

There was something in the voice that, striking a familiar chord, served to turn her vision from the horror so recently experienced. She saw a young face grown to middle age. Then the expression of pain returned, but this time from a different cause. She saw the lover of her youth as she had seen him in a felon's prison. He divined her thought.

"Do you know," he said, "that I went to prison voluntarily to serve the term of another?"

"No. Whose term?"

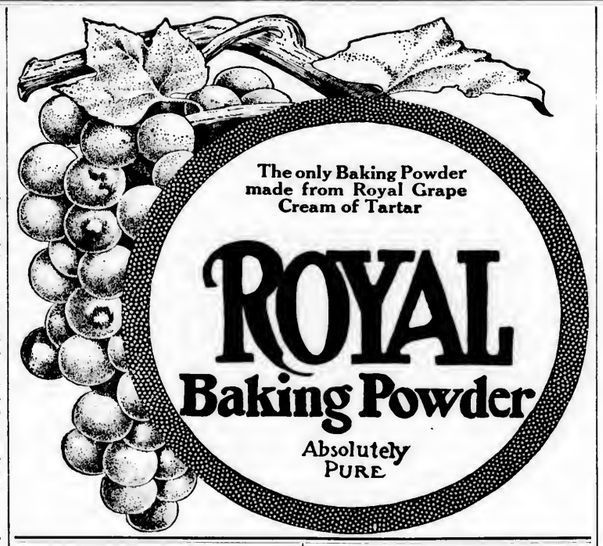
"Never mind that. To take the place of a smuggler I was paid a sum of money which would have enabled us to marry."

Another look of infinite pain passed over her face. Instinctively she knew the story as it has been told. The guide took her by the hand to lead her down; but, seeing that she was unequal to the task, he took her in his arms and carried her to the railway station. Then, after a brief rest, they proceeded to Interlaken.

Later, as husband and wife, with the Trupp fortune they built the Gruring villa.

The Smithy Settled It.

One of the candidates at an English election was announced to address a meeting in a Yorkshire village well known to horse dealers and breeders as the center of a district noted for its hackneys and roadsters. The candidate was an eloquent speaker, but for some reason or other he failed to make any great impression on the horse loving farmers. However, the local blacksmith came to the rescue by summing up the respective merits of the rival candidates in the following laconic little speech:



"Friends, this feller"—the candidate—"rides a 'oss. T'other feller rides a mortycar. You breeds 'osses, an' I shoes 'em, so wot is theer to argy aboot?"

In such a district and before such an audience the brief, businesslike speech of the blacksmith was not without effect, for it touched the pockets as well as the hearts of those present.—London Mail.

Demeanor Analyzed.

"Your chauffeur seems very respectful," said the guest.

"That air of deferential solicitude," replied Mr. Chuggins, "is not respect. It is sympathy."—Washington Star.

WILBRAHAM.

Death of Calvin G. Robbins.

Calvin Gardner Robbins, 74, died at his home yesterday morning of heart failure, after being in failing health for several months. Mr. Robbins was born in Norridgewock, Me., where his early days were spent. At the breaking out of the civil war he enlisted in the 46th Massachusetts regiment of volunteers, where he served until 1863, when he re-enlisted in the 2d Massachusetts heavy artillery, in which he remained until the war closed He had been a resident of Wilbraham for the past 50 years, and had taken an active interest in all affairs of the town. He had held the office of constable for 38 years consecutively Fifty years ago, March 19, he was married to Maria J. Clark of Wilbraham. Mr. Robbins was a member of Newton lodge of Masons and the Royal Arch chapter of Palmer. Mr Robbins was a prominent citizen of the town and will be greatly missed by his neighbors and many friends. He is survived by a widow. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the home, and will be in charge of Newton lodge of Masons. Burial will be in Woodlawn Dell cemetery.

WARREN.

A special town meeting will be held next week Saturday to take action on the following business. The first is to ask the Legislature to grant permission for the town to appropriate a sum of money for the celebration next year of the 250th anniversary of the original grant of the Quaboag settlement, which incinded the towns of Brookfield, North Brookfield, West Brookfield, New Braintree and Warren. Similar meetings are being called in the other towns. The matter is being advanced at this time by the officers of the Quaboag historical society, which comprises these towns. The other article is to see if the town will appropriate $600 to buy additional hose and supplies for the fire engineers.

A Boomerang.

An amusing incident occurred when the house of lords was in committee on the reform bill of 1867. The clerk of the house intimated that an amendment had been handed in, the writing of which was so illegible that he was unable to say what it was about or who had written it. It was then discovered that Lord Lyttleton was the author, and it turned out to be a proposal disfranchising all persons who could not write.—Westminster Gazette.

Out of Place.

A sentry, an Irishman, was on post duty for the first time at night, when the officer of the day approached. He called, "Who comes there?"

"Officer of the day," was the reply.

"Then what are yez doin' out at night?" asked the sentry.—London Telegraph.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Palmer Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headache, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney disease, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Palmer testimony:

Mrs. A. H. Monlton, Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble for some time, and was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My head ached a great deal and often I was so dizzy I could hardly see. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and I was caused great annoyance on this account. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally recommended to me and I procured a box from Lynde & Gould's Drug Store. I received such great relief from the first that I continued taking them and after I had used three boxes, I was without a symptom of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I am, therefore, pleased to recommend them to other kidney sufferers."

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals of the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. A naturalist says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land

Not Much to Make Up.

"Fo' goodness' sake," impatiently exclaimed Mr Cooney during the poker game, "speak up lively an' say what yo' am a-gwine to do, Mose! Why, It don't take me mo' den two seconds to make up mah mind."

"If it did," replied the player addressed, very deliberately, "you'd suttainly be loatin'!"—New York Sun.

The Foremost Gift Store in Western New England

With the approach of Christmas time—and it is always nearer than we expect—comes the thought of presents to be selected. Then comes the question—where is the best place to buy? The answer to this is right at hand here and it will take but a minute to show why it is to the advantage of our neighbors to pay us a visit particularly at this time.

The size of the store itself—five large floors crowded with goods—the extent of the stocks, running into many thousands of dollars—the number of different lines devoted to purely Gift purposes and the great variety of assortments within these lines and the fact that our own buyers have searched the markets at home and abroad to secure for our trade the latest and best productions—all these facts give this establishment a position unequaled for Gift purchasing in this section. Lastly the value giving here is the kind that has brought us unqualified success. Come in and see yourself.

Opening Display of Christmas Furs!

Nearly ten months ago we began planning for our Christmas Furs for 1909, selecting the raw skins and placing our orders to be made up to our own specifications. In this way we were able not only to secure the pick of the new season's productions, but to take advantage of the lowest prices of the whole year in the wholesale market.

The opening of the Holiday season finds us prepared as never before to maintain our prestige in fine Furs, with a stock of magnificent proportions, superlative excellence and unlimited variety—the largest and handsomest display of fine Furs we have made in our sixty years of Fur selling.

The Elect Furs

In Perfectly Matched Sets

As usual, we shall make a special feature in this Holiday showing of perfectly matched sets—scarfs and muffs in all the fashionable Furs of the season, in which every skin has been chosen from hundreds of others to secure in each piece of Fur a perfect symmerty of quality and color, thereby vastly enhancing the beauty and the intrinsic worth of the set.

Our Holiday showing includes these perfectly matched sets in all the new models and in the following fashionable Furs—

Coffee Party a Success.

The second annual coffee party and social given Tuesday evening by the parishioners of St. Mary's church was a most decided success. The attendance was large and all present had a most pleasant evening. The entertainment, consisting of nine numbers, was well received by the large audience. Refreshments, consisting of coffee, doughnuts, cake and ice cream, were served. The fancy articles met with a generous sale. The amount realized will be a snug sum which will go towards the reduction of the parish debt. Many were in attendance from the villages, Springfield, Wilbraham and Monson.

Frederick Walker of Springfield has been visiting friends here the past week.

James Finn of Springfield spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. M. Lawlor and family.

Miss Lillian Barter of Boston and Andrew Sears of Belchertown were nnited in marriage in St. Bartholomew's church Monday morning; Rev. B. McKeany officiated. Mr. Sears is a gradnate of the Belchertown high school. Mr. an l Mrs. Sears have gone to Boston, the home of Mrs. Sears.

Mrs. Thomas LaCrosse, who has been confined to the house since she was injured by the falling of the cash register on an electric car on Labor Day, attended church for the first time for thirteen weeks Snnday. Mrs. LaCrosse is far from in her usual health, being still unable to do any hard work.

The many friends of Miss Nellie Quirk of Ware, who is well known here, will be glad to know she is recovering from the recent operation for appendicitis, which was performed at St Vincent hospital in Worcester. Miss Quirk is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Quirk, and for many years a resident here

A Pledge Not to Conquer.

Two petitions are in circulation whose purpose is to secure an expression from the United States that it will not increase its territory by conquest. While it is recognized that there would not be binding force in the expression, yet, as in the case of the resolution not to annex Cuba when we went to war with Spain, it is believed that such an expression would have great weight with this country and with all other nations, and would be a strong influence in promoting international peace, especially in advancing the limitation of armaments, which has been an unaccomplished purpose back of the Hague Peace Conferences.

These two petitions are identical, except so far as change of form is necessary by the difference between the bodies addressed. One is directly to Congress, in favor of giving an assurance to the next International Peace Conference that the United States will not increase its territory by conquest. The other is to the Legislature of Massachusetts, asking it to adopt resolutions to Congress with the same purpose as the direct petition to Congress. The former can be circulated in any state. The latter is adapted to Massachusetts only, but by requisite change of wording it can be addressed to any legislature and circulated in the states respectively for presentation to their legislatures.

Since this movement was begun it has been learned that this effort has been practically anticipated by the people of Brazil; it is a provision of the constitution that "the United States of Brazil shall, in no case, engage in war of conquest, directly or indirectly, by itself or in alliance with another nation." By two agreements signed April 23, 1908, severally by the Powers on the North sea and by those on the Baltic sea, including Russia, Germany, Sweden, Denmark, The Netherlands, France and Great Britain, those Powers look to mutual action to keep their territorial boundaries inviolate.

It is hoped that these petitions will meet with public favor. They have been signed by Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, Edwin D Mead and others. There is no fund for a campaign. Every newspaper which is interested is invited to give it mention and to reprint the petitions. Public spirited persons are invited to cut out the petitions and circulate them for separate signing, but the same names may be signed to both, preferably the names of legal voters only. Those who circulate the petitions are invited to return them to R. L. Bridgman, State House, Boston, by January 10, 1910 These petitions are as follows:

"To the Congress of the United States:

The undersigned, citizens of the United States, respectfully petition for the adoption of a resolution authorizing and requesting the President to instruct the Secretary of State to transmit to the next International Peace Conference the assurance of the United States that it will not increase its territory by conquest, and to invite the Powers to give like assurance."

"To the General Court of Massachusetts:

The undersigned, citizens of Massachusetts, respectfully petition you to adopt a resolution asking the Congress of the United States to authorize and request the President to instruct the Secretary of State to transmit to the next International Peace Conference the assurance of the United States that it will not increase its territory by conquest, and to invite the Powers to give like assurance; also, to invite the co-operation of the other states."

Advice to Women.

A Message from a Famous Beauty Specialist to Women Lacking in Energy and Vitality.

Thonsands of women vainly attempt to improve their complexions and to remove blackheads, crows' feet and other blemishes, through the nse of cosmetics. This treatment fails because the tronble lies far deeper than the skin. They are snffering from impnre and impoverished blood. This condition is in many cases due to catarrhal conditions of the whole system which finds its expression in sallow, muddy complexion, dark-circled eyes, general weakness of the system, and perhaps most plainly in the weeping of mucous membranes that is commonly called catarrh.

In fact this whole tendency is properly speaking, Catarrh. Banish this catarrh, and the complexion will clear as if by magic, eyes will brighten, faces become rosy and shoulders erect. Perfect beauty goes with only perfect health, and perfect health for women can only be obtained through one certain treatment—that which will cure catarrh.

Mme. Swift, New York, the famous beanty specialist known throughont the world and an accepted anthority on all relating thereto, states that the one positive and permanent relief for catarrh is Rexall Mncn-Tone. Here is her letter:

"I can strongly endorse the claims made for Rexall Mucu-Tone as a cnre for systemic catarrh. Its tonic effects are remarkable. It builds up the strength and restores vitality. If women who are tired and rnn down, lacking in energy and vitality, will use Rexall Mucu-Tone, they will praise as I do its strengthening and healing qualities."

Rexall Mucu-Tone works through the blood, acting thus upon the mucons cells—the congestion and inflammation of which causes local catarrh. This remedy causes poison to be expelled irom the system, and the blood is purified and revitalized. Thns the natural functions of the mncons cells are restored, and the membranes are cleansed and made strong. We know that Rexall Mucu-Tone does relieve catarrh. We positively guarantee to refund the money paid us for this remedy in every case where the nser is dissatisfied. It is a builder of vigorous health and creator of good complexions. Price 50 cents and $1 00 per hottle. Mail orders filled. It may be obtained only at our store,—The Rexall Store Lynde & Gonld, Palmer.

WILBRAHAM.

Miss Lanra Gibbs of Mondale and Miss Rachel Cushman of Agawam have been recent gnests at the home of Mr. and Mrs C. B. Hitchcock.

Mr. and Mrs. William J Goodrich have returned from their wedding trip.

A verdict for the defendant was brought in by the jury in the superior conrt in Springfield Tnesday, in the case of Benjamin B Green of Wilbraham against Edward W. Maynard, a neighbor, for damages to the amount of $1000 It was contended by the plaintiff that a rubbish fire started by the defendant April 6, 1907, on his own land spread to the plaintiff's land in Wilbraham and destroyed many trees and shrnbbery, the damage being caused by the negligence of the defendant. Employes of the defendant teatified that they nsed every precantion to gnard against the spreading of the flames, and that the fire in the plaintiff's wooda was not dne to their carelessness. W. G. Brownson represented the plaintiff, and A. E. Snow and Clinton Gowdy appeared for the defendant.

The Ventriloquist

He Eased Mary's Conscience and Made George Happy

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

It was just a little village street show—a shabby, gray haired ventriloquist sitting between two blank faced dolls that turned their heads and jerked their wide months and cracked stale jokes for the edification of the crowd that had gathered.

When the program was finished the old man passed around some thin pamphlets.

"Only a dime!" he cackled. "Just one dime to learn how to make the dolls talk."

"Only one dime!" echoed the woolly haired doll, which lay limply on top of a small trunk.

"Ten cents," murmured Irish Paddy from within the trunk.

But in spite of much spirited dialogne only five books were sold. Then as the crowd drifted away the little man packed his silent dolls into the trunk, swung it by a strap over his shonlder and trumped down the village street.

He turned in at a little store on the very edge of town. It was a remarkably neat little store, and at the back was a table with a clean white cloth. The old man asked for rolls and milk, which he ate at the table. He also bought a can of sardines, some crackers and cheese to take away with him. When he had paid for these there was no more money in his old pocketbook, but he smiled to himself happily as he ate his lunch and listened to the talk of the fresh faced little woman in charge and of the neighbor who had run in for a moment.

"When are you going to marry George?" the neighbor teased.

The fresh faced woman blushed. "I shall never marry again. Henry was such a good husband."

"You can't live on memories of goodness," said the neighbor bluntly.

"No," the little woman agreed, "but Henry would turn in his grave if I should look at anybody else."

"Hnh!" the neighbor sniffed. "I guess you've looked all right!"

Again the widow blushed. "I can't help it if George will come here," she said.

"You'd better take him or let him go."

"I know. I believe I could like him, but Henry—oh, Mrs. Perkins, Henry would come back and haunt me if I married George Mills."

"Fiddlesticks!" said the incredulous Mrs. Perkins. "As if I'd let a thing like that come between me and happiness!"

"Well, Henry was jealous, and he used to say, 'Mary, if you ever marry anybody else I'll come and haunt you.'"

"Henry ought to get over such things when he's been in heaven as long as this."

"Do you think so?" the widow questioned wistfully. "It seems as if Henry would always be just Henry even in heaven."

The neighbor nodded. "That's so. Henry was certainly set in his ways."

"You see, that's what I'm afraid of," the little widow stated. "I suppose it is silly, but I always did have a fear of spirits, and Henry knew it."

Back in the dim store the ventriloquist chuckled. But they had forgotten him. And when he finally shambled ont they were still talking of Henry and his heaven born possibilities.

Once out in the street the old man studied the signs, and "George Mills, Butcher," was the one toward which he made his way.

Within the shop the counters were bare. At the meat block the butcher himself was slicing bacon.

"Hello," he said as the ventriloquist sidled in. "You are the man who was making the dolls talk?"

"Yes."

"I don't see how you do it." George straightened up. "I couldn't even see you move your lips."

"That's nothing," the other stated.

"Well, it's great," said George.

"Yes," the old man admitted, "but it doesn't line my pockets with gold."

"Kind of precarious?"

"Yes." The old man hesitated, then blurted out, "I wonder if you'd like to have me help you—with a lady, a widow."

"Mrs. Bassett?" The young man's tone was eager.

"Well, her husband's name was Henry." And the ventriloquist repeated the conversation he had heard.

"I always knew Henry was a selfish dog," George flared.

"If you thought it was worth $5 I might help you out," the little man ventured.

"How?"

The ventriloquist outlined his plan, and when he had finished George cried eagerly, "I will give you ten if you will make it go!"

"Did he have a deep voice or a thin one?"

"He had a piping voice," George stated savagely, "like this"—

"Well, I want to do it right." And the ventriloquist picked up his trunk and went on his way.

Late that afternoon George Mills stopped in and asked Mrs. Bassett to take a walk to Marvin's grove.

The widow shook her head pensively. "I can't," she said. "The neighbors are beginning to talk."

"Marry me and shut their mouths," said George ardently.

"Oh, no; I can't marry you, George, and I mustn't go with you any more!"

George looked blank. "Oh, but see here," he said, "you've just got to go tonight."

"I don't see why you are so anxious," she yielded.

"Because—oh, look here, Mary, let it be our last walk if you will!"

Marvin's grove was a place of dim, beautiful greenness, and in its depths a great gray bowlder thrust up a rugged shoulder. It was to this bowlder that George guided Mary Bassett, and they sat down with their backs against the stone.

"Mary," he said, "tell me why you won't marry me."

"If I only knew that Henry wouldn't mind," she said, weeping. "You know how good he was to me, George."

"But surely he would want you to be happy," he said.

Mary sighed. "If I only knew. If I could have some sign."

Behind the bowlder was the faint rustle of dry leaves. It might have been the movement of a rabbit or of a tortoise or of a squirrel seeking nuts. But George knew that it was none of these. He gave a significant cough. Then, as if borne by the breeze from nowhere, came a thin, piping voice:

"Mary!"

The widow clutched at her lover's sleeve. "George," she cried gaspingly, "did you hear that?"

"What?" asked George.

"That voice—Henry's voice."

"Nonsense!" But the young butcher's face was white. There was a silence in which they stood, pale faced, listening.

"Mary, Mary—take him—be happy."

As the words died away Mary gasped, "it is Henry!"

"He is telling you to be happy. Will you, Mary?"

She looked at him with startled brown eyes. "I'm so frightened, George."

He drew her within the circle of his arm. "Nothing can hurt you here. Say 'Yes,' Mary." And as she hesitated came the benediction.

"Bless you!"

And at that Mary yielded, with her head against George's shonlder, but listening for any further remarks from Henry.

None came, and at last her lover led her from the wood. But he stopped by the roadway. "Wait until I go and get my hat," he said, and presently he came back with it.

He had left something in its place, however, and when the woods were still, except for the twilight call of the birds, a little old man stole aronnd the edge of the big gray stone and picked up the crisp greenback.

Then he went back to his hiding place and ate a snpper of crackers and cheese and sardines in the company of black faced Sambo and Irish Pat.

When He Went Away.

"I take it," he said to the man who got on the depot car with a snit case, "that yon are going to the country."

"I am, sir," was the stiff reply.

"You have everything with you you will need?"

"Of course."

"Shirts, socks and toothbrnsh?"

"Certainly."

"Nightshirt, toilet soap and handkerchief?"

"Do yon think me a child, sir?" was asked.

"Of course not, bnt men are so absentminded, you see. Did you put in an extra pair of cuffs?"

"I did, sir. You and others may be careless, but I want you to know that I'm not. I have been three days packing this suit case."

"Um. You might need a needle and thread."

"I have them."

"And some buttons."

"They are here."

"Bnt there must have been something forgotten," persisted the other.

"Nothing whatever," was the decided answer.

"For instance, your key. You have it, have you?"

The man sprang up and began feeling in his pockets and looking around and after a moment called out:

"Here—somebody stop this old car! I've left the key to my suit case on the mantel at home!"—Washington Herald.

Cash of the Ancients.

The little brass cash, the Chinese coins, are the lineal descendants, in unbroken order, of the bronze ax of remote Celestial ancestors. From the regular hatchet to the moderu coin one can trace a distinct if somewhat broken succession, so that it is impossible to say where the one leaves off and the other begins. Here is how this curious pedigree first worked itself out: In early times, before coin was inveuted, barter was usually conducted between producer and consumer with metal implements, as it still is in central Africa at the present day. At first the Chinese in that unsophisticated age were content to use real hatchets for this commercial purpose, but after a time, with the profound mercantile instinct of their race, it occurred to some of them that when a man wanted half a hatchet's worth of goods he might as well pay for them with half a hatchet. Still, as it would be a pity to spoil a good working implement by cutting it in two, the worthy Ah Sin ingeniously compromised the matter by making thin hatchets of the usual size and shape, but far too slender for practical usage. By so doing he invented coin, and, what is more, he invented it far earlier than the claimants to that proud distinction, the Lydians, whose electrum staters were first struck in the seventh century B. C.—Cornhill Magazine.

"You say that figures don't lie? Well, permit me to contradict you."

"May I ask your business?"

"I'm a dressmaker."

For Pain in Chest

For sore throat, sharp pain in lungs, tightness across the chest, hoarseness or cough, lave the parts with Sloan's Liniment. You don't need to rub, just lay it on lightly. It penetrates instantly to the seat of the trouble, relieves congestion and stops the pain.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. A.W. Price, Fredonia, Kans., says: "We have used Sloan's Liniment for a year, and find it an excellent thing for sore throat, chest pains, colds, and hay fever attacks. A few drops taken on sugar stops coughing and sneezing instantly."

Sloan's Liniment

is easier to use than porous plasters, acts quicker and does not clog up the pores of the skin. It is an excellent antiseptic remedy for asthma, bronchitis, and all inflammatory diseases of the throat and chest; will break up the deadly membrane in an attack of croup, and will kill any kind of neuralgia or rheumatic pains.

All druggists keep Sloan's Liniment. Prices 25c., 50c., & $1.00.

Scarecrows

The Last One Saved the Corn and Won a Bride

By GEORGE R. WARDEN

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

The woman who sat on the doorsteps of her little house, situated in the midst of about three acres of land, was crippled with rheumatism, and though she had a white rag tied to the end of a crutch and was waving it at half a dozen crows sitting on the fence they seemed to regard her with contempt. Presently they dropped down into the field and began to scratch. The rag was waved and the woman shouted, and a voice at her gate asked:

"Is anything wrong with you?"

A girl of eighteen had left the big farmhouse on the hill, half a mile away, for a walk, and as she neared the cottage the shouts of the woman and the cawing of the crows had attracted her attention.

"Yes, there's lots wrong," replied the woman. "The crows are scratching up the sweet corn I planted last week."

The girl entered the gate and picked up a stick and advanced upon the crows with a "S-h-o-o-o!" and they took to flight. Then she sat down beside the woman.

"I'm from Jasper's," said the girl. "Mrs. Jasper is my sister, and I am there on a visit. I passed here yesterday and was wondering who lived here."

"It's me that has lived here all alone for the last five years, child. I'm a widow. The rheumatism came on me two years ago and now I can hardly walk. The crows have scratched up most all I've planted this spring. I'm waiting for Farmer Johnson to come along and set up a scarecrow for me."

"But I can help you. You stuff old clothes with straw and make them look like a man."

"Bless you, dear! It will be the saving of my corn. You'll find trousers and coat and hat hanging up in the shed. I got them out the other day."

An hour later the "scare" was set up on the corn ground, and there were dismal lamentations from the crows as they sought other fields. They had bluffed and robbed a poor rheumatic widow, but when it came to a man with his hat cocked on one ear and a stick in his hands to represent a gun they realized that times had changed.

That was May Kelly's first visit to the Widow Hempstead, but after that scarcely a day passed that she did not run in with a gift of some sort and to see that the scarecrow was attending to business. One afternoon as the couple sat on the step and the girl was telling the woman of her home in the city a tramp came along the road. He may not have been hungry enough for food, but he did want a new outfit of clothing. He caught sight of the scarecrow, and his hopes rose. He was no crow to be fooled with a straw stuffed man. He saw the women, but he climbed the fence and shouldered the "scare" and walked away with it.

"Let that alone! You shan't take it!" called the girl.

"Beg pardon, ladies," replied the tramp, with a bow and a scrape, "but you do not understand the situation. I am invited to attend a wedding in the next town, and I've got to have a suit to wear. This isn't as good a one as I could wish for, but I'll have to make it do."

"It's stealing, and you can be arrested," threatened the girl.

"And if I'm to be arrested I must have a suit that is decent to go before the judge. I ain't bragging on my looks right this minute, but if you see me half an hour later you'll take me for a broker going to business."

"And now the crows!" sighed the widow as the tramp walked off.

"And the 'scare' was such a beautiful object!" added the girl. "When we sat here looking at him I almost felt that he could talk to us. You've got another old hat and a ragged blanket in the shed, but I'll have to bring something from the house."

Half an hour passed when a crow was sighted. The absence of the "scare" had been noticed. The one crow became five—ten—twenty. They sat on the fence and held a caucus. They determined to despoil that widow of her last grain of corn. Miss May threw sticks and stones, but of course they laughed at her. All crows laugh when they see a girl throwing. The widow found a rag and waved it to save the country, but the crows winked at it. Ragtime had passed with them. They were ready to drop to earth and begin scratching when the girl cried out:

"Don't shoo any more. I'll scare the life out of them!"

In another minute she had the old hat on and the ragged quilt around her and was running across the field. With a grand chorus of frightened caws the crows rose up and sailed away and then began circling round to see if it was the real thing or only a bluff. To convince them the girl took a pose, and she was such a comical object that the widow forgot all her sorrows in laughter. The new "scare" had been in position about ten minutes when a young man with a gun on his shoulder came out of the woods beyond the field and headed for the house. The "scare's" back was toward him. The widow saw, but dared not call out.

The young man would have passed the object forty feet to his left, but after a glance at it his curiosity was excited. He had seen scarecrows before, but never one like that. It seemed to waver now and then, instead of being tied fast to a stake. Presently Miss May heard the footsteps of a man.

"Here, you! What do you want?" called the widow from the doorway.

The young man wanted to investigate that scarecrow. He walked right up to the object and laid a hand on it. The brown eyes of the object looked straight into his.

"By George!" gasped the young man as he fell back.

"Well, you've done it!" replied the girl as she flung away hat and quilt and faced him with burning cheeks.

"A thousand pardons! I had no idea—no idea."

"Then why didn't you go along and mind your business? I didn't ask you to come."

"Of course not, and I'm so sorry, and I beg so many thousand pardons. Really now, but I'll go at once."

"No, you won't! I was playing scarecrow here to keep the birds from the corn. You had to come along and discover me and humiliate me. Now play scarecrow yourself for an hour! It's for the poor widow there in the door."

"I'll—I'll—by George, I'll do it! Only serve me right. I'll stand here for an hour by the watch, and then I shall expect to receive your forgiveness."

"I—I didn't quite mean what I said," stammered Miss May as she saw that he was about to take her at her word. "But I'm willing—quite willing. I will excuse you for an hour, please."

Miss May went to the house and sat on the doorstep with the widow. She wanted to be angry, but the humor of the situation prevented. She wanted to think the young man very impertinent, but really he was a fine looking fellow and a gentleman, and he was out there playing scarecrow under her eyes. The widow laughed and the girl giggled and the "scare's" punishment was cut fifteen minutes short by a hand being waved to him. As he came to the steps an informal introduction took place. Then Mr. Mortimer, with his superior ingenuity, managed to rig up an object warranted to keep all crows forty rods from a corn field or no pay.

Next day Miss May had to come down to bring the widow some tea and pie, and Mr. Mortimer had to see how his scarecrow was working. Then, as the girl failed to appear next day, Mr. Mortimer had to call at the Jasper farmhouse to inquire for her. Then widows and scarecrows and loving hearts and the good old summer time got all mixed up, and the last report from the widow was:

"Yes, sir, that last scarecrow saved those corn, and if you don't believe those young people have fallen dead in love with each other and are going to be married next year you just wait and look at the society papers."

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

We never publish a testimonial letter without the special permission of the writer, and then only when we are sure it is genuine. Surely such valuable testimony, therefore, should create confidence in the minds of suffering women.

The Doctor's First Question

"How are your bowels?" This is generally the first question the doctor asks. He knows what a sluggish liver means. He knows what a long list of distressing complaints result from constipation. He knows that headaches, bilious attacks, indigestion, impure blood, and general debility are often promptly relieved by a good liver pill. We wish you would talk with your own doctor about this subject. Ask him at the same time if he approves of Ayer's Pills. Do as he says. *J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Antalgica

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

STRIKERS EVICTED.

Ludlow Company Sets Household Goods Out in Mud.

PUBLIC SYMPATHY IS WITH STRIKERS

No Resistance Made by Them, and No Disturbance in Town. Hope For Settlement.

The strike in the mills of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates at Ludlow, and the events of the past week connected therewith, has not only occupied local attention to a large extent but is fast becoming a national topic. Labor unions in all sections of the country are taking notice of this little spot in Massachusetts and the action of both sides. Just what the end will be cannot be determined yet, but those who deplore the situation have hope that matters will be adjusted soon to the satisfaction of both sides. Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, who is acting governor, was in Ludlow yesterday seeking information; to-day well-known Polish business men of Boston have been in the town getting from the strikers exact conditions; consultations with others will be held and a report made to Gov. Draper, who will then use his endeavors to bring about a new order of affairs.

Saturday was an eventful day in Ludlow. Deeds new to this section of the country were performed and scenes usually credited to the poorest sections controlled by the most hard-hearted and grasping landlords were to be found on numerous streets. For on that day the company began the evictions of the families who were occupying its houses while its members were not at work in the mills. The company acted strictly within its legal rights, but it had few sympathizers among the outside spectators. A special force of deputies and officers were on hand throughout the town. A force of men engaged for the purpose moved from house to house on the list of those to be evicted and speedily moved the contents into the street. The goods were piled in the mud and left there, the windows of the houses being then boarded up.

It is to the credit of the strikers that no resistance was offered and no violence attempted in any part of the town, although the feeling against the Ludlow company is very strong. The evicted people have so far refused to move their belongings but have camped beside them in the open, building fires in stoves and erecting temporary shelters of and beside their property. Ample notice was sent them of the company's intended action, but they preferred to take this course. More evictions were accomplished yesterday, but it is understood that there will be no more at present, or until after the effort of Gov. Draper to bring about a settlement.

The causes of the strike as given by the company and the strikers differ but little. The company's claim is that last August, after a request for an advance in pay by the weavers, they were told the condition of business did not warrant it. About two weeks later the creel boys stayed out but made no complaint to the managers. The weavers were then given an opportunity to do the work and receive the boys' pay in addition to their own, but refused. The whole bagging department was thus shut down by the action of the weavers. The following Monday the mill was reopened but the weavers refused to go to work. The managers then decided that a reduction in the price of weaving was necessary, but no reduction was made in any other department; they had been paying 24 cents against 17 cents of their nearest competitor, and the new price was 20 cents. The entire mill then struck.

The strikers' statement is that the creel boys were first asked to work for $4.50 a week instead of $5, but demanded $5.50. The weavers were then asked to do the boys' work in addition to running their looms, but as the time necessary to do it would lessen the loom production they would be able to make only about 75 cents per day and so refused. The boys were then offered $5.50 but the weavers were cut from 24 to 20 cents a rule.

There is always two sides to every controversy, and there is without doubt much on both in this instance. The merits of the case are hard to get at and without detailed information careful judgment cannot be made. Certain it is however that public opinion does not credit the rich and powerful Ludlow Company with dignified action along the line it has chosen to follow. Public sympathy is largely with the strikers in the evictions. Massachusetts is not accustomed to such scenes — at least not in this section — and that there will be no more is earnestly to be hoped.

Ware Agricultural Society.

A meeting of the Ware Agricultural Society was held in the court room in Ware Monday with 10 of the 75 members present. A general discussion as to whether the society should continue its existence or not was followed by an informal vote, resulting five to four against dissolving the society at this time, and this vote was made formal. The discussion as to what should be done with the funds on hand, reported by the treasurer as amounting to $182, was discontinued for a time, and the officers elected as follows: Clerk, J Gardner Lincoln; treasurer, Paul R. Bridgman; directors, F. F. Gilmore, R. E. Capron, D. S Kennedy, William Rohan and P O. L'Heureux. This is the same set of officers as was chosen three years ago, except that Dr. A A. Auger, now of West Brookfield, was a director, instead of William Rohan. A motion was made after the election and following quite a discussion, that if found legal to do so, $50 be given to the Ware visiting nurse and hospital association, but that it should be paid before January 1. The sentiment of those present was for the most part favorable to such a gift, but some expressed a doubt as to its legality. There was further talk as to the likelihood of holding future fairs and F. F. Gilmore was appointed as a committee of one to confer with Miss Emma Holden of Springfield relative to the purchase of the land belonging to her that was formerly used for fairground purposes. It was voted that $10 be given to the secretary and the same amount to the treasurer for their service. After the meeting adjourned, a meeting of the directors was held and F. F. Gilmore was re-elected president and R E. Capron vice president of the board and of the society.

HAMPDEN.

A social dance was held in the Wesson villa Saturday evening. Dancing was enjoyed in the barn which was decorated with evergreens and jack-o'-lanterns, and there was a bountiful collation. About 150 were present.

MIDNIGHT FIRE.

But Only a Small Toolhouse, Owned by Railroad, Burned.

An alarm from box 68 roused the firemen from their slumbers at 12 15 Thursday morning for a blaze in a small house near the Ware River railroad roundhouse on North Main street. The building was occupied as an oil and tool house and was saturated with oil; it burned fiercely and was a complete wreck before the firemen arrived, though they made good time. The loss was small. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Employes of the railroad had built a fire in a stove in the building and gone out; on their return in a few moments they found the interior of the building a mass of flames

Fire in Ludlow Store.

A fire was discovered Monday night at 12 45 in the basement of the store owned and occupied by Adam Dymon on Joy street in Ludlow. Special Officer Gates noticed the blaze when passing the store and attempted to ring in an alarm from the box on Joy street, which failed to work. The box opposite the Union church was tried with the same result. It was necessary to go to the mill yard of the Ludlow manufacturing associates and have the alarm sounded from there. When the firemen arrived on the scene the fire had gained considerable headway, and it was almost impossible to get on to street on account of the density of the smoke. The fire spread through the store and to the dwelling above it which was occupied by Mr. Dymon and his family. It was with great difficulty that the family were aroused from their slumbers, and at one time Mrs. Dymon could not account for her 16-years-old boy, but later he was discovered in the house of a neighbor. The fire was difficult to fight because of the large quantity of oils stored in the basement. The building will probably be a total loss and the damage is estimated at $3000

WARE.

Mrs. Oscar Southworth of Church street has given the hospital a complete set of surgical instruments. It is expected that the hospital will be opened in a few days.

John Osgood, who has been taking the school census, has completed his work, and finds 1617 children between the ages of 5 and 15 years. This is 87 more than last year, and the majority of the increase is among the Polish speaking children.

An old-fashioned husking was held at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cutting in Ware Center Saturday night. After the corn had been husked, about 25 couples enjoyed dancing in the spacious kitchen, while Mr. Cutting furnished music with a violin. Supper was served.

George W. Dunham, treasurer of the Republican town committee, has filed his report with the town clerk. It shows the receipts this fall to have been $152, and with a balance of $30, a total of $182, all of which was expended in paying the expenses for the rally and election day.

Michael Duquette, 80, died at his home on Church street last Friday of a complication of diseases. He leave three sons, Felix and Joseph of this town and Francois of Canada, and three daughters, one in New Bedford and Mary and Alphonsine of this town. The funeral was in Mt. Carmel church and burial was in Mt. Carmel cemetery.

Abbie, the 15 months-old daughter of Thomas Riley, died last Friday from spinal meningitis, after only a few hours' illness. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Riley, as the mother of the child, formerly Miss Abbie Corkery, died at its birth. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, with burial in St. Williams' cemetery.

The choral union, organized this fall, is a decided success, and about 50 people are being instructed by Arthur H. Turner of Springfield. The first public concert will be given early in January, and a second one will follow later in the season. The officers of the union are: President, Miss Mary S. Root; vice president, P. J Mulvaney; secretary, Miss Marion Davis; treasurer, Philip Robinson; directors, Miss E C. Moran, George W. Dunham, Mabel Steele, C B. Wetherby and B. W. Southworth.

Past Master James E Allen, assisted by Past Master Minot C. Wood as Marshal, installed the following officers of Eden lodge of Masons Monday evening, the first five having been elected, the others appointed; W. M., Dr. G. A. Cummings; S W., David Woolley; J. W., Waldo C. Lincoln; T., H. W. Sibley; S, John H. Schoonmaker; S. D, Walter H. Apperson; J. D, George W. Dunham; S S, Bernard W. Southworth; J. S, Liudoff Bassett; C., George W. Cox; M., Carl Nordell; I S., W. S Carrick; T. D, Otis Holden; O., Charles F. Clark.

WILBRAHAM.

Marshall C. Wade has been drawn as juror.

Mrs. James M. Pease spent a part of the week in Huntington.

Mrs. Lucy Carpenter of Waltham has been the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Myron Bruner.

Miss Minnie Johnson of Beverly has been the guest of Mrs. F. A. Blodgett a part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bugbee and daughter of Southwick spent last Friday with Mr and Mrs. H M. Bliss

Mrs Henry Starr and son, Ernest Starr, have returned to Greenfield, after being guests of Mr. and Mrs. J H Starr.

The LaBelle brothers have leased their farm on Maple street, known as the D A Atchison place, to Lucius Farnham of Southampton.

The funeral of Calvin G. Robbins, who died last week Thursday, was held at his late home Saturday afternoon, with a large attendance of relatives and friends, and representatives from the Grand Army. Rev. G. A. Downey, assisted by Rev. M S. Howard, conducted the services at the home, and at the grave services were in charge of Newton lodge of Masons, of which Mr. Robbins was a member. The bearers were E. M. Scott, D H. Eaton, O. O. Beebe and O P. Bolles. Burial was in Woodlawn Dell cemetery.

BELCHERTOWN.

Death of Mrs. L. D. Fosket.

Mrs Olive Fosket, wife of L. D. Fosket, died at her home on the Palmer road last Friday, after a two years' illness with a complication of diseases. Mrs. Fosket was a native of Brimfield, and was in her 76th year. Besides her husband, she leaves two sons, Mabion, who is employed in the Palmer Mill, and Leonard at home. The funeral was held Sunday morning with burial in Brimfield.

Warren Perkins, a one-time resident of Belchertown, is calling on friends in town.

The Federal street school, which is about a mile from the post office, is closed and the pupils will attend the Center graded schools.

The schools re-opened Wednesday after a week's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cutting of Brooklyn, N. Y., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Fisher.

TALK ON FORESTRY.

Men's League Hears Address By State Forester Rane.

FOREST FIRES MENACE TO GROWTH

Advocates Planting of White Pine in Waste Places. Can be Cut in 40 Years.

The monthly meeting of the Men's League was held Tuesday evening in Memorial Hall, when a large audience gathered to hear State Forester F. W Rane talk on Forestry. Mr Rane began by saying that the subject of forestry is one in which everyone is interested. When this country was discovered it was largely forest, from the seacoast to the Mississippi river. Then it was a nuisance and the first work of our ancestors was to cut down the trees and burn them to clear the land. Conditions have materially changed since. When lumbering was first begun as an industry logs which would square less than 16 inches were not cut; but now the portable saw-mill takes everything which comes along. Then the timber was carried to the mill; now the mill is taken to the timber. The man who talked 20 years ago of the exhaustion of the forests was laughed at, but the portable saw mill is fast cutting off the available timber and raising the price of even the cheapest.

Nature will do much however, if allowed, to bring back the forests. Mr. Rane stated that if the land—even in the towns and cities—were to be abandoned for a few years, it would all grow up to timber sown by nature. Much is being done in this way in fields and old pastures which are left alone; white pine is coming in in many of these places in large quantities, and if left alone cutting can usually be begun in about 40 years, yielding a steady income each year.

Mr Rane advocated the planting of white pine in the waste places of the state, for various reasons. It will grow on poor land, even in clear sand, and requires very little attention except that fire be kept out of it. Forest fires, Mr. Rane said, were the discouraging part of the attempt to reforest the state. Careless persons start fires in the open in the summer and they spread to forest land and do immense damage. He spoke of the efforts of the forestry commission to secure capable and efficient fire wardens in the several towns, and the great benefit to be derived from keeping the fires out. The country has, he said, been developed by the harvesting of a crop (timber), but the time is now at hand when we must grow the crop as well.

The talk was followed by a question box and general discussion.

President Ernest E. Hobson presided and Edward E Chapman of Ludlow sang several selections; Miss Blanche Upham of Three Rivers was accompanist.

WARREN.

The Tuesday Club met with Miss Esther K. Gage this week.

Mrs. Joseph G. Hastings and Miss Elizabeth have returned from a visit in Brookline.

The Onward and Upward Circle of King's Daughters met this afternoon with Mrs D. L. K Hathaway of High street.

The Woman's Mission Society of the Congregational church met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Eugene W. Root of School street.

A regular meeting of the Men's League was held in the Congregational church Monday evening, when Rev. George P Knapp of Harpoot, Turkey, spoke on "The Turkish Situation."

Edmund Bridges cut off his thumb while splitting wood in a cellar on West Main street last week Thursday. He was holding a stick of wood in his left hand and swinging an ax with his right, when the tool came in contact with a post and struck the thumb on his left hand, completely severing it at the first joint. He was attended by Dr. John Dalton.

While the Springfield local freight was switching in the yard Tuesday noon the brake-beam broke on a box car so that the brakeman could not control it and the car crashed into the other cars on the track. The offending car was heavily loaded with grain and remained on the track, but one other car jumped off the rails and trucks under another car was misplaced. The wrecker which had been in Charlton Tuesday arrived about 4 o'clock and repaired the damage.

The monthly meeting of the Palmer Woman's Club was held this afternoon in the parlors of the Universalist church. Rev. Herbert K Job was the Speaker, his subject being "Birds." It was illustrated by stereopticon.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Dec. 1, 1909.

Something foreboding is impending for the railroad development of Massachusetts, or this morning's Herald is on a wild goose chase. Its long editorial, its double leads, has attracted the attention of the railroad commission. Chairman Hall read it over twice before breakfast, and Commissioner White also gave it his careful attention early in the day. They are curious to know what the occasion is, but thus far they have no more idea than the promiscuous public. From that office, but not from any commissioner, comes the statement that it is not likely that the real powers owers behind the scenes, to whom both Charles S. Mellen, Lucius Tuttle and John L Billiard are equally subordinate hired men, have let anything be done which they have not contemplated, and that it is not at all probable that anything has occurred to disrupt or derange their plans for the commercial development of New England. If there is any scheme concealed under the tranquil surface of events, it will not owe its concealment to any lack of vigilance on the part of William B. Lawrence, the largest stockholder in the Boston and Maine (or the Lawrence family is, for private individuals) for he has been in long consultation to-day with the commissioners, pouring out statistics by the mile and all to the discredit of the New Haven road. Through him surely the commission will be informed if there are any suspicious circumstances in the acts of the New Haven. In the meantime, the only suggestion of legislation proposed by the New Haven for the coming session is for something which will permit it to hold the street railway stocks which it disposed of last summer under the mandate of the Legislature, for violation of the laws of Massachusetts. That is only a guess thus far.

The news of the week at the state house is the retirement of Captain David T. Remington from the office of sergeant-at-arms which he had filled honorably and successfully for six years. He has had an eye strictly to the welfare of the state. Especially is it true that he has been very careful not to spend the state's money unless absolutely necessary. During the first five years,—for the figures for this year are not made up, there was appropriated for state house expenses $827 887, and he spent of it only $776 597, thus returning to the state treasury $51 290 which he might have spent without being called to account for it. That is a very handsome sum to save for the public, when no one in particular feels grateful for the service, but on the other hand, Captain Remington has been criticised by some men in the state house because he has not spent more of the state's money on them. He has been criticised and there is an undercurrent of opposition to him in some quarters, but the above is a fair sample of its quality and motives and the public may be fully assured that Captain Remington is nothing other than a high-minded, honest and efficient official who had tried his best to serve the state and who has saved where other men would have been lavish, and that he is entirely worthy of the confidence of the people. There is a matter of promotions of men under him which has figured largely in the undercurrent of dissatisfaction, but he has acted intelligently and honestly for the good of the service, in spite of representations to members-elect of the Legislature to vote for some other candidate. He can retire from office with a rare consciousness of service well rendered and with the full respect of the state. Doorkeeper Frederick of the House will probably succeed him and happy will he be if he can show a like record when he puts off the harness.

Boston's politics are of national interest because so much is involved in the development of this new charter, when all the large cities in the Union and many of the small ones are having much trouble with their form of government. Developments have not reached the point where the public can say of the framers of the charter that wisdom will die with them. It looks very much as if Former Mayor Fitzgerald, the man who was roasted by the finance commission, against whose administration the investigation by that commission was aimed and against whose repetition the new charter was drawn, would be elected at the coming election January 11. The reports from his office make him out a happy man in consequence of the persistence of both Hibbard and Storrow in remaining in the field. It is generally recognized that the fight is for and against Fitzgerald and that the votes going to Hibbard and Storrow will be simply a division of the opposition, thereby making Fitzgerald's election all the more certain. The former mayor has taken the headquarters in the block next east of city hall and is making an organized campaign. Within the week, Storrow has inaugurated the policy of opening headquarters in different parts of the city so that he may meet the voters on their native heath and illustrate to them by his personal presence and Democratic bearing that he is one of the common people and not a Back Bay aristocrat. But if he should convey the impression that he is not one of the boys, in spite of his genial attitude, then all this self publicity will be only so many votes driven away from him. His campaign has raised the question whether such an organized movement meets the charter requirement of 5000 nominations directly from the people. At any rate, there is not yet a rush to his standard, and unless there is, it will be uphill work, no matter how much money is spent, to pull off votes enough from Hibbard to defeat Fitzgerald. So the success of the latest charter-doctoring is still in doubt. Hibbard and Storrow are each sure that the other has not the slightest chance of success and that he alone is the Moses to lead the decent people to victory over Fitzgerald. Hence, unless something is done, they are pretty likely to join in mourning over their common defeat.

It is a question, again, whether the spirit of the charter to remove party politics from the campaign will succeed. It is a proposition said to be under consideration by the Republican city committee to indorse Storrow formally, and the Democratic city committee may take a like step and put their "O. K" on the back of Fitzgerald. Thus party lines would be drawn, even if the law forbade, as it does, party designations to appear on the ballots. The political experts have had their own way with the city charter and after this campaign is over, the public will know much more about expertability than it now does, but the charter-makers have not yet won their title to statues in the hall of fame.

Yesterday afternoon the anti-imperialists held their annual meeting. They have lost some of their active spirits and the young generation does not fill their places,

PALMER NEWS.

ALARM BOX WORN OUT.

Number 68, Corner of Main and Walnut Streets, Succumbs to Hard Use.

Fire alarm box 68, at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, has not acted right the last few times it has been pulled. It was "all awry" on Thursday evening of last week when it was pulled for the Converse block fire, and again Thursday morning of this week, for the railroad fire. A critical examination by Chief Summers revealed the fact that it is worn out. It is an old style box, and is one of the first installed by the fire district many years ago. It has seen more service than any other box, and the strain on it has been too great; it is worn out. This is the most important box in the district, being in the heart of the business section, and will undoubtedly be replaced with a new one at once. The board of engineers of the fire district are to have a special meeting this evening, when it is expected they will ask the prudential committee for a new box.

A LITTLE MORE WATER.

Supply Slightly Increased, But is Still Dangerously Low.

The snow and rain of last week helped the water situation a little—as far as the supply available for the village of Palmer is concerned—by adding a few inches to the depth in the storage reservoir of the Palmer Water Company. The water is two feet deeper than it was two weeks ago, but the area covered is so small that the amount cannot have increased more than a few thousands gallons. Still, it is something in the right direction, and is good as long as it lasts. The flow from the brook remains the same as two weeks ago, but is likely to diminish if cold weather continues without rain. There is still need for great care against unnecessary waste of water.

Want to Change Trolley Tracks.

The selectmen will give a hearing in their room in the memorial building next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the petition of the Springfield and Eastern Street Railway Company for a change in the location of its main line and turnout between North Main street and the bridge over the Quaboag river. This change is necessitated by the nearly completed change in the highway at that point. With the completion of the new bridge over the river and the abolition of the ancient "Hastings" bridge and a bad curve in the road in connection therewith, giving a practically straight highway from the north side of the river to the highway near the Overlook Farm, it is desired to change the location of the street railway track from the right to the left of the road, so as to obviate the necessity of crossing it between Main street and the Overlook Farm, as would otherwise be necessary. There will not be any objection to the proposition, and when the work of the new bridge and the change in the track location is completed, the state highway is to be continued from the present ending near the Overlook Farm to Main street.

Family Thanksgiving Party.

A pleasant Thanksgiving reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B Daman, Forest Lake, last week. Among the number present were the five children and sixteen grandchildren of the host, including the infant grandchildren born to each of the three daughters within the past year, viz: Herman Daman, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Capen of Charleton City, Mass; James Brooks, son of Mr and Mrs. F. P. Bowie of Palmer; and Florence Estelle, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Harding of Palmer; born March 1, April 3, and May 29, respectively. Representatives of the family to the number of 26 sat down to an old-fashioned country Thanksgiving dinner, the piece de resistence being roast young pig and a brace of juicy chickens. During the dinner hour Rev. Mr. Harding, in behalf of the company, presented the oldest son of the host, Joseph B. Daman Jr. of Enfield, Mass., an elegant birthday cake and other appropriate gifts, the occasion being also his 32d birthday anniversary.

The regular meeting of the Boys' Club will be omitted next Monday evening.

Mrs. James Gray, a former resident, visited Mrs. Byram Woodhead Monday.

The regular monthly meeting of the firemen will be held next Monday evening.

Mrs. B. C. Shaw and son of Walnut street are visiting her parents in Lowell.

The selectmen will hold their regular monthly meeting next Monday afternoon.

Mrs. James Summers has been called to Ottawa, Ont, by the illness of her mother.

Irving O. Shaw has returned to his studies in Tufts college after a few days in town.

Henry T. Preble of Stockton, Cal., visited Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Bodfish Tuesday.

Howard Brown of Dalton has been a guest at the home of F. N. Carpenter on Thorndike street.

Miss Gladys Paine has returned to Brown University after a few days' visit at her home here.

A. Terrien has resigned his position as barber with John McBride and taken a position in Ware.

Grover C. Goodes has been confined to his home on Pine street this week with a quincy sore throat.

The Sunday school class of Mrs. A. W. Converse had a candy sale in Taylor's store yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. A. J. Lawton has returned to her home after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Russell Rixford in Methuen.

Charles W. S. Mead and daughter of Greenfield have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O P. Allen this week.

Lieutenant-governor Frothingham and the governor's staff made an official visit Wednesday to the epileptic hospital.

The annual meeting of L. L Merrick Woman's Relief Corps will be held this evening, when officers will be elected.

William Thompson, who was formerly a clerk in the post office here, has been appointed transfer clerk in Springfield.

A meeting of the King's Daughters of the Congregational church was held at the home of Mrs. C. W. Bennett Tuesday afternoon.

John Gamwell, who has been receiving treatment in the Worcester hospital, has left that institution and will return to Palmer in a few days.

Rev. Robert Wellwood of China spoke last evening in the Baptist church upon his work in the West China mission, and will speak again this evening.

Undenominational services will be held every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs O C. Marcy on the corner of Walnut and Pleasant streets.

The Foresters will have an initiation next Tuesday evening, when the new degree team will do the work. A smoker and refreshments will follow.

Miss Pearl Fish, who is teacher in the Montclair, N. J. schools, is spending the week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fish on North Main street.

Harry McCabe, monologist, is the attraction at the opera house the last of this week, in addition to the pictures. "Kid" Daven of Springfield appears in comedy songs.

Miss Sophia A Rice has returned to her studies in the Framingham normal school after spending the holiday recess with her parents, Mr. and Mrs George A. Rice on Pleasant street.

At a meeting of the Boys' Club in St Paul's church Monday evening, E. W. Carpenter gave a talk on the way newspapers are printed and the methods used in obtaining news.

The 10 days' closing-out sale of the stock of D L Bodfish, under the care of G. W. Groves & Co. of Buffalo, N. Y, began Wednesday morning. The entire stock is offered at greatly reduced prices.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held next Monday afternoon at 2 15 in the district court room. There will be election of officers and other important business.

A special meeting of Washington council was held Tuesday evening, when District Deputy Frederick H. Scott of Westfield and suite made an official visit. A collation was served after the meeting.

Rev F. W Gibbs was called to Lawrence this week by the death of his father, Rev. W E Gibbs, D D, who died Wednesda . The funeral will be held in the First Universalist church in that city to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

In the district court Monday morning Charles H McKay was found guilty of vagrancy and sentenced to six months in the house of correction. Wednesday morning the case of one "drunk" was continued until the first Monday in January for sentence.

A delegation from Quaboag council, Royal Arcanum, will visit Pynchon council of Springfield next Friday evening, when councils from Holyoke, Westfield, Chicopee Falls, Easthampton and Florence will be represented and there will be a class initiation.

To stimulate the holiday trade the Leonard dry goods store is giving a free coupon with every purchase of 25 cents or more between now and Christmas Eve, at which time a handsome after-dinner coffee set of 18 pieces will be given to the person holding the lucky number, to be drawn that evening.

The new horse bowl, presented to the town by the Palmer Business and Social Club, arrived yesterday and has been set in position on Main street. It is a handsome piece of work. The old iron tub has been taken to Palmer Center, where it will replace the wooden tub in use so long, being located on the opposite side of the road.

The Congregational church services will be held in St Paul's church next Sunday as usual. Sunday school meets at 2 o'clock, church service at 3.15; sermon: "The still small voice." At the regular meeting of the Christian Endeavor society at 7 o'clock, the pastor will give the first of two evening addresses on "How we got our Bible."

The next regular meeting of the Palmer Historical Society will be held in the reference room of the public library next Tuesday night at 7 30 sharp. The paper of the evening will be read by Rev. F. W. Gibbs, entitled "The moral effects of playgrounds and parks." As the paper will be of special interest to the public it is hoped a full attendance will be had.

At the annual meeting of Cyrus W. Cross camp, Sons of Veterans, Wednesday evening, these officers were elected: Commander, P. M. Emery; Senior Vice commander, F Collis; Junior Vice commander, J. F. Clark; camp council, B. F. Emery, C. W. Robinson, E. E. Hobson; delegates to annual encampment, B F Emery, C. W. Robinson; alternates, F. Collis, B. Rose.

The annual fair of the Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's Universalist church will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday. Fancy and useful articles and homemade candy will be on sale both afternoons and evenings. At 6 30 Tuesday evening will come the annual supper. Wednesday evening there will be two farces, "A Pan of Fudge," and "The Bachelor Maids."

The funeral of Mrs. Carrie E. Bird, who died last week Thursday, was held from her late home on Central street Saturday afternoon, Rev. F. W. Gibbs officiating. Miss Lida Ferguson and E E Brooks sang two selections. The bearers were F. N. Carpenter, E W. Carpenter, D. F. Dillon and E E. Brooks. Burial was in the family lot in the Palmer cemetery on Thorndike street.

The pictures at the Elite to-night and to-morrow will be "The Obdurate Father," "Gift of Youth," "The Slave," "The Hudson-Fulton Naval Parade;" this latter film being a special attraction, together with a film showing scenes during the eviction of the Ludlow strike breakers. The songs will be—"You For Me When You're Sweet Sixteen," Albert Gould; "If You Won't Be Good to Me," Miss Lillian E. Dwyer.

Music loving people of Palmer will have an opportunity to enjoy a rare treat in this line next Thursday evening, when the Janser string quartet will give a concert in the town hall in Brimfield. This will undoubtedly be the finest concert of the season, and the admission has been put at the low price of 25 cents. Special electric cars will be run to Palmer after the concert, the program of which will be the same as that recently given at Mount Holyoke.

The high price of eggs during the past year—they have averaged 30 cents a dozen since January 1 and are now 50 cents—has made serene the countenances of those who keep hens and can induce them to lay. Some good records are reported, but one local man thinks he has one which will be hard to beat. He began January 1 with six hens which were a year and three-quarters old, keeping a close account of everything bought for their maintenance and of the eggs they laid. At the end of 45 weeks—Nov. 12—he was exactly $11 68 ahead of the game, averaging the price o eggs at 30 cents.

There is considerable complaint of late regarding the crowded condition of many of the electric cars to Springfield especially in the morning. Patrons see no reason why a car should be run out of Palmer with a dozen or more people standing, with the absolute certainty that more will be taken on before Ludlow is reached. In addition to the inconvenience of standing or having those standing bump against others by the swaying of the car, the crowded condition does not tend to good atmospheric conditions, which become almost intolerable at times. The suggestion is made that, under such conditions, another car, if even a small one, would be appreciated.

Ample Belief.

When Christian Science began to find firm footing in Winchester, the little son of a prominent woman, who had embraced the faith and was urging others to take it up, was ont of school one day or two because of sickness. When the youngester returned his teacher, who was well along in years and possessed an inquiring mind, engaged the youngster in conversation.

"Been sick, Joe?"

"Yes'm"

"Sick enough to be in bed?"

"Yes'm"

"What did your mother do for you, Joe, while you ached in bed?" asked the teacher, now all expectancy for the reply.

"She mended my trousers," lisped Joe.—Independent.

GOLD WITHOUT GLINT

By MARK ANDERSON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"I'm tired of this gentlemanly sailing," said Ned Ellery to the half dozen young men he had aboard his yacht, the Vesta. "What do you say to putting the crew ashore and working her ourselves?"

"A bully idea!" exclaimed all at once.

"Very well, we'll do it, but I want you fellows to understand that you're to obey orders and treat me as respectfully as the crew do. I'm to be captain, you know."

This put a different complexion on the matter, but all considered it jokingly and one by one agreed to "sign articles." The crew were put ashore and given railroad tickets to their homes for a few days' leave. The young men took off their yachting suits, put on ordinary sailors' togs and reported to their captain for duty.

For the first day it was pleasant sailing, but on the second the sky took on a dirty look, the wind freshened and increased to a gale. Since they were near no harbor the Vesta was obliged to stand out to sea, and the gentleman crew found all the work it wanted and more than it had bargained for. One morning tired, soaked and soiled they put into the harbor of one of the most aristocratic towns on the coast. However, the weather had changed, and the sun sparkled merrily on the waves. Ellery went ashore to order provisions. When he returned he said:

"Fellows, I met my old friend Duncan Starkweather on the dock. He's invited a party of girls to go on a cruise, and his yacht has broken down. I offered him mine as a substitute, and it was accepted. We sail at four bells this afternoon."

It looked at first as if there would be a mutiny. All agreed that they had not shipped for any such purpose, but the captain quieted them by saying that while not engaged in actually working the yacht they might devote themselves to the girls. But it must be distinctly understood that they were to retain the role of sailors. Under this provision all consented, the girls were taken aboard and the Vesta weighed anchor.

"I'm sorry," said Starkweather to Ellery, "that I couldn't muster any boys for the girls. The truth is all our young men go to the big cities."

"Too bad!" replied Ellery. "You and I can hardly be expected to entertain ten girls."

This bit of dialogue was overheard by the crew, who looked at one another knowingly. "We'll show these duffers," they muttered, "whether they'll have all the entertaining to do."

The girls sat on the after deck lamenting that there were no young men to flirt with and remembering how advantageous was yachting for catching husbands. Then they strayed away over the ship.

"Beautiful day," remarked Billy Riggs, who was coiling a rope, to Margaret Lee as she passed him.

"Eh?" was her surprised reply as her nose went up.

Billy went on coiling the rope.

"Are you a good sailor?" asked Tom Irwin of Jenny Bowers, lifting his cap.

"A good sailor! Oh, you mean am I liable to be seasick. I'm a pretty good sailor." And she joined a couple of girls further on. Irwin saw the three turn and look at him indignantly.

"You there!" called one girl in a despairing voice to a member of the crew. "Won't you please bring me a napkin or a towel or a bowl or something?"

The sailor didn't hear.

"Here, sailor," cried another girl, "please help me to the side, won't you?"

"Sorry," replied the sailor, "but the jib's flapping. I must go and attend to it."

Ellery, finding that he and Starkweather had more to do in the case of the girls than they could attend to, went forward, called the crew together and remonstrated. His remonstrance produced no effect. The men hadn't shipped as stewards, but before the mast. Then he went to Starkweather and revealed the situation. Starkweather transmitted it to the girls, who by this time were too ill to care whether they were tenderly placed in bunks or permitted to roll in the scuppers. At any rate, they were not in a condition to placate the crew. But the yacht had been headed for the harbor, and it was not long before she was quietly riding at anchor.

"Boys," said the captain, "full dress to speed the parting guests."

Every man went below and returned in white flannel trousers turned up at the ankles and navy blue jacket and cap.

"Young ladies," said the captain, "before you go ashore permit me to introduce my crew." And he mentioned each man separately, the girls now and again recognizing a name which figured frequently in the society columns of the city journals. A few were noted for being the sons of multimillionaires, and all were gentlemen.

The painful scene—painful to the girls, deliciously comforting to the boys—came to an end on the arrival of a boat the captain signaled for, and the young ladies went ashore. The same evening coals of fire were heaped upon their heads by each receiving a basket of flowers with a card, "Compliments of the crew of the Vesta." And that was the last any of them ever saw of the said crew.

"Girls," said Miss Lee at the tea table over which they met the next afternoon, "we've gone and done it. They say 'all is not gold that glitters.' I wish gold would always glitter, so that we lone creatures living in a town deserted by men would know it when we saw it."

THE CARD THAT TOOK THE TRICK.

By RUSSELL THORNE.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"The trouble with you, Jim," said Tom Darby to his friend James Terry, "so far as women are concerned, is that you don't understand them."

"I wish some fellow who knows all about them would establish a school where men could be taught to manage women. I'd enter for instruction. You might give me some points if you would."

"Oh, I don't pretend to know the subject thoroughly. I merely keep in mind a few general feminine characteristics. I don't think much of learning theoretically without practice. I'll tell you what I'll do. There's Maggie Worth, a friend of mine, whom I think I know pretty well. I'll introduce you to her and from time to time coach you on how you shall act toward her. How would you like that?"

"First rate."

The introduction was made after a few preliminary general instructions, such as not to miss an opportunity to pay a compliment, never to engage in argument and always be deferential. Terry did not have much confidence in being able to learn the subject, but was anxious to get rid of a certain faculty he had discerned in himself for antagonizing the sex. He put his mind on the subject, reported all that was going on between himself and the girl on whom he was practicing to his friend Darby, and received minute instructions as to how to act in each and every case. But whether he was especially obnoxious to this particular girl or he was incapable of being taught how to make a lady's man of himself, he seemed to fare worse with Miss Worth than with any woman he had ever met. Darby kept suggesting acts and words unimportant in themselves, but well calculated to gratify a woman. They all appeared to irritate rather than please the person on whom they were practiced.

"Just hold on a bit," said Darby after Terry had reported the failure of one of the "attentions" the coach had suggested. "You keep off for awhile, and I'll step in and see if I can find out what's the matter. From what you tell me, you carry out my instructions to the letter, and yet they don't seem to work. I'll get Maggie to tell me wherein you fail."

A few days later Darby told his friend that he had better choose another subject. Maggie had taken an especial dislike to him. There was Darby's own sister Ruth. Better try her. Terry seemed quite relieved at the change and entered upon sharpening his abilities to please the sex by whetting them on the new subject. One day Terry said to his pupil:

"Somehow, ever since I introduced you to Ruth, Maggie has seemed displeased not only with you, but with me. She says you are a weak, vacillating sort of fellow, and my being a friend of yours shows conclusively that—well, she puts it 'birds of a feather flock together.'"

"Why don't you try some of the devices on her you recommended to me?"

"I will. I'll send her the prettiest basket of flowers I can buy and write her a note. I know exactly how to put it. Just you wait."

A few days later Terry met Miss Worth walking in the park. She smiled at him and asked him if he would show her the way to the grotto. In his ignorance of how to please a woman he replied that he hadn't time, whereupon the girl angrily told him that he hadn't a single gentlemanly instinct. He gave way at once and walked humbly beside her. Before parting with him she told him to come to see her that evening; she had a present for him. He called, and, taking the most beautiful flowers from those sent her by Darby, she gave them to him. He took them to Darby and with wonder in his eyes asked him what it all meant.

"Well, I'll be jinged!" exclaimed the teacher in woman's management.

"I'll tell you what, Jim," he said presently. "While I have a general knowledge of the characteristics of women, there's something in this case that puzzles me. I prefer that you should work the rest of it out by yourself."

"I don't know how," said Terry lugubriously.

There was an estrangement from this time between teacher and pupil, between Terry and Ruth Darby and between Ruth Darby and Maggie Worth. Darby's efforts to make a lady's man of his friend had apparently borne thistles instead of fruit. One day Darby went to his friend and said:

"Jim, I've just had a talk with Ruth. What do you suppose she says?"

"What?"

"That Maggie Worth is dead in love with you."

"With me!"

"Yes. And so is Ruth in love with you."

"Great Scott! What makes you think that?"

"She's so bitter against Maggie."

"Heavens! What am I to do?"

"I've instructed you how to win the girl I expected to marry. At any rate, you've done it."

There was a solemn pause between the friends, at the end of which the pupil said, "Tom, can you show me how to undo it?"

"Jim," said Darby, extending his hand after another pause, "women are sharper than men to see some things. I didn't know what an honorable numskull you are."

WOMAN'S GOOD FORTUNE.

Will Receive $30,000 by Recent Death of Relative in England.

Mrs. L. R. Robertson of this town received official notification from competent authorities on Thanksgiving Day that she will shortly receive $30,000 by the death of an aunt in England.

Mrs. Robertson's mother was a daughter of Col. Thomas C. Knight of Dover, England, by whose will two daughters were to have a life use of his large estate. These daughters never married; one died soon after the death of her father and the other recently, and the estate is now to be divided equally among five brothers and sisters, including Mrs. Robertson, these being the only living descendants of Col Knight.

Mrs. Robertson is a widow and has lived in Monson 17 years. She has two sons, one of whom is employed out of town and the other is attending the Academy. She is at present employed in the Ellis mill, having been obliged, since the death of her husband several years ago, to support herself and children. The unexpected news of her good fortune is as welcome as it was unexpected. She does not expect to receive the money until spring, and in the meantime will continue to work in the mill. When the money comes she says she will probably leave Monson and build a comfortable home and try to enjoy herself the remainder of her life. Meanwhile she is patiently awaiting the arrival of the legacy.

Davenport—Goldsmith.

John Wilfred Goldsmith of Milford and Ida Louise Davenport of this town were married at the home of M. S. Chatman, the bride's father, at North Monson last evening at 7 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Gage, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, the single ring service being used. Mrs. Harriet Hamilton was matron of honor and George Kynock of Milford acted as best man. The bride's gown was of white chiffon and she carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The matron's gown was of white muslin. The bride's traveling costume was garnet broadcloth with hat to match. Guests were present from Springfield, Greenwich, Milford, Providence, R. I., and Windsor, Vt. The wedding presents were numerous, including cut glass, linen and silverware. Mr. Goldsmith is employed in Governor Draper's office. After an extended wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith will be at home after January 1, 1910, at their home at 27 Purchase street, Milford.

Death of Mrs. Delia Devaraine.

Mrs. Delia Devaraine, 89, died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. M. J. Martell, at the corner of Bridge and Elm streets last Monday morning at 3 o'clock, from the effects of a paralytic shock which was sustained a month ago. Mrs Devaraine, up to the time of her shock, had enjoyed very good health. She leaves two sons and two daughters, John and Edmund of Canada, and Mrs. H. LaFond of Manchester and Mrs. F. A. LaPalme of this town; also several grandchildren. The funeral was held from her late home Wednesday morning at 8 30 o'clock, the funeral mass being celebrated in St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock. Burial was in the Pearl street cemetery.

Struck By Plank, Sustains Broken Leg.

Charles Johnson was seriously injured while at work in the construction of a building at the State Epileptic Hospital Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Johnson was at work on the basement of the building, his head and shoulders being in under the building, when a 30-foot two-inch plank fell from the second story, hitting him on the right leg, inflicting a large gash on his hip and splintering the bone just below the knee. He was taken to the office of Dr. E. W. Capen on Main street, where he received treatment, the bone being set by Dr. Capen assisted by Dr. Cheney of Palmer. Johnson was taken to his home in Colton Hollow where he is resting comfortably, but will be confined to his home for some time.

To Leave Town.

Joseph C. Parsons, who for the past 17 years has been employed as draughtsman for the W. N. Flynt Granite Co., has resigned his position and has purchased a general store in Longmeadow. Mr. Parsons has been a member of the school committee for the past six years, has acted as captain of the Quaboag golf team for two years and is also a member of the Business Men's Social Club. During his stay in Monson he has made a host of friends and his leaving town is gravely felt by them, but all wish him success in his new venture.

Death of Orlando Marston.

Orlando Marston, 65, died Friday afternoon, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Moses Lewis, on Pearl street. Death was caused by rheumatism of the heart. He had been seriously affected by rheumatism for several years, and had been unable to leave the house. He had been seriously ill for two weeks. He leaves a widow and several children. The funeral was held from his late home Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. M. Gage officiating. Burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

Receives Painful Injuries.

Joseph Maguire was seriously cut at his shoe shop on Margaret street last Tuesday. He accidentally put his right hand through a pane of glass, severely cutting his arm above the wrist, so that it required 14 stitches to close the wound. His right side was also injured by the fall. He was removed to the home of his brother, John C. Maguire, with whom he lives, on High street. He was attended by Dr. C. W. Jackson. Mr. Maguire is improving, but will be unable to work for several weeks

BRIMFIELD.

Death of Charles H. Fairbanks.

Charles H Fairbanks, 78, a native of this place, died at his home in West Brookfield last Friday morning, after a long illness. Mr. Fairbanks was born in Brimfield January 27, 1831, and received his education in the schools of Brimfield and Warren, going to West Brookfield with his parents when 15 years old. He had been engaged in the provision business in Brookfield and Springfield, but had returned to West Brookfield to carry on the home farm. He is survived by a widow, one son and one daughter, also two brothers, Edward Fairbanks of Warren and Dwight Fairbanks of Brookfield. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, with burial in the Brookfield cemetery.

MAY PROVE FATAL.

When Will Palmer People Learn the Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first:

But when you know 'tis from the kidneys:

That serious kidney troubles follow:

That diabetes, Bright's disease may be the fatal end.

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

'Tis the honest statement of a sufferer who was cured.

Geo. E. Wood, State Ave., Monson, Mass., says: "About five years ago I was subject to attacks of backache, which, together with irregular passages of the kidney secretions, made my life miserable. I consulted our family physician, but received the discouraging answer that my chances to live more than a year were slight. I then began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Lynde & Gould's Drug Store and I am now an example of the curative powers of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name — DOAN'S — and take no other.

Too Expensive Arithmetic.

This letter was sent a short time ago to a school teacher by an anxious parent:—

"Sir: Will you in the future give my son easier soms to do at nites? This is what he's brought hoam two or three nites back. If fore gallons of bere will fill thirty-to pint bottles, how many piuts and half bottles will nine gallons of bere fill? Well, we tried and could make nothing of it at all, and my boy cried and laughed, and sed he didn't dare to go back in the morning without doing it. So I had to go and buy a nine gallon keg of bere, which I could ill afford to do, and then he went and borrowed a lot of wine and brandy bottles. We filled them, and my boy put the number down for an answer. I don't know whether it is right or not, as we spilt some while doing it."

"P. S.—Please let the next sum be in water, as I am not able to buy more bere."

BOSTON LETTER.

although there were some of the younger element in attendance who may live for a generation to keep the subject before the public. But issues nearer at home attract the attention of the majority of voters, and the fate of the Filipinos does not seem likely to be decided by the company which met yesterday in the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club. Unquestionably forces are cooperating for their independence from the United States, especially since the United States navy abandoned the Philippines as a naval base and fell back upon the Hawaiian Islands. But still, it looks as if the Filipinos, by their own superb national spirit, perseverance and good sense, with the aid of the good Lord, would work ont their own salvation themselves, rather than through the support of the United States constitution or laws, although, of conrse, they appreciate highly the encouragement of the anti-imperialists, which will be given to them steadfastly as long as the issue is open.

Since the last letter the managers of the exposition under the Boston 1915 movement have decided to keep the doors open to the end of this week, instead of closing last Saturday night. This exposition continues to make its deep impression upon the men and women who have the time to study its painstaking exhibits as they deserve. The movement has reached the point where it is paying expenses, and it has received much gratnitons help from the public-spirited people who are back of the movement. It costs abont $2000 per week for the attendants, bnt all the coal has been given and other charges are lightened. All the Boston newspapers have given all their advertising and that has meant much. Bnt the show is for the benefit of the entire state, and outside citizens have donbtless learned many things which will come np later to improve their localities.

There has been a visitor here this week from a suburban town. He heard that the Boston town room (which is at No 3 Joy street) had much of help for those trying to improve their local town conditions and spirit. He knew nothing where the Towu room was, bnt he came to the state house, found ont, and went his way glad. That town room has lots of valnable material at the service of any citizen who wants to study it and every town in the state can learn something there in these days when civic betterment is coming to the front so rapidly.

LANDON.

Smallest Coins In The World.

The natives of the Malay peninsula have in use what is said to be the very smallest coin in the world. It is a sort of wafer, made from the resinous juice of a tree, and is worth about one-ten thousandth of a penny. The smallest metal coin in circulation at the present day is the Portnguese three-reis piece, worth one-twelve hundredth of a penny. The smallest coin circulating officially in any part of the British empire is the five-millesima piece of Gibraltar, worth abont half a farthing We have heard that Alexander, the coppersmith, has done much harm to many good causes by instigating people to put pennies instead of big bills into the collection baskets, and it is to be feared that the covetous, whether in the Malay peninsula, Portugal or Gibraltar, take undue advantage (when the plates are passed) of the infinitesimal coinage of those realms.—From Zion's Herald.

A VIRGINIA EPISODE.

By HARRIET CAMBEY.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

During that period when the armies of the Confederacy and of the north were swaying back and forth in Virginia, while in command of the —th New York volnnteer infantry, I was advanced one evening into territory that had been previously held by the enemy. Near me was a house, and from the inmates I received an invitation to supper. I accepted and found a lady and her daughter, the rest of the family, consisting of two sons, being in the Confederate army. I will call them Mrs. and Miss Bates. Considering that the blockade had deprived them of all table supplies except such as could be raised in the south, they gave me a very fair meal, made up of the only chicken left by the "Johnnies" and the delicious hot bread that southern women know so well how to make.

I was then twenty-eight years old and considered myself passably attractive to women. There can be no immodesty in my now saying so, since the wrinkled, white headed old man of today is not the same bodily person as the young soldier of 1863 I had seen those southern girls fall precipitately in love on sight with our Yankee boys and was not especially taken aback when Clara Bates showed a sudden admiration for me.

The young lady confined the expression of her attraction for me to her eyes and her speech. She would not permit me even to touch her hand. She seemed troubled at the proximity of two hostile armies, declaring that, though her sympathies were with the Confederates, she hoped they would retreat farther south. I set myself to work to draw from her any information she might possess of the enemy's intentions, and she told me that a southern general whom she spoke of familiarly as Bob and who had left her only that morning had expressed an opinion that it would be some time before he would see her again. Considering this to indicate a further retreat, I was about to take my leave for the purpose of reporting it at once to my general when I heard from the next room the words, spoken in Mrs. Bates' own voice:

"Kiss me again, Bob."

Darting a glance at my companion, I saw the blood rushing into her face. Then she started up to leave the room; but, grasping her wrist, I detained her. Immediately from the same room as before came a succession of smacks. Miss Bates made another effort to free herself, but I laughingly held her, saying:

"This is far too interesting to lose. Please sit still."

"Clara! Sweetheart!" came another voice, this time a man's, but sounding rather as if it issued from a phonograph than a human being, followed by a lot of unintelligible croaking.

Miss Bates writhed, but by this time I had both her wrists in my grasp, and she could not get away. I held her for perhaps five minutes, waiting for something more from the adjoining room. Presently it came in a masculine voice:

"All together! Surprise 'em! Two o'clock!"

At this the heightened color left my prisoner's face, and she turned pale. I would not now let her go on any account. It must have been five minutes before more came. Then it was:

"Goodby, sweetheart! Goodby! Goodby!"

There was a long wait after this, and I was beginning to fear there would be no more when I received another installment, still in the masculine:

"Bob, turn their right! Turn their right! Turn their right! Oho! Goodby, Clara! Kiss me!"

Releasing my prisoner, I left her with a derisive "Goodby, Clara!" and, directing that a guard be immediately thrown around the house that there might be no communication from it with the enemy, I rode at once to the corps commander.

"General," I said, "I have just passed through an experience which I interpret as follows: I have been entertained by a southern girl who purposely gave me false information that the enemy in our front would again retreat. There I learned, doubtless from a parrot in an adjoining room, which had been used either for a council of war or from which orders were issued, that we will be attacked before daylight in the morning; though what morning I can't inform you. Tomorrow seems most likely."

"Thanks, colonel," replied the general. "We'll take the precantion to be under arms every morning."

It was half past 2 the very next morning that an attack was made on our right, re-enforced by artillery, followed by infantry, all along the line. But as soon as the enemy saw that we were under arms and ready for them they ceased firing and gradually withdrew. We followed and gained a substantial advantage.

What interested me after the fight was to learn the name of the Confederate general who attempted to turn our right. This I had no difficnlty in doing from prisoners captured on the field. From them I learned that the general was one of the youngest and most attractive in the Confederate service, that he commanded a division in a corps commanded by his uncle and that his first name was Robert.

Ten years after the war ended, having occasion to visit Virginia, I sought out the house in which the episode had occurred. Miss Bates had married General "Bob." I wrote a note asking permission to call and was entertained hospitably by the couple.

Nocturnal Tragedy.

It is a dark night. It is also a dark kitchen. The kind hearted man in his stocking feet is after a drink of water for his fretful youngster. He thinks he can find his way in the inky darkness. He is mistaken. He turns to the left instead of to the right and falls down cellar.

Poison in the Middle Ages.

In the middle ages so little was known of toxicology that all sudden and mysterious deaths were attributed to poison, but in the light of modern knowledge many of these, says the British Medical Journal, are now easily explained by such diseases as appendicitis and gastric ulcer. Even the Borgias can be absolved from many of the poisonings laid to their charge Nevertheless from early times in Italy poison was a favorite means of "removing" an enemy. In England, France and Germany cruder methods of vengeance prevailed, and it was not until the sixteenth century that the Medici introduced poisoning into France. The fashion spread with terrible rapidity, and poison was employed in every rank of society to get rid of inconvenient persons. The art introduced into France by Catherine de' Medici and her followers took root so deeply as to blossom later into the black magic of Louis XIV.'s reign.

Or Vegetable Pain Reliever

was introduced to the public in 1848, since which time thousands of bottles have been sold each year to an appreciative public, which is a good evidence of its merits. It is adapted to so many ailments it should be in every household, for it cures all kinds of pains both internal and external. For Bronchial affections it is unrivaled by any article in the market. It is a sure cure for Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, if taken in season, also for Coughs. It is an effective remedy for rheumatic affections, stiff joints, swelled limbs, sprains, cramps, toothache and many other ills to which the flesh is heir. Try it and it will do you good. It is sold at 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle by The Quimby Pharmacy, LeGro's Drug Store and the proprietor.

GOOD WORD FOR FAIR.

Report of State Inspector is Very Flattering.

ONLY WORDS OF PRAISE FOR SHOW.

Expert on Such Matters Says Palmer Fair Is to be Congratulated on Results.

While the officers and committees in charge of the Palmer Fair know that they had a good exhibition, it is naturally gratifying when others not only appreciate it but make their appreciation known. The delegate appointed by the State Board of Agriculture to visit the Palmer Fair and report to the Board the conditions found there has made his report and it is a flattering one. The delegate this year was Mr. William B. Avery of Charlemont. Mr. Avery is no novice in matters pertaining to agricultural fairs, being a member of the Deerfield Valley society and one of its most active workers. He knows all that a fair ought to be. His report on the Palmer Fair is as follows:

"Having been assigned as inspector of the Eastern Hampden society fair held at Palmer, October 8 and 9 it was possible for me to be there only on the closing day. I cannot speak too highly of the courteous entertainment given me by the president and other officials of the fair. The fair seemed to be in a prosperous condition, the exhibits being not only large, but also of good quality

"Only part of the cattle remained for the second day, but from the number of entries shown the first day there must have been strong competition in this department. The display of horses and colts shows that quite an advance has been made toward better horses in that section. The contest of draft horses was good, some heavy loads being drawn.

"There was a large exhibit of fruit and vegetables, the grange doing much to make this department a success. The trotting included some of the best witnessed this season. The society should be congratulated upon its track, for with a little rounding of the turns it would be one of the best half-mile tracks in the state. The midway was quite large, but no objectionable features were noticed. The society has erected new bleachers the past year, these being well filled during the races."

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Mary C. Bassett.

Mrs. Mary Cutler Bassett, 86, widow of the late Henry Bassett, died Monday evening at her home on Bank street where she had lived over 50 years in the house built by her husband. She was born in Hardwick in December, 1823, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Paige. She lived in her native town until her marriage, April 9, 1845, since which time she had lived in Ware. She had always been accustomed to a quiet home life and was not actively interested in outside affairs, though for many years a regular attendant at the Unitarian church. Mr. Bassett, well known as an assessor, died in 1897 at the age of 76. The children surviving are Edgar H. of Ware, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth, wife of Austin P. Christy of Worcester, and Miss Sarah P. Bassett of Cambridge. One of her brothers survives, John W. Paige of Hardwick, who is now 84. Mrs Bassett had been confined to her bed since March and death was due to a gradual decline due to old age. The funeral was held yesterday noon at the home.

Death of Mrs. Hannah Nichols.

Mrs. Hannah B. Nichols, 93 died, at the home of her son Frank on Vernon street Monday. She had been in failing health for some time and death was due to old age. Besides the son Frank, she leaves another son, George, of Orange. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

John H. Schoonmaker has purchased the residence of A. B. Paton on Chestnut street. Mr. Paton will move his family to Dover, N. H.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan S. Archambeault was struck in the head back of the ear by a snowball Monday afternoon, reciving a bad cut.

Byran D Rohan, Joseph Giard, John T. Dowd and John F. McElehenny have been drawn as jurors for the criminal term of the superior court sitting at Northampton this month. They are summoned to report on Monday, the 27th.

Ware aerie of Eagles has elected these officers: President, L. S Charbonneau; vice president, J. J Madden; recording secretary and treasurer, John A. Riley; financial secretary, John O'Bryan; chaplain, Louis Miner; past worthy president, J. H. Feehan; trustees for three years, George Haley, H F. Lamoureux, Alphonse Lumbina; aerie physician, D. H. D. Gainey.

J. W. Lawton Relief Corps has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs Nellie Marsh; senior vice president, Mrs Lucy Ainsworth; junior vice president, Mrs. Lettie Fairbanks; chaplain, Mrs. Eliza Richardson; secretary, Mrs. Harriet Barnes; treasurer, Mrs Susie Southworth; conductor, Mrs Lina Collins; guard, Mrs. Margaret Houghtaling. Mrs Barnes was chosen delegate, and Mrs. Susie Fairbanks as alternate to the state convention at Boston in April.

The annual election of officers in the Sunday school of the Methodist church resulted as follows: Superintendent, Ralph A. Sullivan; assistant superintendent, Miss C. Della Sibley; secretary, Edward T. Montgomery; assistant secretary, Charles Breen; treasurer, H P Cummings; librarian, Judson C. Babcock; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. W. C. Townsend; assistant, Miss Amy Coney; organist, Miss Clara Pratt; chorister, Robert Ferguson; missionary treasurer, Miss C. D. Sibley; superintendent of home department, Rev. W. C. Townsend.

The tobacco store, poolroom and bowling alleys of C. O Amazeen & Co. have been sold by C. O. Amazeen of Leominster and E. E. Stackpole of Clinton to James M. Reilley and Michael Buckley, who have reopened the business. The two men who sold out the business had carried it on for nearly 20 years. Mr. Reilley has been the manager of the business for several years, going to Ware from Ipswich. His associate is the well-known basketball player of former years. He has been employed by R. G. Harrington in the plumbing business for 10 years, and has always lived in Ware

Rev. F. S. Brewer supplied the pulpit of the Union church in Three Rivers Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. C. B. McDuffie being quarantined at home by diphtheria in the family.

NEW WARE HOSPITAL.

Opened to the Public Yesterday With Informal Exercises.

The new hospital in Ware was thrown open to the public yesterday A number of clergymen, physicians and thers went over the building between 9 and 12 in the morning, while the house was open to the general public between 2 and 5 in the afternoon, with informal exercises at 2

The hospital is the former residence of E. O Deery of South street, and while never designed for its present use, the changes and alterations have resulted in a hospital of which the townspeople may feel proud. There are four rooms on each floor, all admirably fitted up, everything being of the latest design and sanitary in every way. The floors have nearly all been left uncovered, and the walls, free from all paper, have been painted in pleasing colors, setting off well the many pretty pictures hung in the rooms of the lower story. The reception-room, opening from the hall in the southwest corner, is to be used also as a dining room by the matron and nurse, and is fitted with handsome oak furniture, the gift of E H. Gilbert. In the china closet is the silver given by C. Hitchcock & Co. and all marked, as well as the linen, with the words "Ware hospital." The two rooms on the north side are for the matron, Miss Juniette Parsons, and the district nurse, Miss Anna D. Rohan, and both are most comfortably located. The kitchen is as neat as the other rooms, and the new Glenwood cabinet range, with its furnishings, given by H. K Hyde, together with a new gas range and set tubs, provide for every want. Between the kitchen and the dining-room is a small bathroom with the latest fittings. The house has steam heat and electric lights.

In the upper story are three rooms for patients, the operating room and another small bathroom. The operating room is in the southeast corner and is equipped with the best of apparatus, the gift of Mrs Hyde. The front room on the south side is the Mary Hall Draper room, given by George L Draper of Los Angles, Cal., while that in the rear is to be known as the St. John room, because its furnishings were given by the local society of that name. The chairs and dressers in these two rooms are of bird's-eye maple. Each of the three rooms is provided with the high iron bed and movable iron tray containing certain dishes such are needed for feeding and caring for a patient. A plentiful supply of linen of all kinds has been prepared, and the members of the committee on supplies have earned great praise for their untiring efforts. Mrs. H. O. Robinson and Mrs. T P Studd have been especially active, the latter being responsible for the dainty curtains at the windows.

FOR PUBLIC PLAYGROUND.

Business Club Appoints Committee to Take Matter Up With Others.

There is evidently a good deal of interest in the public playground project At a recent meeting of the Palmer Historical Society a committee to consider the matter was appointed, and at a meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club Tuesday evening a committee consisting of C. L Waid, D. L. Bodfish and W. E. McDonald was appointed to confer with other committees to consider the matter. It is probable that a citizens' meeting will be called later to consider ways and means.

BOWLING.

He worked for the Springfield Street Railway Company 25 years, beginning his employment when the company used horse cars. Besides his parents he leaves a sister, Mrs. C. I. Burleigh, and two brothers, Edward Pierce of Hampden and Thomas, who is employed by the Springfield Street Railway Company. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

LUDLOW STRIKE SETTLED

Weavers Go Back To-day at Reduced Wage Rate.

STATE BOARD TO SETTLE QUESTION

Government to Proceed Against Company For Violation of Immigration Laws.

The strike of the Polish weavers in the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates' at Ludlow is ended, and the weavers have gone back to work pending a settlement of the wage question, which will be made by the state board of arbitration. Pending the adjustment of the wage question, the weavers will work at the price made by the company which caused the strike, 20 cents a hundred yards; later, if it is decided that the price shall be 24 cents, the weavers will be paid the difference.

A new phase has developed in the trouble at Ludlow, which has attracted almost country-wide notice. It is reported that the United States government is to proceed against the Ludlow company for violation of the immigration laws The cause of the offending is said to be a small pamphlet which the company published, setting forth the beauties of Ludlow and the advantages of working in the mills of the company there, and inviting workers to come to that town. Many copies of this book were mailed to Poland.

GETS WATCH AND CHAIN.

Ware Chief of Police, Gone Up Higher, Given Flattering Testimonial.

There was a large gathering in the town hall Wednesday evening, when a testimonial was presented to Sheriff Maurice Fitzgerald, in recognition of his services as chief of police for so many years in town H. M. Coney, chairman of the board of selectmen, presided at the meeting, and spoke at some length upon the splendid service rendered by the former chief and the high regard in which he is held by his fellow townsmen. He then introduced George D Storrs, the former chairman of selectmen, who also testified to the good qualities of Sheriff Fitzgerald, and read letters from elsewhere in connection with the testimonial. After music by Clark & Dean's orchestra, Judge Henry C. Davis was called upon to present the testimonial which had been prepared. This consisted of a gold watch and chain, with a purse of $65 in gold, representing in all about $200 Sheriff Fitzgerald responded, thanking the givers for their generous treatment, not only at this time but also at the polls in November. Remarks were made by E D. Howard, a former member of the board of selectmen, J. Odilaer Deslauriers, a present member, and A. H. Eldredge.

Ludlow Woman Fatally Burned.

Mrs. Kara Klotkocke, 35, one of the striking employees of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates, was fatally burned at her home in Ludlow last evening. She was attempting to start a fire in her parlor stove and was using kerosene oil on the wood. The flames set fire to the oil can and it exploded. The woman was drenched with oil, and in a second her clothing was in flames. She called for help, and her husband, who was in the cellar, rushed to the parlor and rolled his wife in a blanket, extinguishing the flames. The woman was burned beyond hope of recovery, and was removed to the Ludlow hospital.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Dec 15, 1909.

Sergeant-at-Arms Remington has made out the appointments of messengers at the state house for the session of the Legislature so that the men will have due authority for taking hold at the beginning. But, as the new sergeant-at-arms has the appointment of these officials for the coming political year, they will have to be reappointed as soon as the election has been held. Accordingly Captain Remington has made out the appointments conditional upon the approval of the new sergeant-at-arms and subsequent indorsement by the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House, for these officials, by law, have to give their approval to the appointments of the sergeant-at-arms. The old messengers seem to be reappointed and there is felt no doubt by them that when Doorkeeper Pedrick is elected sergeant-at-arms, as he expects to be and presumably will be, there will be no changes in the force. Pedrick is popular with the men

The Boston municipal campaign continues to maze of fourish things and there seems to be no way out of them consistent with the welfare of the city Among the politicians there is a common idea that the Republican state forces prefer the election of Fitzgerald to either Storrow and that the influence of the machine is really for Fitzgerald's benefit. Here is the way it is put in brief Mayor Hibbard was indebted to the Republican state leaders for his election When he had been elected, he promised to give the city a non-partisan and economical administration. He claims to have saved $1 000 000 to the city and no one ventures to dispute him In trying to carry out his promise to be nonpartisan he took counsel with Former Mayor Matthews, who is a Democrat. This was highly displeasing, so it is said to Senator Lodge, who as a Republican politician, did not believe in relying upon Matthews. Hence Lodge has turned against Hibbard personally and wants him defeated But he also wants the reformers defeated who secured the adoption of Plan No 2, which overturns the politicians' plans, who preferred Plan No 1 But if Hibbard were to withdraw, it might permit the election of Storrow, who is a Democrat in national affairs, though he is supported by all the Republican ward committees, except three or four, and by Republicans generally, and by those who believe that Fitzgerald's administration was thoroughly bad as made out by the finance commission So, to kill two birds with one stone, defeat both Hibbard and Storrow and slam the good government people, the shrewdest course is to keep both Hibbard and Storrow in the field. This will insure the election of Fitzgerald and the discomfiture of the reformers. It is one of the alleged facts of the campaign that Republicans urge Hibbard to stick and then go over to Fitzgerald headquarters and report progress. At the several headquarters the news is according to the places visited, but out in the open there seems to be a general belief that Fitzgerald is sure of election. Friday will be the last day for filing nomination papers, and the election will occur January 11. Each candidate is busy constantly. Storrow and Fitzgerald are speaking very frequently, but Hibbard has lost his voice so that he whispers painfully, but he looks in excellent condition. He returned to the city Monday. He is determined not to withdraw. Many who believe that he ought to do so still admit that he has been used roughly and that the reformers ought to have at least consulted him before trying to throw him down. There is nothing hopeful for the so-called good government side in the mayorality outlook, nor does the new charter yet prove itself to be worth what it has cost.

Captain Robert A. Bartlett of the Roosevelt and the Peary Arctic party was the guest of Representative Norman H. White of Brookline at the Exchange Club last evening. Some representatives, newspaper men and others to a large number were invited and the feature of the evening was a stereopticon talk by Capt. Bartlett. He is an unpretentious man who is evidently much more familiar with doing things than in telling about them for the public entertainment. He is a much younger man than would have been expected of one who has made such a record. His home is on the east side of Newfoundland, at Brigus, and he has no liking for the ways of the cities Perhaps the most interesting and instructive part of his story was that describing how the different parties worked. First his party went in advance to blaze the trail and remove the worst roughnesses. Then came the second party, a distance of some miles behind, working at the trail and making it still more passable. Behind them was the third party, doing more of the same work and making a comparatively good path for the final party consisting of Commander Peary and the men who went to the pole with him. This was what made the success of the dash to the pole possible Bartlett himself went within 120 miles of the pole and the other parties turned back sooner, always having the poorest dogs and the most damaged sledges sent back He did not mention Dr. Cook at all. In private conversation, telling how they crossed the dangerous leads of open water, he said that they either had to wait for them to freeze, or else they would break off great cakes of ice large enough to make a raft to carry them and so carry themselves over. Sometimes the young ice would be but three or four inches thick, and it would undulate under them "It was one of the risks of the trip," he said, and so it was, for Professor Marvin was drowned making one of these crossings.

The growing interest in the discussion of national finances appears in the subject of the Economic club at the American House to-night: "Would a central bank be the best remedy for the defects in our present financial system?" Horace White of New York, well-known for his long connection with the New York Evening Post and chairman of the committee appointed by Gov. Hughes to investigate the stock exchanges, is the principal speaker in the affirmative and he is supported by Charles A. Conant, now connected with a New York financial institution, but before that Washington correspondent of northern papers, and before that connected with the Boston Daily Advertiser On the other side are Alexander D. Noyes, the financial editor of the New York Evening Post and author of various financial writings, including the "Free Coinage Catechism," of which 2,000,000 copies were issued He has the support of Prof. O. M. W Sprague, of the chair of banking and finance at Harvard University. Each of these men figures as an authority of note and so their lining up on different sides shows how even the doctors disagree on some of our important questions.

NO WRITING ON THEM.

Messages Barred From Christmas Packages Except at Advanced Postage.

Senders of Christmas packages by mail will do well to be careful what they write on the wrappers, unless they wish their package held up for want of sufficient postage, and if there is no way of determining who mailed them having them forwarded to the dead letter office. Uncle Sam is generous in transporting all sorts of mail for his children, but there are certain rules which he has promulgated, and he is decidedly "fussy" about having them observed.

Don't write "Not to be opened until Christmas" ou packages you send by mail. They may be printed or stamped — using the little Christmas stickers so common in recent years — but not written; if the words are written the package is then subject to first-class postage, which is just double the merchandise rate, and will be held at the post office until the lack is made up. If there is no way of determining who mailed the package it will later be forwarded to Washington.

Many persons write a message on a souvenir postal and then enclose it in an envelope to save it from being mutilated in transit, affixing a one-cent stamp to the en elope and leaving it unsealed. The writing ou the postal makes a two-ce t stamp necessary, when if there was no writing it would go for one cent. The postals which have powdered mica or tinsel on them must be placed in an envelope or they will not be forwarded; they will go for one cent if there is no writing on them.

One other thing which senders of Christmas packages will do well to bear in mind, and that is to send packages early. Those mailed only a day or two before Christmas not only run a good chance of being crushed under a heavy weight of mail in t ansit, but are quite likely to be delayed in delivery in the great amount of work which comes in the post offices the last day or two, especially in the large cities.

ARGUMENT OVER?

No One Seems to Know, But it Was Priced $12; No Funds, Up.

Ralph R. Denno and John Lauprey were hungry Saturday afternoon and proceeded to the Sego lunch room to fill up. After giving their order they started an argument between themselves; no one seems to know what it was about; perhaps they wished to change the order to hash, at any rate they proceeded to mix it for themselves. The first thing was a big jar of lambs' tongues from the corner of the lunch counter; it was deposited in a "mess" on the floor and other ingredients added one by one. By the time some of the attendants arrived on the scene they had "mixed it up" through into the kitchen and were still at it. The proprietor offered to take pay for the damage done and say no more about the matter, but the men said no, and so appeared in court Monday morning charged with an affray. They pleaded guilty and were fined $6 each; lacking funds they were sent up.

WOMAN BADLY HURT.

Six Stitches in Scalp, Badly Bruised on Body and Limbs.

Mrs. Fred Woodward of Nortb Main street is ill at her home as the result of injuries received on Thursday evening of last week while alighting from an electric car near her home. Mrs. Woodward's version of the accident is that she left Palmer on the car scheduled for 5.15, telling the conductor where she wished to get off. The car stopped at that point and she had put one foot on the ground when the car started suddenly, throwing her to the ground. Her hurts were so serious that she remained unconscious until the next forenoon. In addition to the cut in her head there are numerous bruises on her limbs and she was badly shaken up generally. The conductor was in the front of the car at the time, picking up fares, and is said to have called out to those in the rear vestibule, "All right there?" and received an affirmative answer before starting the car.

SCENIC IS CLOSED.

Latest Company to Try Moving Pictures There Gives Up Attempt.

The moving picture show at the Scenic theatre (Palmer Opera House) moved for the last time under the last management last Saturday night. It couldn't last. The New England Amusement Company, which reopened the place eight weeks ago tonight, apparently tired of attempting to draw a profitable patronage, and quietly withdrew from the field with last Saturday evening's performance. Moving pictures were combined with vaudeville to make a two-hours' show, but the public divided its patronage between the Scenic and the Elite, which is owned by local people and has been established some time, and the Scenic expenses were more than the patronage there would pay for. It is understood that a local man is considering the proposition of opening the place.

Two Runaways, But No Serious Damage.

Two runaways, in which three teams were engaged, created a little excitement on Main street Monday, with a net result of "no damage." In the morning two teams owned by A. Goldberg, the junk dealer, which were standing in front of the Holden block, mixed up and the horses, becoming frightened, started down the street with the wheels of the vehicles locked. It looked very much like "t-r-o-u-b-l-e" for a few moments, but the animals were handicapped as to speed, and were stopped near Walnut street after a run of a little more than a block. Later a horse belonging to S. M. Phillips, the undertaker, started to run from his place of business on North Main street, but was soon stopped.

Wanted a Ride — Got It.

Two young men started from Warren Wednesday for a free ride and succeeded in securing it. They not only had the ride, with stop-over privileges, but were presented at court and are now enjoying private quarters with uniformed attendants to care for them. They boarded the west-bound passenger train due in Palmer at 7 34 and treated with contempt the conductor's request for a ticket each or its equivalent. Consequently at Palmer they were conducted to the cooler, and yesterday morning His Honor, Judge Kenefick, said $6 each; there was no greater supply of funds forthcoming than the evening before, so they are spending Chistmas on York street in Springfield.

Farmers' Institute Next Wednesday.

A Farmers' Institute, under the anspices of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society, will he held in the district court room in Palmer next Wednesday at 11 in the morning. The speaker will be H. O Daniels of Middletown, Ct., and his subject will be "Crop rotation for the dairy farmer." Mr. Daniels is a self-made man, and has achieved remarkable success. He speaks from a personal experience, and is said to handle the subject with unusual skill and interest.

Parnet Tyburski of Thorndike was before the district court Tuesday charged with an assault. He pleaded guilty and was fined $6, which he paid. The complainant admitted that he was not seriously damaged, but his clothing was very much worse for the encounter and he had been struck several blows.

Superintendent Hunnewell of the street railway will endeavor to accommodate Christmas shoppers next week by running half-hour cars on the Springfield line every afternoon, beginning at 12 45 and continuing to 5 45, inclusive. Double-headers will also be run in the morning whenever the travel demands.

The board of engineers are also considering a new nozzle, for which great things are claimed. It throws a large, fine spray, so arranged that men carrying the nozzle can go into a room filled with smoke and fire and be protected by the spray. It can also be used to extinguish a small fire without flooding, thus saving much loss by water damage.

The Palmer Ice Company has this week completed the construction of a dam on the Burleigh brook, below its present dam and pond, which will greatly increase its ice cutting capacity. The new pond will cover about three acres, and is expected to cut about three times as much ice as the present pond. The new pond is not yet filled, but the water is expected to be running over the dam in a few days.

Employes of the Telephone Company have been busy for some time "cutting over" the lines in the cables on the Main street poles to the cables underground, recently installed. The work has had to be done during the day, to the disadvantage at times of the service, but the task is now nearly completed and subscribers may reasonably expect that in the near future the interruptions which have been rather annoying of late will be eliminated.

The long drought was broken Monday. It snowed nearly all day, although the fall was not great; there was only about three inches, but it was wet and heavy. In the evening the weather moderated and the snow changed to rain, which fell nearly all night, accompanied at times by a high wind. The snow had about all disappeared by daylight. The reservoir of the Palmer Water Company has slightly more water in it than before the rain, although the supply is still low.

The annual meeting of Revere chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was held Wednesday evening in Masonic hall. A special meeting was held at 5 30, after which supper was served at 6 30. The business meeting was held at 7 30, when three candidates were initiated, and these officers were elected: Worthy Matron, Mrs. Susan J. Lee; worthy patron, Charles T. Brainerd; associate matron, Mrs. Lettie M. Paine; secretary, Mrs. Addie J. Ezekiel; treasurer, Mrs. Emma C. Keith; conductress, Mrs. Jennie L Taylor; associate conductress, Miss Nellie Morgan.

The steamer of the fire department was examined Tuesday by State Inspector Sanborn. It was found to be in fine condition Some slight changes in the boiler was recommended however. As now equipped, Inspector Sanborn would allow the use of only 100 pounds of steam, but if one of the steam guages is changed he would allow a pressure of 120 pounds. As this is the pressure necessary to get the best work out of the apparatus the changes are being made. The fixtures, work and all will cost only about $1 The steamer has always been worked up to 120 pounds, but new laws have made the changes necessary.

Superintendent Fred L Gunn of the fire alarm system has succeeded in repairing box 68, at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, and there will be no necessity for a new box, as was suggested recently. In this connection it was noted, at the time of the recent fire near the Ware River engine house, that there is no alarm box between the Point of Rocks on north Main street and box 68, at the corner of Main and Walnut. There is one at the corner of Knox and Foster streets, a short block from North Main, but comment is made that there is on the latter street a long stretch, occupied by a considerable number of valuable dwellings, unprotected by an alarm box.

At a meeting of Palmer Grange last Friday evening these officers were chosen: Worthy Master, Francis L Jones; overseer, C. W. Carpenter; lecturer, Miss Helen Stimson; steward, W. K. Davis; assistant steward, S G. Clark; chaplain, Rev. F. W. Gibbs; treasurer, John O. Hamilton; secretary, Miss Anna S. Wells; gate keeper, John Johnson; Ceres, Miss Frances Freeman; Pomona, Miss Ethel Jenks; Flora, Miss Hazel Thayer; lady assistant steward, Miss Viola Marsan; executive committee, three years, D L. Bodfish; one year, H. W. Stimson It was voted to postpone the next meeting of the Grange from the 24th to the 31st. An invitation was accepted to visit Brimfield Grange next Tuesday evening, returning by special car.

WARREN.

Death of Mrs. Helen M. Tucker.

Mrs. Helen M. Tucker, 75, died suddenly about noon Saturday of heart failure at the home of her son, Arthur S. Tucker on Bacon street. Mrs. Tucker had been in about her usual health of late, and was about the house and occasionally getting out. On Friday she drove to Monson with her son to attend the funeral of a friend. Saturday morning she was about the house, and when Mr. Tucker went home to dinner he went up to see her in her room, where she was sewing, and on going to her room, a second time a few minutes later he found her dead sitting in her chair with her sewing in her hands. She had been under a physician's care for some time, so that it was not altogether unexpected. She was born in Pittsfield, April 29, 1835, and lived about 60 years in Monson until the death of her husband, Joel M. Tucker, last April, since when she had lived much of the time with her son. She leaves three sons, Rev. Frederick D. Tucker of St. Louis, Mo. Ralph D. Tucker of Monson, and Arthur S Tucker of Warren, also a daughter, Miss Carrie Tucker of North Brookfield. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 11 30, and the body was taken to Monson on the 1 35 train in the afternoon for burial in No. cemetery. Rev. G. A. Andrews officiated at the grave.

Painfully Injured.

John J. Lycett was painfully injured Saturday morning while at his work at the Warren Steam Company's plant He was standing on the bed of a large planer which was in operation, and his left ankle caught between a casting and the frame of planes The machine was stopped and reversed and the foot extricated, but not until the left ankle had been painfully lacerated. Dr. John E. Dalton was called, but could not find any broken bones. He was removed to his home on East Main street, and it is expected that the wound will heal without any serious development.

Bert M. Covell is the guest of George H. Lincoln in Boston.

Miss Anna Flower of Philadelphia has been spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. George R Coster.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nobla have returned from Finland and Mr. Nobia has taken a position with the Perkins machine company.

George Coolidge had his left hand badly cut Tuesday morning while employed in J. D. Norton's grist mill. He had gone down in the basement to adjust the grain elevator and caught his hand so that his left thumb was half-severed at the fleshy part of the hand. Fortunately there was someone up-stairs to shut off the power, or he would have lost the entire thumb. He was attended by Dr Charles A. DeLand.

The annual meeting of Forest chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was held last Friday evening, when these officers were chosen: Worthy Matron, Miss Esther L. Gage; worthy patron, Charles D. Perkins; associate matron, Miss Emily L. Daley; secretary, Mrs. Abbie Maxim; treasurer, Mrs. Nellie F. Adams; conductress, Mrs Florence Johnson Phelps; associate conductress, Mrs. Flora B. Patrick. The officers will be installed in January.

At the annual meeting of Knowles council Royal Arcanum Monday evening these officers were chosen: Regent, Charles W. Ball; vice-regent, Joseph G. Hastings; orator, Milton Dickson; past regent, Oscar W Rice; secretary, William C. Gage; collector, Edgar J. Buck; treasurer, George Bliss; chaplain, Edward L Fosket; guide, Napoleon Avery; warden, Robert P. Bestick; sentry, David Dempsey; trustees, Charles H. Walker, Walter A. Putnam and John M. Drake; representative to grand council, William C. Gage; alternate, Edward L Fosket.

The local freight trains met with a series of mishaps Saturday. During the morning the engine on the east-bound freight broke down at West Warren and the train was delayed several hours before it could proceed. At about the same time the west bound local met with disaster at East Brookfield so that exchange of trains was not accomplished until about 8 o'clock and the west-bound train arrived in Warren so n before 9 o'clock in charge of Conductor Robertaille. In making a flying switch of six cars into the freight-yard the forward car split the switch, one truck following the engine and the other dropping to the ground and running 150 yards over the ties. A single track was utilized from West Warren to West Brookfield and the several train crews who arrived on the scene succeeded during the early hours of the morning in getting the car on the rails without the assistance of the wrecker. There was no damage to rolling stock.

The Killers.

It happens that once a man ran past Socrates armed with an ax. He was in pursuit of another who was running from him at full speed.

"Stop him! Stop him!" he cried.

Plato's master did not move.

"What!" cried the man with the ax; "conldst thou not have barred his way? He is an assassin!"

"An assassin? What meanest thou?"

"Play not the idiot! An assassin is a man who kills."

"A butcher, then?"

"Old fool! A man who kills another man!"

"To be sure. A soldier!"

"Dolt! A man who kills another man in times of peace."

"I see — the executioner."

"Thou ass! A man who kills another in his home"

"Exactly — a physician."

Upon which the man with the ax fled — and is running still — La Terre.

Father's Narrow Escape.

A mother whose little boy always suffers from car sickness, found it necessary to take him with her while shopping the other day, and as the distance was rather far to walk, she decided to risk taking him on the car. All huddled up in a corner he sat and his face kept growing paler and paler, while all the while his eyes seemed fastened with a hard, glassy stare on the car wall opposite him.

"I thiuk we'd better get off for a little while," said his mother, watching him.

Out in the air the little fellow felt better, and with his voice quivering from earnestness he said:

"Muvver, did you see that sign in the car? That one that said $500 fine if you spit on the floor? Now, what do you think it would have cost my poor papa if I had vomited?"—Lippincott's.

A Nice Choice of Words.

When the Hansons took Norah Lanihan as maid of all work they knew that she was ignorant of many other things than household work. Each member of the family took pleasure in lightening her darkness, and it was a great surprise to find that occasionally Norah knew enough to put her instructors in the wrong.

"Norah," said Mrs. Hanson one day, "you must go to-morrow afternoon and buy a pair of new shoes. I'm perfectly sure from the condition of those you have on that they must leak, and wet your feet every time you go out in this melting snow"

"Well'm, they don't leak," said pretty Norah, looking down at the offending shoes, "but they do let in, I'm thinking." —Youth's Companion.

A Stockton Transformation.

When Frank Stockton started out with his Rudder Grange experiences, he undertook to keep chickens. One hen brought out a brood late in the fall. Stockton named each of the chicks after some literary friend, among the rest Mary Mapes Dodge. Mrs. Dodge was visiting the farm some time later, and happening to think of her namesake, she said:

"By the way, Frank, how does little Mary Mapes Dodge get along?"

"The funny thing about little Mary Mapes Dodge," said he, "is that she turns out to be Thomas Bailey Aldrich." — San Francisco Argonaut.

Anticipated Cause For Sorrow.

Ina came in from the country on her 5th birthday to visit her cousin May. At night they were put to bed early. An hour passed, when heart-breaking sobs were heard from the children's bedroom.

"What is the matter, children?" asked May's mother, entering the dark room.

From under the bedclothes Ina sobbed out, "May won't give me any of her peannts"

"Bnt May has no peannts," replied her aunt.

"I knew that," sobbed Ina, "bnt she said if she did have peannts she wouldn't give me any."—Delineator.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Leon J. Stevens to Charles F. Walton, dated November 24, 1906, and recorded in Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 722, Page 120, and for breach of the conditions thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises first hereinafter described in Palmer, in said Hampden County, on Wednesday, the twelfth day of January, A. D. 1910, at one o'clock in the afternoon all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and described therein as follows:—

The following described real estate, land and buildings situated in Palmer in said Hampden County, bounded and described as follows:—

Beginning at the northeast corner of land conveyed at land of B. & A. R. R. Co.; thence southerly on land of Central Massachusetts Electric Company crossing the State highway to land of the Springfield & Eastern Street R. R. Co.; thence westerly on land of the Springfield & Eastern Street Railway Company about three hundred sixteen (316) feet to land of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company; thence northerly on land of said Electric Company and on land formerly of William R. Bennitt to the State highway; thence northerly on said highway to land of the B. & A. R. R. Company; thence easterly on said last named land to the place of beginning. Reserving from the same the highway leading from Palmer to Brimfield through same. Also conveying the right to construct and forever maintain a sewer and drain pipe across said land from State road north of the same to the Quaboag River, said sewer and drain to run through pipes where now laid under the proposed embankment and through other pipes to be laid from said road to said river. Subject to any right written or referred to in a deed recorded with Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 634, Page 116.

Also a certain tract of land in said Palmer bounded as follows:—

Bounded northerly by the highway leading from Palmer to Brimfield; southerly by land of the B. & A. R. R. Company; easterly by the same and running to a point at the westerly end between said highway and said railroad company's land. Containing about (5) acres of land more or less. Subject to any rights of flowage the Central Massachusetts Electric Company may have.

All the above property will be sold together, and subject to a mortgage to D. E. EBENIN', dah, Miss Mandy Jane!
See me comin' up de lane?
Speck you waitin' foh me.
Kin' o' late a-gittin' roun'—
Had to walk hyeah clean f'om town—
But we'll be in time, Ah'm boun',
Do' hit's pu'tty sto'my.

TAKE ma ahm 'n' le's push on
'Cross lots, 'ca'se de time's done gone.
'N' we ought to be dah!
Chris'mas ain't de time to crawl
To er ole time country ball.
Preachah may not lak it 't all,
But he'll sho' fine me dah.

LOOKEE you'ah! Dah's de light,
Up de road dah to de right!
Let de roads be smoove er rough,
Soon we'll j'ine de measah!
Snow, blow, drif'in' lak a bluff,
Cain't come col' er snow ernuff
Foh to stop ouh pleasah!

CO'SE Ah b'lebes in doin' right:

A Christmas Goose

By CHARLES BARON.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

CHRISTMAS is just as much Christmas at the Boon island lighthouse as it is anywhere else in the world.

And why not?

To be sure, the nearest land is ten miles away, and when the winter storms come the waves dash quite over the two acres of rocks out of which the sturdy lighthouse rises. There are no blazing rows of streets lined with toyshops there, no gathering of families, no Christmas trees loaded down with presents, nothing to be seen from the lighthouse but the changing water and unchanging rocks—water on three sides and on the fourth side a bluff barrier of rocks, with the world hiding behind it ten miles away.

"I DES I'S NOT DO-NUFFIN."

There are six children there, though, and a mother and father, and if they cannot make a Christmas then nobody can. Why, Baby Deb alone is material enough of which to make a Christmas, and a very rollicking, jolly sort of Christmas, too, but when to her you add Tom and Sue and Ann and Ike and Sam—well, the grim old lighthouse fairly overflows with Christmas every 25th of December.

If it is a lonely, old, one eyed lighthouse, has it not a chimney? And do not children there have stockings—good, long stockings? Indeed, they have. And does not Christmas eve see them all temptingly hung, so invitingly limp and empty, under the mantelshelf? And does not Christmas morning—very early, mind you—see six graduated, white robed ghosts performing mysterious ceremonies around six bulging stockings?

Ah, then, if you suppose that that cunning old gentleman Santa Claus does not know how to find a chimney, even when the cold waves are pelting it with frozen spray drops ten miles from land, you little know what a remarkable gift he has that way.

And the Christmas dinners they have there—the goose, the brown, crisp, juicy, melting roast goose! What would that dinner be without that goose? What, indeed!

But once—they turn pale at that lighthouse now when they think of it—they came very near having no goose for dinner on Christmas day!

It came about in this way. Papa—ah, if you could only hear Baby Deb tell about it. It would be worth the journey, but you cannot, of course, so never mind. Papa Stoughton, the lighthouse keeper, you know, had lost all his money in a savings bank that had failed early in that December.

A goose is really not a very expensive fowl, but if one has not the money of course one cannot buy even a cheap thing. Papa Stoughton could not afford a goose. He said so—said so before all the family.

Ike says that the silence that fell upon that family then was painful to hear. They looked at one another with eyes so wide that it's a mercy they could ever shut them again.

"No goose!" at last cried Tom, who was the oldest.

"No goose!" cried the others in chorus, all except Baby Deb, who was busy at the time gently admonishing Sculpin, her most troublesome child, for being so dirty. Baby Deb said "No doose!" after all the others were quiet.

That made them all laugh. No doubt they thought that, after all, so long as Baby Deb was there it would be Christmas anyhow, goose or no goose. So they were happy for a moment until the thought came that roast goose was good on Christmas even with Baby Deb, and then they looked dismayed again.

However, when Papa Stoughton explained how it was they saw it as plainly as he did, and so they made no more complaint. Only Tom fell a-thinking, and when the others saw what he was doing they did the same, the difference being that Tom was trying to think what he could do to get the goose anyhow and they were trying to think what he was thinking about so that they could think the same—all except Baby Deb, of course, who, being only four years old, gave herself very little concern about the thoughts of others. Her own thoughts took all her time.

Tom finally said "Ah!" under his breath and mysteriously vanished into another room after beckoning his brothers and sisters to follow him, which they did almost before they had fairly said "Ah!"

Baby Deb was there, too, somewhat awestruck at the mystery about her, but ready to lend the help of her wisdom if necessary.

"We must have a goose," said Tom.

"Oh!" gasped his audience, moved by mingled amazement and admiration.

Tom looked at them with great firmness and dignity.

"Ever since I was born," he went on, "we have had a roast goose for Christmas."

"OH, PLEASE, DOOD LORD, SEND US A DOOSE!"

Ever since he was born! It might have been a hundred years before, from Tom's tone and manner, and the audience was tremendously impressed.

"And," continued the orator, "we must have one now. We will have one now!"

They almost stopped breathing.

"I have a plan." They shuddered and drew nearer. "We all must combine!"

"Oh!" in chorus.

"Do you want goose, Sue?"

"Yes, indeed'"

"You, Sam?"

"Yes."

"Ike?"

"Do I? Well!"

"Ann?

"Yes, sir!"

"Me, too," said Baby Deb, with great earnestness, for it was clear to her that it was a question of eating, and she did not wish to be left out.

"Of course you, too, you deary dumpling," said Tom. "Now then," he continued when order was restored, "what shall we contribute? I'll give my new sailboat. That ought to bring 50 cents."

His new sailboat! Why, he had only just made it and had not even tried it yet. Oh, evidently this was a time of sacrifice! Who could hesitate now?

"I'll give my shells," said Sue heroically.

"My sea mosses," sighed Ann.

"You may take my shark's teeth," said Ike.

"And my whale's tooth," said Sam.

The sacrifice was general. The lighthouse would yield up its treasures.

"All right," said Tom. "Now let's tell father."

And father was told, and for some reason he pretended to look out of the window very suddenly, but he did not. He wiped his eyes, and Mamma Stoughton wiped her spectacles and winked very hard and said:

"Bless their hearts!"

For, you see, these parents were very simple hearted folk, and it seemed to them very affecting that the children should make such sacrifices to procure the goose for Christmas.

"And what does Baby Deb coutribute?" asked Papa Stoughton by way of a joke.

"I des I's not dot nuffin," was Baby Deb's reply when the matter was explained to her, "'cept 'oo tate Stulpin."

Oh, what a laugh there was then, for if ever there was a malmed and demoralized doll it was Stulpin. But Baby Deb was hugged and kissed as if she had contributed a lump of gold instead of a little bundle of rags.

Papa Stoughton and Tom were to go out to the mainland the first clear day to buy the goose; but, alas, a storm came on, and they were forced to wait for it to go down. It did not go down. It grew worse and worse. The wind shrieked and moaned and wrestled with the lonely tower, and the waves hurled themselves at it and washed over and over the island, and no boat could have lived at all in such weather.

If a goose be only a goose, no matter, but if it be a Christmas dinner—ah, then!

Yes, they had good reason to feel dismal at the lighthouse. It was no wonder if five noses were fifty times a day flattened despairingly against the lighthouse windows. Yes; six noses, for even Baby Deb was finally affected, and, though she did not know the least thing about the weather, she, too, would press her little nose against the glass in a most alarming way, as if she thought that pressure was the only effective thing.

It took some time for Baby Deb to realize the importance of having a goose for Christmas, but when she had grasped the idea she became an enthusiast on the subject. She explained the matter to her dolls and was particularly explicit with Stulpin, with whom, indeed, she held very elaborate and almost painful conversations.

One thing became very certain. There was very little prospect of clean weather within a week, and it lacked only three days of Christmas. The others gloomily gave up hope, but not so did Baby Deb. The truth was she had a plan, and you know when one has a plan one has hope too.

Mamma Stoughton had only recently been having a series of talks with Baby Deb on the important question of prayer, and it had occurred to Baby Deb that the goose was a good subject for prayer. It was a very clear case to her. The goose was necessary. Why not ask for it, then?

STEP BY STEP, PATTER, PATTER.

The great difficulty was to find a secret place for her devotions, for the family very well filled the lighthouse, and Baby Deb understood that prayers ought to be quietly and secretly made.

The place was found, however. Just in front of the lighthouse was a broad ledge of rocks, generally washed by the waves, but at low tide, even in this bad weather, out of water. The other children had been forbidden to go there because it was dangerous, but no one had thought of cautioning Baby Deb. So there she went and in her imperfect way begged hard for the goose.

Christmas eve came, and still there was no goose. Baby Deb was puzzled; the others were gloomy. Still Baby Deb would not give up. It would be low tide about 7 o'clock. She knew that, for she had asked. She would make her last trial. She had hope yet, but as the others knew nothing of her plans they had absolutely no hope. To them it was certain that there could be no Christmas goose at their house that year.

Seven o'clock came, and Baby Deb crept softly from the room and downstairs. She opened the great door just a little bit and slipped out into the darkness—really did slip, for it was very icy on the rocks, and she sat down very hard. However, she was very chubby and did not mind it. She crawled cautiously around to the big rock, the keen wind nipping her round cheeks and pelting her with the frozen drops of spray. She knelt down.

"Oh, please, dood Lord, send us a doose! We wants a doose awful. Won't you, please, dood Lord?"

Thud fell something right alongside of her.

"Oh, what's dat?" she exclaimed, putting her hand out. "Why, it's a doose!" she cried, with a scream of delight, as her hand came in contact with a soft, warm, feathery body.

She forgot to give a "thank you" for the goose, but she was thankful, though not so very much surprised. She really had expected it.

It was a heavy load for Baby Deb, but she was excited and did not notice it. She made her way into the lighthouse, and, step by step, patter, patter, she went upstairs and burst, all breathless, into the sitting room, crying exultantly "It's tummed, it's tummed!" as the great goose fell from her arms upon the floor.

Well, if you think they were not surprised you know very little about the Stoughton folks. What they said nobody knows. They all talked at once, but by and by Papa Stoughton had a chance to be heard.

"Where did you get it, Baby Deb?" he asked.

"Why, I p'ayed Dod for it," answered Deb in the most matter of fact way.

"DOD'S DOOSE IS DOOD."

"Paid Dod!" exclaimed Papa Stoughton.

"Paid Dod!" chorused the family.

"Es," responded Baby Deb convincingly. "Dod—ze dood Lord. I p'ayed to him. He sended it to me dess now."

More questions and more of Baby Deb's explanations revealed the whole story. Funny folks, those Stoughtons, but they spent the next ten minutes wiping their eyes and hugging and kissing and making up new pet names for Baby Deb.

Papa Stoughton did say to Mamma Stoughton that night as they were going to bed:

"A wild goose. It was blinded by the bright light and broke its neck by flying against the glass. And, after all, who shall say the good Lord did not send it?"

At all events, not a word of explanation was said to Baby Deb, and no one contradicted her when she said at dinner next day:

"Dod's doose is dood."

Christmas Long Ago

By FRANK H. SWEET.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

A GOOD old fashioned Chris'mas with the logs upon the hearth,
The table filled with feasters an' the room a-roar with mirth,
With the stockin's crammed to bustin' an' the medders piled with snow—
A good old fashioned Chris'mas like we had so long ago!

Now that's the thing I'd like to see ag'in afore I die,
But Chris'mas in the city here—it's different, oh, my!
With the crowded hustle-bustle of the slushy, noisy street
An' the scowl upon the faces of the strangers that you meet.

Oh, there's buyin', plenty of it, of a lot of gorgeous toys.
An' it takes a mint of money to please modern girls an' boys.
Why, I mind the time a jackknife an' a toffy lump for me
Made my little heart an' stockin' just chock full of Chris'mas glee.

An' there's feastin'. Think o' feedin' with these stuck up city folk!
Why, you have to speak in whispers, an' you dar'sn't crack a joke.
Then remember how the tables looked all crowded with your kin,
When you couldn't hear a whistle blow across the merry din.

You see, I'm so old fashioned-like I don't care much for style,
An' to eat your Chris'mas banquets here I wouldn't go a mile.
I'd rather have, like Solomon, a good yarb dinner set
With real old friends than turtle soup with all the nobs you'd get.

There's my next door neighbor, Gurley—fancy how his brows 'u'd lift
If I'd holler: "Merry Chris'mas! Caught, old fellow! Chris'mas gift!"
Lordy sake., I'd like to try it! Guess he'd nearly have a fit.
Hang this city stiffness, anyways! I can't get used to it.

Then your heart it keeps a-swellin' till it nearly busts your side,
An' by night your jaws are achin' with your smile four inches wide,
An' your enemy, the worst one, you'd just grab his hand an' say:
"Mebbe both of us was wrong, John. Come, let's shake. It's Chris'mas day."

Mighty little Chris'mas spirit seems to dwell 'tween city walls,
Where each snowflake brings a sootflake for a brother as it falls—
Mighty little Chris'mas spirit, an' I'm pinin', don't you know,
For a good old fashioned Chris'mas like we had so long ago.

"I thought you were going to break up housekeeping?"

"We did intend to, but the cook refused to leave."

"Colonel, who was the very bravest man you ever knew?" asked the beautiful girl.

"He was a cook in my regiment."

"A cook?"

"Yes. He always tasted the soup before he dished any of it up for the rest of us."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mr. Philander's Christmas Tree

By Clarissa Mackie

JACK.

"WHERE is the tree?" whispered Mrs. Philander anxiously as her husband shook the snow from his coat and carefully wiped his feet on the braud new doormat.

"Conldn't get one," returned Philander moodily.

"Couldn't get one! Why not, James Philander?"

"I forgot it, Bella, until just as I got off the train, and as that was the last train from town I couldn't very well walk back and look up a tree. By that time the shops would all be closed and"—

"Walk back! Such nonsense! Of course if you haven't thought enough of the children to buy them a tree"—

"My dear," interpolated Philander desperately, "don't say another word. I'll find a tree somewhere tonight if I have to rob the church of the Sunday school tree!"

He thrust his arms into his overcoat and grasped his hat, but Mrs. Philander put out a detaining hand.

"James," she said seriously, "you cannot find a tree in Rose Heights tonight. You know there is not a shop in the Heights, and where else would you look for a tree?"

"I shall walk into the woods and dig one," returned Philander, with dignity.

"Well, you could do that, James, but it is 11 o'clock now and there is no moon. You will lose your way."

"Nonsense!" returned Mr. Philander. "I hope I know my way around Rose Heights. I saw a very handsome pine tree in that strip of woods back on the Turkey hill road. I could walk there blindfolded and lay my hand upon that tree," he asserted rashly.

"Very well," returned Mrs. Philander reluctantly. "I hate to have you go, James, but the children will be so disappointed. The presents are all ready, and I have been up in the attic and got the base for the tree and all the ornaments—in fact, everything is ready except the tree."

"The tree will soon be here," said Mr. Philander grimly as he jerked on his arctics and turned up his coat collar. "Just bring me the spade from the woodshed, please," he added.

"A spade, James! I thought they chopped trees down. The ground is frozen."

"Of course, the ax by all means," replied Philander irritably. He was vexed with himself for having forgotten to order the tree, which was one of the necessary adjuncts to the Philander Christmas. He had never forgotten it before. He meant to order it that morning and have it sent to his suburban home later in the day, but an important business matter had driven the remembrance of the festival from his mind until his wife's greeting when he opened the door recalled it to his attention.

He sallied forth, bearing the ax, and waded through the newly fallen snow to the corner of the street, where he turned toward Turkey hill road. The snow was only six inches deep, and the walking was not so bad. Gray clouds hung low, and there was a thick flurry of flakes as Philander turned the corner. When he reached the strip of woods it was snowing heavily, and he could only guess at the location of the particular pine he had in mind.

He whistled cheerily as he walked along, for his spirits were rising. He felt a warm glow stealing over his tired frame as he anticipated the delight of the three small Philanders when they beheld the selfsame tree that they had so warmly admired a short while before set up in their own parlor, ablaze with candles and rich with gifts.

Mr. Philander stopped and thrashed himself vigorously with his arms. There was a faiut grayness in the air that was reflected from the fallen snow, and there was the tickling rush of flakes in his eyes. When he reached the very opening in the woods where they had admired the tree he turned aronnd and looked carefully up and down the road. Of course he could see nothing, nor was there the faintest tinkle of bells. It was a very lonely spot.

Mr. Philander knew that the strip of woods was private property, and he also knew that he could make it all right with Lake, the owner of the woods, on the following day, as Lake lived four miles away and it was impossible to ask his permission now.

Although Mr. Philander had stated that he could put his hand on the tree in the dark, he found it rather a difficult thing to do after all. He lost himself several times in the dense thickets, and all the tree trunks seemed unfamiliar to his touch. Then, all at once, he emerged from the underbrush, and spicy boughs of pine brushed his face.

"Hit it, by Jove!" he exclaimed. He dug the snow away from the trunk and with a few lusty blows laid the tree low and dragged it trailing through the snow. He lost his bearings once or twice, and finally, at a moment when he almost despaired of reaching home that night, he found himself standing before his own gate.

He carted the tree around to the back door, and with Mrs. Philander's help it was taken into the house and set up in the parlor.

Mr. Philander thawed himself out in front of the kitchen stove and quaffed fragrant coffee that his grateful wife had prepared.

"It is a beauty, James," she said gleefully; "the finest we ever had. How delighted the children will be. I am sorry, though, you are so tired, dear."

"Oh, I'm all right now, Bella," said Philander cheerfully. "I was worried after I found that I had forgotten the tree, but I closed ont that deal with Wells today, and I was busy every moment."

"How lovely that you got the contract, James!" cried his wife excitedly. "That is a fine Christmas present for you!"

"You bet your life it is," returned Philander jocosely. "Now let us get the tree ready for the kiddies. Everything handy?"

"There isn't a thing for you to do, dear, save to hang them on the tree," said his wife, leading the way to the lighted parlor, where the tree stood, its symmetrical brauches glistening in the light and exuding a fresh balsamic odor.

"By Jove, it is the handsomest tree we ever had!" exclaimed Mr. Philander, surveying the shapely conifer admiringly.

They were soon at work, and presently the beautiful tree blossomed forth in glistening festoons of gold and silver tinsel. A radiant star tipped the highest point, while daintily decorated gifts burdened the braneches and were heaped at the base.

It was with unusual satisfaction that the Philanders retired that night. They were loth to leave the resplendent tree, but utter weariness drove them to bed.

It was daylight when the first delighted shriek from a small Philander awoke his tired parents. Mr. Philander groaned dismally. He ached from head to foot, and he was sick from lack of sleep. Mrs. Philander was equally tired; but, with the self abnegation of mothers in general and mothers in particular on Christmas morning, she got up and went downstairs to enter into the joys of the happy children.

When Mr. Philander came downstairs to breakfast the children gathered about him eagerly.

"Father," asked Jack, the eldest, "is this the very tree we saw last Sunday when we walked along Turkey hill road? Is this the very tree?"

"Who told you that, Jack?" asked Mr. Philander sharply.

"Oh, mother did. I told her I had seen it somewhere before, and she said it was that very tree."

"I fought Santy Claws bringed it!" wailed Bessie, dragging her new doll remorselessly by its flaxen hair.

"An' I finked it eame that way, too!" protested Robin indignantly.

"It's a Santa Claus tree, babies, so don't feel bad about it. Run away and play," said Mr. Philander reassuringly. Theu he turned to Jack, "Yes, it's the very same tree, my boy," he said proudly.

"It doesn't look like it, father," said Jack bluntly.

"Doesn't, eh? What's the matter with it?"

"Oh, nothing. It's fine, but it isn't the tree we saw," insisted the boy obstinately.

"Never mind, never mind," returned Mr. Philander good naturedly.

He sought his wife, who was helping Norah with the breakfast. "Our tree was a great success, my dear," he said genially.

"It is beautiful," replied Mrs. Philander happily. "The children are so delighted."

"Well, I'm glad of that. I was telling Taylor yesterday morning going down on the train that Christmas was not Christmas without a tree, and he said that it wouldn't be Christmas at their house, then, for they were not going to have one."

"How strange!" uttered Mrs. Philander. "Why not, pray?"

"Oh, I don't know. He said something about hard times. He said the good, old fashioned Christmas suited them well enough; that they would hang their stockings before the fire and all that, you know."

"Dear, dear! I think the children prefer a tree just the same," said Mrs. Philander regretfully. "Poor little Tommy Taylor! We must iuvite hiu over to see the children's tree this afternoon."

"Yes, indeed, that will be an excellent plan. Suppose we invite a few people to spend the evening and enjoy the tree with us. We can put on some small remembrances and have a jolly time," said Philander, warming up to the subject as he proceeded.

"That will be delightful," agreed Mrs. Philander. "Let us ask the Taylors."

"Sure, we'll ask them!" chuckled Philander. "I'll show Taylor the way to keep Christmas."

That afternoon Mrs. Philander busied herself in preparing for the evening's entertainment. The Taylors had accepted gladly, and so had the other invited guests, and Mr. Philander, who was the soul of hospitality, walked about and rubbed his hands with pleasant anticipation.

He made sundry trips to the cellar for apples and cider and cracked great bowls of nuts. He carried in huge arm loads of wood for the fireplace and surveyed the roaring blaze with complacent satisfaction.

It was at that moment that Jack Philander burst noisily in. "Oh, father, what do you think"— he began breathlessly.

"Well, my boy, what is it now?" asked Mr. Philander indulgently as he warmed his coattails comfortably.

"I heard Mr. Taylor telling some men that somebody chopped down the tree from his front lawn last night!"

"What tree?" asked Mr. Philander absently.

"Why, that tree—you know, the Norway pine that stood on their front lawn!"

"What a pity!" exclaimed Mrs. Philander. "Mrs. Taylor told me it was the pride of her husband's heart."

"How did it happen, Jack?" asked Philander, with interest.

"Mr. Taylor said his wife heard some one chopping about half past 11 last night, but she didn't think anything of it, and this morning they found the tree was gone—only the stump left."

"That's very strange," observed Mr. Philander. "Hard luck for Taylor."

"And, father," continued Jack earnestly, "I was in the woods on Turkey hill road today and that little tree we saw last Sunday is there yet. You didn't cut it down. I knew that one wasn't it!"

Mr. Philander paled slightly.

"Why, father," pursued the terrible Jack with a directness born of sudden revelation, "this is Mr. Taylor's tree! I knew I'd seen it before!"

Mr. Philander shrank from their horrified gaze.

"The Taylors will be here in a few minutes, James," said Mrs. Philander coldly.

"My dear, I must have got turned around in the storm, but the Lord only knows how I got in Taylor's yard."

"It's on the other side of the woods, father," said Jack sympathetically, "and I guess you walked right through and into Mr. Taylor's yard."

"I must have done that," groaned Mr. Philander. Then with sudden inspiration he stripped the tree of its ornaments and eandles and carried it through the house into the back yard. He scratched a match, and in five minutes the Philander Christmas tree was a charred ruin.

"Too bad, old chap," said Taylor commiseratively as Philander agitatedly explained the absence of the tree. "That's one reason why I don't believe in Christmas trees. They are apt to take fire, and there you are. I am glad it happened before we arrived!"

"So am I," ejaculated Mr. Philander. But all the little Philanders agree that it was the most beautiful Christmas tree they ever had.

Cure For Disconsolate Lovers.

Somebody has dug out of an old book of the time of Queen Elizabeth the following advice to a slighted and despondent lover:

Tye one end of a rope righte over a beame
And make a slippe noose at the other extreame.
Just under the beame lett a bucket be sett;
On it lett the lovier most manfullie gett.
Right over his heade be left the snicket be gott
And under his eare well fastened the knott.
The buckett kicked cleare, lett him take a full swinge
And leave alle the reste of the worke to the stringe!

The Deacon's Christmas Eve

BY GERALD PRIME

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

This very night they're coming home.
Their faces will appear
Once more around the Yuletide feast,
Our sons and daughters dear.
Then there'll be all the babies, too,
To jolt upon my knee
And make our big, old fashioned house
A scene of revelry.

The hemlock wreaths hang on the wall.
That spray of mistletoe
Recalls, old dear, our sparking days,
Some fifty years ago,
When first I kissed you underneath
The bough of fateful pearls.
I seem to see you once again,
The sweetest of all girls.

The pantry shelves are loaded down
With every kind of cake
And pies of mince and pumpkin such
As only you can make.
Beyond the close shut parlor door
An angel bright and fair
Is looking down upon a tree
That stands all ready there.

Put up your knitting, mother, dear.
The tinkle of the bells
Across the snow clad upper road
In welcome warning swells,
For here are Dick and Jack and Jess
And Molly, Tom and Sue
And all the merry, dimpled, cute,
Mischievous youngsters too!

CHRISTMAS DAY IN THE ARMY.

CHRISTMAS in the various forts garrisoned by United States troops never passes without a cut and dried celebration. Preparation for the event is made long in advance. Every soldier knows that something extra is going to be his portion for that day. The Christmas dinner, with savory extras in the way of food, is not the only special provision for the soldier's celebration. There is a relaxation of the rigor of military discipline, which to many enlisted men is even more welcome than the turkey and cranberries. On Christmas day the man in the barracks may do pretty much as he pleases.

But "pigs is pigs," and soldiering is soldiering, so it follows that a few of the men are shut out of the general hilarity of the holiday because they must perform a soldier's duty as on other days. The guard mount is for Christmas as well as for all other days, and military regulations cannot forego this requirement, no matter how much the victims may growl under their blouses. Even the extra dinner in the barracks, while it is a rare treat to most of the men, makes work for some of them which is regarded in the army as about the most calamitous detail in the business.

Guard duty and kitchen work are things studiously to be avoided by the enlisted men. It is not pleasant for a soldier to be kept on guard, walking a beat or pacing up and down in front of headquarters when the rest of the fellows are inside the barracks singing songs, telling stories, eating turkey or out on the parade ground playing baseball or doing skylarking stunts. Accordingly the experienced soldier makes it a point to escape Christmas guard duty if possible. There are several ways of doing this. The first sergeant of the company sometimes, it is hinted, helps the veterans out by a passive co-operation, which throws the burden of the day upon young recruits who are passing their first Christmas in the service. He permits the old timers to swap dates for guard duty with the recruits so that the latter will find themselves detailed.

Santa Claus also comes to the soldier. This is true literally and figuratively. He comes through the mails or the express companies in the shape of boxes or packages from the home folks. On his $13 a month the soldier does not have much of a surplus to spend in buying presents to send home, but this fact does not militate against his receiving mementos from the old hearthstone. It is always an event in camp or barracks when some man receives a hefty package "jes' 'fore Christmas." As a rule, the contents are shared with the soldier's cronies if they happen to be of the edible variety and any of the cronies fail to receive similar remembrances.

Not What He Expected.

A doctor in a Yorkshire village lately gave up his house and was succeeded in it by a veterinary surgeon. Before he had been many weeks in his new home the "vet" was awakened in the early hours of a rather bleak spriug morning. Opeuing the window, he heard a voice call out of the darkness:

"Can you come with me at once, mister? She's very bad."

The surgeon dressed and found a trap waiting to take him to a farm two or three miles away from the village. On the way he asked a few questions about the case he was to attend.

"I'm afraid there's very little hope for her," said the farmer. "She's been ailiug now, you see, for ten years, and she's getting pretty old as well."

Annoyed at being called out at such an hour to see an obviously not very valuable animal, the veterinary surgeon exclaimed, "Why on earth don't you shoot her?"

"What!" exclaimed the farmer. "Shoot my mother!"

Then the "vet" understood that it was the previous tenant who was wanted. —London Tit-Bits.

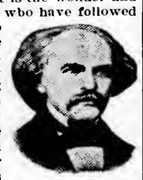
Work Day on a Mississippi Plantation.

The day begins on a plantation when it is yet night. The big bell rings between 4 and 5 o'clock for the "hands" to go to the fields. Mammy starts her small sable assistants around at the "big house" with early coffee about 6 Without this tiny cup of cafe noir your true creole gets up on the wrong side of the bed He has no appetite for breakfast after a ride through the fields and still less for his generous noonday dinner. Supper is served at night, and the dishes are typically southern—the corn and batter breads, fried chickens and waffles and fig preserves, with "sillabub," that moonbeam mixture that makes modern ices and confections heavy by comparison, for dessert Life on a plantation is not dull. There are visits to town and a constant stream of visitors from town. There are "sugar house" parties and hog killings, Christmas doings and Thanksgiving dinners, to say nothing of house parties and hunts.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

CHRISTMAS IN FICTION.

By GEORGE H. PICARD

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]



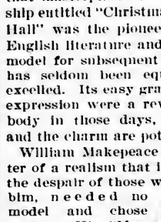
IRVING.

NOT until the first half of the last century was well spent did the species of literature which has come to be known as Christmas fiction effect a permanent lodgment in the hearts of English speaking mankind. The ancient parable plays and the rhymed holiday legends of the middle ages are still in use on the continent, but the more secular minded English had only the rude Yuletide jingles and the quaint carols of beef eating antiquity.

Contrary to the prevailing notion, the inventor of the tale with a distinctively Christmas flavor was an American. It is likely that it would occur to few Americans and to no Englishman to dissent if it were asserted in their presence that Charles Dickens originated the Christmas story. His name is so inseparably connected with so much of the holiday literature enshrined in the popular heart that it is small wonder the mention of Christmas suggests him. The credit of the "literary find," however, must be given to another, a man who was at the end of his thirties when Dickens was born, who had been at Malta when Nelson's fleet sailed away to Trafalgar, who had visited Sir Walter at Abbotsford and had captivated him and who was afterward secretary to the United States legation in England. That, of course, means Washington Irving.

Irving's first book, "The Sketch-Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent.," had pleased everybody, so much so, indeed, that it was republished by John Murray in London and translated into several continental languages. Both the publishers and the public were urging him to do something equally meritorious. Nobody realized more keenly than did the author of the exquisite work the difficulty of producing its mate, and he was not a man to be driven into mediocrity. Three years later he published "Bracebridge Hall," and the chapter of that masterpiece of literary workmanship entitled "Christmas at Bracebridge Hall" was the pioneer holiday tale of English literature and has furnished a model for subsequent fictionists which has seldom been equaled and never excelled. Its easy grace and felicity of expression were a revelation to everybody in those days, and the wonder and the charm are potent still.

William Makepeace Thackeray, master of a realism that is the wonder and the despair of those who have followed him, needed no model and chose none. His "Mrs. Perkins' Ball" resembles nothing ever conceived in the miud of any other man. The public was pleased with it, but never so much as was Thackeray himself.

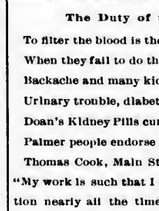


HAWTHORNE.

Most amazing of all, the author of the tale professed to believe that it was "Mrs. Perkins' Ball" that had made his reputation—that, too, in the face of the fact that "Vanity Fair" had just been published. This perversion of Thackeray in regard to the literary value of his wares and his lack of faith in his masterpiece—he had so little confidence in the success of "Vanity Fair" that after it appeared he applied for a small government position—are proof sufficient that the man who creates a masterpiece may have a dim conception of artistic values.

All the makers of great fiction are more or less under the spell of their immediate surroundings, but few have made it more apparent than Charles Dickens. Those who knew the circumstances saw plainly that he had put himself and his sad childhood into many of his pathetic short stories. This is especially true of "The Ghost In Master B.'s Room," which is an account of things which happened to him in his troubled boyhood. As a child he was a firm believer in ghosts, and it is probable that he never entirely abandoned his faith in spectral appearances. Many of his tales are peopled with disembodied spirits, and they are like the ghosts of no other writer. They are the spooks that appeal to one and make one believe in their genuineness. They are frequently more real than the living characters who consort with them. Although they are dead, they conduct themselves like living entities.

Dickens' Christmas ghosts are unique in the realm of literature. Of all the silent shapes that have been summoned from the upper and nether worlds to lend enchantment to the Christmas tale his alone have become acclimated. There is never anything repulsive about them. They are the most companionable spooks ever invented. They are seldom sepulchral, but are frequently cheerful. They are not the haunting, sleep killing and never to be exorcised phantoms of the fairy tales, but actual personalities, freed from all mortal restrictions in regard to locomotion that come to us when we bid them and vanish politely when we are weary of their presence.



THACKERAY.

Bret Harte never made a secret of his admiration for the creator of Little Nell and Tom Pinch. Like Paul at the feet of Gamaliel, he was content to receive his lesson from the man he acknowledged to be his master. Not until after Dickens had finished his work did the young literary light who stood revealed in the far western firmament learn that his model had seen that exquisite elegy "Dickens In Camp" and had been heard to express his admiration of it in the most generous terms. The dying novelist declared that the work of the new American writer contained such subtle strokes of workmanship as no other writer in the language had yet exhibited. And then he asked, with a humorous gleam in his weary eyes, "Don't you think that his manner is very like my own?"

Like Dickens, Harte had a genuine fondness for the doings of Yuletide. One who knew him best says that up to the last day of his life "he thought much of the Christmas season and to the last kept up the fond and foolish custom of sending generous presents to his friends." Better appreciated in England than in his native country, Harte spent the later years of his life abroad, but his stories were to the last distinctively American. In that admirable performance entitled "How Santa Claus Came to Simpson's Bar" there is no flavor of the old world Christmas, and Johnny, clothed in the stars and stripes, is a young American of the most unmistakable sort.

Two of the most strikingly dissimilar Christmas stories ever written are Hawthorne's "Christmas Banquet" and Miss Mitford's "Christmas Party." There is little of Christmas in Hawthorne's grewsome tale. The joyous festival is only a bitterly makeshift around which is woven a weird psychological study that drives all remembrance of the blessed season from the mind. Its ghosts are not the sociable and easily banished spooks of Dickens. They are formless and creepy and all pervading. They are the fearsome specters that rise in the frigid vapors of German mysticism, and they are made icier still with a strong admixture of New England transcendentalism. It is a masterpiece in conception and in treatment—no question at all about that—but it does not make the Yule log glow more brightly or lend a better flavor to the steaming bowl.

DICKENS.

Mary Russell Mitford does not deal in ghosts. All of her Christmas characters are flesh and blood people, and they are not of the sort that "will not stay dead when they die." Her "Christmas Party" is as dainty in its workmanship as anything which ever came from her careful pen, and that is saying much. It is as restful and nonsuggestive as a pastoral, and its influence is as soothing as the delicate savor which escapes when the cover of a potpourri jar is lifted or the drawer of an old time cabinet is opened—the faint, pervasive odor of crushed rose leaves and dried lavender.

"What is your opinion of prosperity?"

"Well," answered the improvident man, "my opinion of prosperity is that it is something for which I am expected to give three cheers because some other fellow has it."—Washington Star.

"Mr. Huggard caught me in the dark hall last evening and kissed me," said Miss Passay, with affected indignation.

"Oh!" remarked Miss Pepprey, "I wouldn't blame him if I were you"—

"You wouldn't blame him?"

"I say if I were you." —Catholic Staudard.

DOING THEIR DUTY

Scores of Palmer Readers Are Learning The Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow;

Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Palmer people endorse our claim.

Thomas Cook, Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "My work is such that I have to sit in one position nearly all the time and in this way my kidneys became weakened. I suffered constantly and at times there were such severe pains across my kidneys that I was scarcely able to sit still. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box from Lynde & Gould's Drug Store and a few doses gave me such great relief that I continued their use. After I had taken the contents of one box, I was without a symptom of kidney trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I am pleased to give them the credit they deserve."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Women Who Hate Men.

From time to time strange instances crop up of women who not merely remain unmarried of their own free will, but carry their antipathy to the opposite sex to most peculiar lengths.

Thus one of these is utterly resolved to have nothing whatever to do with men on any pretext. All her food is bought of women, and consequently meat never appears on her table, since there is no female butcher in her neighborhood.

Not long since a handsome legacy was refused simply because it came from a man, while instances are known of women who make it their boast that they have neither spoken to nor allowed one of the opposite sex to cross their thresholds for a quarter of a century and upward.

But probably the bitterest man hater of modern days was an Austrian lady who at the time of her death was engaged in perfecting an elaborate plan for the ultimate extinction of the male sex.—London Globe.

Rubbing It In.

"Yes, I was fined $500 for putting coloring matter in artificial butter."

"Well, didn't you deserve it?"

"Perhaps. But what made me mad was that the judge who imposed the fine had dyed whiskers."—Cleveland Leader.

Every Floor of the Big Store is Filled With the Finest Stocks of Holiday Goods we ever Gathered

Christmas week is almost here and now the great problem is how to make satisfactory selections of Christmas Presents, and do it in the shortest time, and at the least expenditure. The best solution of this problem is to come to the Great Forbes & Wallace Establishment where almost everything that can be required for man, woman and child is provided—where quality is always the first consideration—and where prices are always the lowest. The tremendous stocks we carry at all times, greatly enlarged to meet the demands of Holiday trading, enable us to maintain the most extensive assortments throughout the Holiday season.

Complete Readiness is Manifest in Every One of Our Forty-seven Departments.

For your convenience we enumerate some of the kinds of merchandise grouped in these various departments, each one of which is under the direction of a buyer who is a specialist in his line. It will make trading easy to cut this list, check the lines in which you are particularly interested, and come here where almost every kind of merchandise is brought together in one great establishment and arranged for the greatest convenience in making selections. This will save time and money, and make it unnecessary to go from store to store to make purchases.

BOSTON LETTER.

built and run by the Shubert Company, which already has two theaters in Boston, will be erected shortly on Tremont street opposite Hollis, and therefore close by the Hollis street theater, and that, opposite the new opera house will be one of the most spleniferous hotels the world ever saw for the special convenience of operagoers. Electric bells in the theater are to announce the rising of the curtain, before and between acts, which seems to indicate that those who go out between acts will go across the street. It is proposed to have a subway for their convenience. So luxury increases. Does civic goodness go with it?

Edwin Ginn opens to-night at a reception the new headquarters of his International school of peace. This is the basement of No. 29 Beacon street, west of the state house, in what was formerly the Gardner Brewer brownstone mansion, probably the finest private residence of Boston in its prime. Brewer was importing merchant and the riches of all continents were at his command, and he commanded them Now Mr. Ginn, who proposes to spend $50,000 a year for promoting world peace, makes this place the headquarters where peace people will meet and where an arsenal of facts and arguments to support the cause is to be stored. Newspapers are to be kept on file and their news and editorials are to be marked so that the asty reader can see at a glance what is of special interest to the peace cause. The strength of the movement is increasing and the movement gets support in all parts of the civilized world. In the few years of this century it has already made unexpected progress and the world court, which will settle the disputes of nations as United States courts settle the differences of states, will remove any reasonable ground for appeal to war as the basis of settling national differences.

The evangelists Chapman and Alexander had a great reception during the two days they were here,—Monday and Tuesday. But the time was so short that their appearance was a mere coming and going and could not have the effect it had last year with weeks of stay.

Labor men, says E. Gerry Brown, are preparing to introduce to the Legislature substantially the same list of measures as they asked for last year, but were defeated upon. This will include the eight hour petition and other much disputed measures.

LANDON

They Injure Children.

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health-destroying and a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy for constipation and associate disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies contain an entirely new ingredient which is odorless, tasteless and colorless. As an active agent, it embraces the valuable qualities of the best known intestinal regulator tonics.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy They are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhœa, nausea, griping, excessive looseness or other undesirable effects. They have a very natural action upon the glands and organs with which they come in contact, act as a positive and regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel and its dry mucous lining; remove irritation, overcome weakness, tone and strengthen the nerves and muscles, and restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity, Rexall Orderlies completely relieve constipation, except when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

There is really no medicine for this purpose so good as Rexall Orderlies, especially for children, aged and delicate persons. They are prepared in tablet form, in two sizes of packages: 12 tablets 10 cents, and 36 tablets 25 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Palmer only at our store,—The Rexall Store. A CHRISTMAS AT CAPE HORN.

ONCE I had a shipmate who celebrated the most grateful Christmas of his life at the Horn.

It was on the Mary Ann, in December, 1897. She was a deep cut steel clipper, but she was a four masted bark, and four masted barks are all ugly in heavy seas. The best sea boat afloat will plunge at Cape Horn, but four masted barks are all the time under water. Sometimes they are swamped altogether and float waterlogged around the Horn. Then the current pushes them south to perish in the ice jam.

Some sailors can be likened to the four masted barks. They are the sailors who have been too long away from home. All sailors plunge liberally into shore life, but the "too long away from home" fellows are, as a rule, swamped in shore life's breakers.

One of my mates on the Mary Ann was Bob Jones, a typical "too long away from home" unfortunate. But Bob still had somebody dear to his heart. He had started on more than one trip around the world with the set determination that the end of the voyage should see him rejoin his own loved ones at home.

But on pay day at the end of his trips his good resolutions had been broken. It had often gone so, and Bob was hiding self despair under the grim surface of a man hating man.

Bob and I, with twelve other Yankees, Dutchmen and Swedes, were on the starboard watch under Chief Mate Dickson of the Mary Ann. When we went below on Christmas eve the sea was running high. Sleet and hail came down in the squalls. The western gale had trimmed our sails down to the lower topsails.

We had hardly fallen asleep when we heard the man at the wheel strike one bell. Before the signal for "All hands on deck" was answered forward Bob and I were out of our bunks and had our sea boots on.

"What's up now?" growled Bob, and he got his answer from Jimmy, the deck boy, who came rushing in without preliminary warning.

"Rise, rise, rise, sleepers! Weather ship for icebergs on the leeward bow. Rise, rise, rise!"

The watch on deck was already setting the fore staysail to head the vessel off the wind. She was running easy when we came on deck, and the storm spanker was hauled out to bring the vessel to the wind on the other tack. Bob was sent forward to furl the fore staysail. The rest of us went to the braces and pulled the yards in to starboard.

BOB AND THE ROPE DROPPED.

Then came the ugliest part of the job. Slowly the Mary Ann turned to face her foe again. But before she could head her bow against the mighty seas they broke over her from stem to stern.

Bob came aft from the staysail to join us just as we all jumped out of the way, for a big breaker came thundering over the weather rail.

The breaker caught Bob at the fore backstays. He jumped up and put his arm through the coils of the fore sheet, hanging in straps in the royal backstay.

The straps were rotten, and Bob and the coil sheet rope dropped and disappeared in the boiling deck waters.

The waters surged to leeward and carried a dark object with them.

The skipper threw a life buoy from the poop.

"Poor Bob!" said everybody to himself. It was all we could do for him. Bob was gone, and there seemed to be no help for it.

We had the Mary Ann snug at last. Our watch had still an hour more below, not long enough to make it worth while to crawl into our bunks, and we lighted our pipes, lay down on our chests and discussed poor Bob.

Bill, who was Bob's own chum, went to Bob's bunk and overhauled the things.

"It is enough to make anybody ripping mad to think of a rotten old strap chucking a poor fellow overboard," mused Bill. "Christmas night too. Say, boys, when we auction this stuff off we've got to show Bob up handsome to his friends."

It must be explained that when sailors die at sea their belongings are sold at auction to the crew. This custom serves a double purpose. It is easier to ship money halfway around the globe than to insure the safe delivery of an old wooden chest. A good sum of money is also more welcome to most heirs than a chestful of tarred rags. Besides, the sea auctions give the shipmates of the dead an opportunity to "raise his reputation" by adding generously to his account.

Everybody wanted to fill the Christmas stockings of poor Bob's folks. The chief mate, Dickson, good naturedly consented that the auction should be held then and there and came to the forecastle with pencil and paper to record the sales as fast as they were made.

"Here you are, boys—here you are! Get your money ready. The greatest Cape Horn sale ever held will now start," rasped the old chief. "First article is a valuable straw pillow. Remember what Bill Shakespeare says, 'Uneasy rests the head that hasn't got a pillow.' What am I bid? Two dollars? Thank you! Three—four—five—six—six I have. Cape Horn prices, gentlemen. Six—ten—ten—are you all done? Tom, you can have it for $10. You may get a better one in San Francisco for 50 cents, but you can't duplicate it for $50 within a thousand miles of this place.

"Next article is a handsome stand up linen collar. It has only been worn by poor Bob in Liverpool and can be washed absolutely clean for the small price of 5 cents. It is the only article of its kind that has ever been for sale at Cape Horn. What am I bid—a dollar—two, two-fifty, three-fifty, four—four—are you all done? Sold to Dick for $4. Dick is a sport now. Wait a minute; there is a button in the back of the collar. You will have to buy the button separately, Dick."

And so each worn and patched garment of poor Bob was sold at "Cape Horn prices." Bob's shipmates took care that none of them contributed less than a month's wages to Bob's final pay day.

A VALUABLE STRAW PILLOW.

The mate at last put his hand to the bottom of Bob's chest, and from a corner he brought up a bundle of papers wrapped in an old piece of canvas tied together with yellow silken cigar bands. The mate held the bundle thoughtfully in his hand. He hesitated to trespass.

"Open it up!" shouted the men in chorus.

"Hem! Well, we will see what is in it anyway," assented the mate.

When the canvas cover was opened a score of letters in soiled and torn envelopes dropped out.

"I see no harm in letting you fellows get a little home sentiment out of these old letters," said the mate, "but you must not keep them. They must be forwarded to Bob's friends. You boys can bid for the privilege of reading the letters."

Dick for $9 bought the right to first pick. He took the best preserved envelope and its inclosure and went away to read the letter.

The sale continued, letter after letter fetching a neat sum. Half the letters were sold when Dick came from his corner and interrupted the sale. He looked troubled and shook his letter in our faces.

"Boys, this letter is from the girl," said he. "She's a dandy. Bob was no good. He didn't go home when he was paid off in Liverpool; he didn't go home from New York; he didn't go home from San Francisco when he could have made the trip in a day. The girl is waiting yet."

The mate, who had been intently reading one of the letters, here interrupted.

"Bob's mother is getting old, and she is poor. She does not ask for money, however. All she wants is her boy. He will never return to her now. Poor Bob's mother! Poor Bob!"

At four bells the lookout gave us his "All's well!" Side lights burning bright." Suddenly he began to beat the forward bell like mad.

The lookout was shouting and waving his arms from the forecastle head, where he stood clinging to the rail. When we reached the fore part of the house the lookout attracted our attention to a dark object leaning limply against the starboard lighthouse.

It was Bob Jones.

We carried him into the forecastle. The mate and the whisky bottle were brought forward, and Bob slowly came to his senses.

"I was slumbering something fearful, boys," drawled Bob. "That breaker caught me right, and the blamed strap broke. Then over she rolled to leeward."

"And I saw you go over the side," interrupted Dick.

"No! I may have been the sheet coil," continued Bob. "I was washed away up under the forecastle head. I guess I went clean off in a faint after I had crawled to a dry place. When I woke up I made for the forecastle, but I couldn't make it. I dropped right off again at the lighthouse."

IT WAS BOB JONES.

When Bob had been bandaged up and given a warm breakfast he was the old Bob once more. The boys poked lots of fun at him when they returned his things to him.

"Hold on, boys; let us make a bargain with Bob," the imperative Dick broke in. "Here is my Bible. If Bob will swear to go home to his mother and the girl from San Francisco he can take the auction money along as a Christmas present."

"That's right! Come on, Bob. Swear, man, swear!"

"I do, so help me, God, and a merry Christmas to you all, boys!" sobbed Bob. "I will go home, boys. I will!"

And he did.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Sightseeing.

It was an American tourist at the door of Warwick castle who was bent on seeing the place and pending the arrival of a guide was busily studying his guidebook. When the doorkeeper made his appearance the American asked in a quick, businesslike tone:

"Have you that famous vase still?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"And the table that cost so much money?"

"Yes, sir."

"And have you still that likeness of Charles I. by Van Dyck?"

"Oh, yes, sir," said the doorkeeper. "They are all here. Won't you come in and see them?"

"No, thanks," replied the American. "I will take them all as per catalogue. I have got to see Coventry today, and I want to visit Stratford-on-Avon and sleep in Leamington tonight, and I guess I'll have to be in Sheffield tomorrow morning on business. Good morning." Exchange.

Cutting.

Lord Chatham said of the members of Lord North's cabinet, "They have brought themselves where ordinary inability never arrives and nothing but first rate genluses in incapacity can reach."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Brimfield Man Killed by Falling Tree Wednesday.

NECK BROKEN AND SKULL CRUSHED.

Leaves a Wife and Ten Children. Wind Swung Large Tree Around Upon Him.

Calvin Wheaton of Brimfield was killed by a falling tree Wednesday afternoon. Mr Wheaton and three others were working together on the woodlot formerly owned by Orrin Moore and now being cut off by the Cook Lumber Co. of Greenfield.

Mr. Wheaton and George Baker were working on a tree that had been felled and Aleck Fletcher and Alpheus Gregory were chopping down a large chestnut near by. As the latter tree was about to fall Fletcher shouted to Wheaton to get out of the way, as he saw that the wind was likely to swerve the tree around in that direction, although Wheaton was at an angle from the direction in which the tree was leaning. Mr. Wheaton was chopping off branches from the fallen tree, and disregarding the warning, was struck by a large limb of the falling chestnut whose trunk lodged on a stump. He breathed but a few times and his neck was found to be broken and his skull fractured Baker sprang aside at the warning and though struck on the leg was not dangerously injured.

Mr. Wheaton was a farmer and day laborer and owned the Walter Haynes farm on Haynes hill. He was a very industrious man and his services gave excellent satisfaction to those who employed him. He leaves a wife and ten children, all of whom, except the oldest son, who is about 20 years old, live at home. He was born in New Brunswick and was 57 years of age.

GAME LAWS VIOLATED.

Enfield Men Fined For Using Sweep Seine With Illegal Mesh.

In the Ware district court Tuesday there was an extended hearing upon cases for violation of the fish and game laws. The defendants were Charles Randall, Ernest Crosby and Charles Burton, all of Enfield, and the complainant was Dennis F. Shea of Ware, deputy fish and game commissioner. At the morning session Randall and Crosby pleaded guilty to using a sweep seine with mesh of illegal size in a tributary of the Connecticut river on Sunday the 5th. They were fined the prescribed penalty of $25 each, and Crosby paid. Randall took an appeal, but in the afternoon withdrew the appeal and paid $10. He was given until the first of April to pay the balance of his fine.

In the afternoon the three defendants were placed on trial for hunting rabbits on the Lord's day, the date being the same Sunday as that when the netting was done. They were defended by John H. Schoonmaker, and all were discharged as not guilty. The evidence showed that Randall and Burton were out in the same fields near their homes with dogs that belonged to both, and that they went to a place where Randall had liberated rabbits four years ago, to see, according to him, whether there were any there at present. The defendants denied that they were hunting or had guns with them The chief witness for the Commonwealth failed to put in an appearance at the trial and there was no testimony to contradict the statement made by the defendants.

One witness for the Commonwealth told of hearing three shots fired on that day about the time when the men were away from their homes, but could not locate the spot where the firing was done within a mile as to distance from him, and the direction did not tally exactly with the location of the men.

WOMAN SUICIDES.

Takes Her Life in Hospital After Futile Attempt on Railroad.

Mrs. Mary Brazee, 53, committed suicide in the Mercy hospital in Springfield early Sunday morning while in a demented condition.

Mrs. Brazee was removed to the hospital the Thursday morning previous, as she had been found the day before on the Boston and Albany tracks, west of North Wilbraham station, wandering about in a demented condition. She narrowly escaped being killed by an express train which was due from the east a few minutes after she was seen. She was conducted to her home by James Long, and it was thought best to remove her to the hospital. She was alone but a few minutes Sunday morning, but in that time succeeded in strangling herself with a hair ribbon which she tied about her neck and life was practically extinct when she was found. It was stated that the hospital authorities were not informed that Mrs. Brazee was deranged, although they were told she was nervous and had difficulty in sleeping.

A cousin of Mrs. Brazee, Miss Annie Keenan, who has lived with her for many years, has been seriously sick for a long time and had been cared for by Mrs. Brazee, and it is believed that the worry and loss of sleep over Miss Keenan's condition overbalanced her mind. She leaves besides this cousin, a brother, John Conley. The funeral was held Wednesday, with burial in Mill River

TROUBLE IN WARREN.

Man Smashes Plate Glass, Is Arrested, But Escapes From Lockup.

A party who is alleged to be Edward Smith, formerly of Wales, created considerable disturbance in Warren last week Thursday night. After being refused accommodations at Hotel Ramsdell in Warren, he returned about midnight and with a stone broke the plate glass in the front door and went away. He was found in the passenger depot at 6 15 a. m. when Station Agent Homer Tupper arrived to look after the early train. Smith had broken out one of the large lights of glass in the women's room and made himself comfortable for the night. He was unable to give a good account of himself to Mr. Tupper, who locked him up and started for Constable James Daley. On their return they found Mr. Smith had made his escape through a small window used for ventilation, and was nowhere to be found, and has not been located since.

Kicked by Cow — Shoulder Broken.

Charles Leach, a farm hand employed by G W. Ely on Wilbraham Mountain, was painfully injured Saturday while working in the barn. He was milking a cow, when the animal suddenly kicked him in such a way that his shoulder was broken. The fracture was reduced by Dr. H. G. Webber, and Leach was removed to the hospital in Springfield.

A Christmas Carol.

"What means this glory round our feet?"
The Magi mused, "more bright than morn?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born."

"What means that star," the shepherds said,
"That brightens through the rocky glen?"
And angels, answering overhead,
Sang "Peace on earth, good-will to men."

'Tis eighteen hundred years and more
Since those sweet oracles were dumb;
We wait for Him, like them of yore;
Alas! He seems so slow to come.

But it was said in words of gold,
No time or sorrow e'er shall dim,
That little children might be bold,
In perfect trust to come to Him.

All round about our feet shall shine
A light like that the wise men saw,
If we our willing hearts incline
To that sweet Life which is the Law.

So shall we learn to understand
The simple faith of shepherds then,
And, kindly clasping hand in hand,
Sing, "Peace on earth, good-will to men."

For they who to their childhood cling
And keep their natures fresh and morn,
Once more shall hear the angels sing,
"To-day the Prince of Peace is born."

—James Russell Lowell.

The Moral Effect of Playgrounds and Parks.

Showing Need of and Benefit to Every Community.

Address to Palmer Historical Society

By Rev. F. W. Gibbs.

A yone who has watched a bear with her cubs or a deer with her fawn, or a dog with her pups, or even a cat with her kittens, will know the natnralness of the animal's love of play The intense interest of the mother animal, as she watches her babies at play, shows that she puts the right value upon this instinct. Not only does the mother enjoy the sight of her playing offspring, but in various ways instructs them in their rompings. The bear teaches her cubs to cuff, hug, bite, fall from trees, run; the deer takes particular delight in being young with her fawn—running, jumping, hiding, and practices that one trait in which the deer excels, standing still. The dog and cat both play with their young, and like the other animals they seem to have an object in their play, and so far as we can judge, animals generally see the necessity of so teaching their young how to play that the lessons learned will be of value in after years.

This is not always so with human animals, in fact, rarely so. Propriety and etiquette occupy so large a place in human development that most children are brought up on a diet of don'ts, so far as play is concerned. What the family does not furnish in this negative sense the town, city or state seem to supply in the law with "thou shalt nots." Then, too, the affection of the mother, helped ont by the latest bacteriological and other scientific research in regard to health, make her afraid to let her children have free rein in play for fear of contamination, and this adds to the already strong diet of don'ts, and restrictions are increased which make play difficult if not quite ont of the question. Again, we always have with us that type of human animal who most seriously object to the presence of children and more especially to their chatter and noise when at play, whether that play be in the house, on the street, in the yard or in a nearby vacant lot. This adds still another restriction to play. There is still one more gronp which is found among human beings that help to check the spirit of play, and while they are not nearly so strong in nnmber as they were a few generations ago, we still have them with us. That kind who think it a sin for children to romp, run and dance, who check a child's impulse to play with a Biblical text and who would rather grow up a lot of prim pietists than playful, happy children.

In these two paragraphs I hope I have been able to show two very important things to be considered when we are thinking of the moral effect of playgrounds and parks.

First. The love of play is perfectly natural, and when rightly appreciated and understood is necessary and beneficial to the development of animal life, physical and mental.

Second. That when this love of play is hedged in with don'ts, restraints and numerous checks because of conventionality or selfish comfort, we are not helping but injuring the moral growth of our kind.

I hardly think that this needs further comment, and it is well to bear in mind that when we have a natural tendency such as this and put upon it or around it restraints and fail to give it opportunity to work itself out, we are by just so much hindering moral growth.

It may not be out of place to speak at this point of something of the nature and necessity of play among children. I am quite sure that until quite recently I have not understood its value and not until very recent years have men made any particular study of this feature in human development. "The thing that needs to be most understood about play is that it is not a luxury but a necessity. It is not simply something that a child likes to have; it is a necessity, or something he must have if he is ever to grow up. It is more than an essential part of his education; it is an essential part of the law of his growth, of the process by which he becomes a man."

"Men grow old," says G. Stanley Hall, "because they stop playing and not conversely, for play is, at bottom, growth."

With children, play is a serious matter. No one who has ever watched children at play will for a moment doubt this. In fact, the play of children is the main is not play at all in our grown-up sense of the word, it is reality, not relaxation, not even recreation, but just plain living out the thing in hand. Watch a boy playing Indian, soldier, or building a hut or a railroad. Watch a girl with her dolls, and in every case see how serious a matter it is. It is real with them—they live the thing in hand.

If we take this up and on into the age of adolescence we shall see that the fact remains just the same. While it may be true that in baseball, football, croquet, tennis and gymnastics of various kinds there is not the opportunity for the imagination, yet there is the same seriousness; and the virtues of courage, endurance, self-control, bravery, loyalty, honesty and enthusiasm abound and in so real a sense as to be a living part of the play. We cannot divorce this feature of life and yet hope that life will become all that it ought to be.

If we understand, even in part, the value of play we can better understand the necessity of providing a place where with freedom the child can give vent to this instinct.

Let me quote from Joseph Lee of the American Civic Association: "Many people who have realized the importance of children's play think that it requires no special provision, for the very reason that it is so instinctive. They assume that the satisfaction of so universal an instinct is inevitable. But it is not inevitable. Eating is a universal instinct among healthy people, but there is such a thing as starvation. The impulse is inevitable, in the one case as in the other, but there may be nothing there to meet it, or what is there may be not food but poison. Play requires its appropriate objects—tools, medium, partner, playmates; and these things are not self-providing. The mother is the first playmate, as well as the first source of material sustenance. But mothers do not always survive childbirth, and the loss is almost as heavy in the one capacity as in the other. People sometimes speak as if the child were capable of evolving his own world out of nothing. He is perhaps a little better at doing so than grown-ups, but even he may find the task too hard for him—as a man may have the playing instinct of a Paderwiski and yet not be able to improvise a piano, or condense one out of thin air by the sheer force of his ability to use it if it were only there. So, when you think of your own childhood and remember that playing was as instinctive as breathing, and that, as it seems to you in retrospect, you always found plenty of chance to play without any special provision being made for that purpose, remember also that there was room to play and things and other children to play with, and consider whether there may not be children in our modern cities or on lonely country farms less fortunately placed. And sometimes even good conditions can be improved"

To provide a place for children to be at liberty is one thing, to provide a place where children may intelligently and with appropriate objects answer the instinct to play is quite another thing We cannot afford to ease an obligation in this way and say any place will answer.

I quote from Judge Ben Lindsay: "It is only the thoughtless and uninformed who indifferently wave aside these important problems with the suggestion that the children of the past did not require such consideration. It is no answer to our demand for the public playground to say that all that is needed is the occasional vacant lot for the boy in the city. It is as absurd as to argue that because the boy of fifty years ago on the farm in this country was not in need of child labor laws such legislation is not necessary under present conditions Even this vacant lot, either with or without a trespass sign, is passing away with the old swimming hole. If it exists its joys are mingled with the terrors of the policeman, "Keep off the grass," the broken window, the grouchy neighbor and the dangers that come from the energy that is misdirected through suppression and lack of wise direction. Our plea for public playgrounds is a plea for justice to the boy. We are literally crowding him off the earth. We have no right to deny him his heritage, but that is just what we are doing in nearly every large city in this country; but he is hitting back and hitting hard, when he doesn't mean to, while we vaguely understand and stupidly punish him for crime Why shouldn't he rebel? The amazing thing is that he is not worse than he is"

There is no need of going into the dry, yet sometimes important matter of statistics, but many who have made the relation of playgrounds to juvenile delinquency a matter of investigation have revealed to us that in every case where in town or city playgrounds have been established and in some measure equipped, the moral tone has improved and the misdemeanors of boys and girls have decreased from 29 to 71 per cent so far as court records show. The evidence or statements of those who have to do with the management of playgrounds is even stronger, for they claim a general improvement not only among children but among parents as well.

In very brief study of this matter of playgrounds and parks I am more convinced than ever before of their worth to the community. Many look upon a public park as a luxury—merely an ornament to a town—but not so. It is a place of rest and refreshment without the sign "No Trespassing" staring you in the face. It is a place of beauty where one learns respect for and care of the things of others.

TRAIN MAN'S LONG WALK.

Hiked Home Wednesday Night When Train Left Him.

ON ROAD 7.30 P. M. TO 4.30 A. M.

Searchers Find No Trace and Family Frantic. Walked Into House Fagged Out.

There was a watch meeting at the home of Jerry Denning, baggage master on the C. V. "Boat" train south, on South Main street Wednesday evening, to which, incidentally, every station on the line between Brattleboro, Vt., and New London, Ct., which was open, took an interest.

Denning runs on the morning train from Palmer to New London, and is due back in Palmer at 7 50 at night. Wednesday night the train was about half an hour late, and when it came in Denning was not aboard. The last seen of him was at South Willington, the first station south of Stafford Springs, 21 miles from Palmer. Inquiries were made by wire of every station which was open, but after the last train down at night everything is closed up and it was impossible to get either Stafford or South Willington. No word from him having been received at 10 o'clock word was sent to his family and a track crew with a handcar was started out to search the right of way. Miller's Falls heard the news and began asking for information. So did Brattleboro. The train dispatcher kept the wires hot in such stations as he could get to respond to his call. The searching crew returned late the next morning with a report of no news At 4 o'clock yesterday morning the family gave up watching and settled down to a wait for news. At 5 Mr. Denning opened the door and walked in, tired, but safe and sound.

The story was soon told. At South Willington Mr. Denning dropped out of the car on the side opposite the station to speak to Engineer Hinchey. The steam under the car was leaking and he stopped to fix it He had almost reached the engine step when the train started, the engineer having received the "go ahead" signal. They were late and he "picked her up" from the start. The milk car was next the engine and Denning knew the forward end of the express car was blocked with express matter so he could not get in there, and he didn't care to ride six miles to Stafford on the platform, as he was thinly clad. By the time the baggage car reached him the train was going so fast he couldn't make the catch and although he yelled the brakeman didn't hear and Denning saw the light disappear around the curve He was mad clear through, and started right along toward Stafford, thinking he'd get in the station there and spend the night. But it was 10 o'clock when he got into town and after trying his keys on the station door and running the risk of being taken for a burglar he concluded to keep on with his hike toward home. Walking on a railroad track isn't the easiest proposition in pedestrianism at best, and the C. V. ties haven't the best of reputation for even spacing or a very great amount of earth over them, so it was a decidely uneven tramp to where the lights of an "all night" station greeted the traveler. He reached them at last however about 4.30 the next morning, and after an hour or so of sleep took his run again as usual yesterday morning, although the company had sent a man to take his place.

Death of Prominent Belchertown Physician.

Dr. George Francis Thomson, 77, of Belchertown died suddenly of heart failure yesterday morning. His death came as a great shock to the townspeople by whom he was beloved.

Dr. Thomson was born in Belchertown, the son of Horatio and Cordelia Thomson. He enlisted at the beginning of the civil war in the 38th Massachusetts regiment, in which he remained as surgeon for three years, serving the fourth in a New York regiment. After the war Dr. Thomson was appointed surgeon on a government steamer and in that capacity visited England, Scotland, Ireland, and spent several months in Paris. Besides his widow, to whom he had been married 44 years on Tuesday, and the daughter, Miss Lucy D. Thomson, there are two grandchildren and a niece, the wife of Rev. Dr. Milliken of New York city.

WEST WARREN.

Death of Mrs. Franklin W. Bemis.

Mrs. Ann R. Bemis, 68, wife of Franklin W. Bemis, died at her home in West Warren last Friday evening from carcinonia. She had been in poor health for several years, but her death was unexpected. Mrs. Bemis was born in Stockport, Eng., May 11, 1841, daughter of John S. and Hannah Wilde Rycroft. She came to Ware with her parents when only five years old and four years later moved to West Warren with them and had lived there since. She was married to Mr. Bemis in 1875 She had always been active in the church and social life of the village. Besides her husband she leaves two sisters, Miss Alice Rycroft of West Warren and Mrs Eliza Knight of Worcester, and two sons, Eugene A. of Providence, R. I., and Herbert W. of Auburn, and a grandson, Frederick of Providence. The funeral was held at the house Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. and burial was in Pine Grove cemetery.

WALES.

Dornoe Parker, who has been seriously ill, is recovering.

There are still a few cases of mumps among the children.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper of Fiskdale spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Reinhardt.

O. C. Switzer, who is spending the winter in Monson with C. E Switzer, was in town this week.

Hollis Church and Frank Coburn of Windsor Locks, Ct., called upon friends in town Wednesday.

Rev. C. T. Hott of Springfield preached in the Baptist church last Sunday and will supply the pulpit again next Sunday.

School closed last Friday for the Christmas vacation of two weeks. There was the usual Christmas-tree and program at the Centre schoolhouse with a good number of visitors present.

To-morrow evening there will be a Christmas celebration in the Baptist church. Besides the tree, the children will give a drama entitled, "The Night Before Christmas." Ice cream and cake will be served.

Friends of Miss Anna M. Johnson will be interested to know that she has resigned her position as teacher of English and German in the Brookline high school and will start Feb. 2 on a trip to Egypt and Palestine. Upon her return to this country she intends to make her home in this town.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 24, 1909.

HAPPILY the Ludlow strike is over at last. Trouble of a serious nature appeared possible for a time last Friday, when the returning strikers claimed that the agreements made by the company had been violated; that not all of the strikers were to be taken back and that other agreed conditions were not kept. They at once walked out again, but the trouble appeared to be due to a misunderstanding and was soon satisfactorily settled. The weavers go back to work at the reduced schedule, pending an adjustment of the wage scale by the state board of arbitration. Meanwhile, Ludlow has become pretty well known in many quarters of the country where it is doubtful if it was ever heard of before. The eviction of the strikers from the houses of the company, while strictly within its rights legally, was about the worst move it could have made. This country is not accustomed to the word "eviction" or the scenes which accompany the act, and upon this one thing more than any other has set the seal of disapproval by everyone who has heard of it. It will be a long time, if ever, before the company will recover from the stigma placed upon it by reason of the turning of the operatives from their homes.

THE report from Copenhagen, which seems to make it plain that Dr. Cook never reached the North Pole, gives his enemies an opportnnity to say "I told you so," which they are naturally improving to the full. At the same time it disappoints many who could not believe, even when circumstances seem to point plainly to the verdict finally reached, that he could be so much of a fakir. And it does seem almost incredible that any persons should have set out to make the claims which Dr. Cook did with no more foundation that he has so far submitted. Unless woefully weak mentally he must know that detection would come in a very short time, and that he wonld then stand discredited for all time by everyone. So far, only one person of prominence has been found who still believes in him, Rear Admiral Schley. He is quoted as still having faith that Cook's "original" papers will contain the proofs of the claims he has previously made.

EVIDENTLY there is "something doing" in airshipery—if that's a good word—or numerous people have taken to "seein' things o' nights," for from various sections in the central and eastern part of the state and portions of Connecticnt come reports of a mysterious shape which has appeared in the skies at night during the past week. It has been plainly seen—or so reported—by reputable people who assert that it is without doubt an airship. It hovers over cities, performs various evolutions, and spies upon the communities beneath with a powerfnl searchlight. Incidentally, Wallace E. Tillinghast of Worcester has recently laid claim to the construcion of a new airship in which he asserts he has made long and swift trips unknown to the nblic and it is generally conceded that the mysterious visitor of the skies seen this week is his. There may be someting in it

A PROPOSITION that men sent to institutions of correction for small offences or misdemeanors be set at work and the profits of their labor be turned over to their families is made by Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly of the state board of prison commissioners. It is a good one. Too often families dependent on this class of men are left destitute or dependent on charity or the communities in which they live. If the natural supporter of the family can be made to contribute to their sustenance while under punishment for his misdeeds, there shonld be no adverse criticism.

PROBABLY there is no person who discredits Peary's claim to have reached the pole, and yet the snggestion that he snbmit his proofs to the same board which investigated Cook's claims is not so unreasonable. The passing on both by the same tribunal could have but one result—to place Peary's reputation at an even higher point than before, if that is possible. Mr. Peary is making a mistake when he indignantly spurns the suggestion as preposterons. He made another when he lost his temper over Cook's claim to the discovery.

WORCESTER citizens have been having a lot of trouble the last two years of no license with "drnnks" on the electric cars. They would go to other places to "tank up" and then create almost intolerable conditions on the cars home. Complaint was made to the state board of railroad commissioners, which sensibly decides that if the trolley lines are to carry that class of passengers they must at their own expense provide sufficient protection to make it safe and proper for decent persons to travel on their lines.

SUPPOSING that Cook is the biggest kind of a fake, if he has, as his friends claim, gathered in between $80,000 and $100,000 by lectures, etc., since his retnrn to this country, he can afford to retire and snap his fingers at all the hard things they care to say about him.

DOES it pay to be honest? Sometimes. Note that Parr, the deputy collector who gave the original tip which resulted in the New York Sugar fraud prosecutions, will receive half of the sum recovered from the offending company, a neat little $1,000,000.

FOR BIG ICE CROP.

Palmer Ice Company Planning to Have Plenty of Congealed Fluid.

The Palmer Ice Company is planning to have a plentiful supply of ice for any weather or demand which may be made upon it. In addition to the new pond which it has constructed on its property on the Thorndike road, it has leased the Knox pond at the head of Pond street and will harvest as much as possible from that source. This ice will not be used for domestic purposes, but will be served to the market and other large refrigerators. The company hopes to be able to cut ice for domestic use from its new pond, but on account of the newness of the pond it may not be possible; in such case this ice will also be used for large refrigerators, leaving that from the original pond for family use. There will be enough of this, if the crop is good, to supply all demands.

PALMER NEWS.

BIG MAILS THIS WEEK.

Post Office Business in Palmer Is Much Larger Than Ever Before.

The Christmas business at the post office has broken all records this year, the volume being far in excess of anything ever before experienced locally. And as the amount is a fair indication of the condition of the country,—increasing with good times and falling off in times of financial stress—it is evident that the tide of prosperity is not on the ebb flow.

The first of the Christmas business began about three weeks ago, when the demand for foreign money orders began. A large amount of money is sent home for Christmas by people of numerous nationalities, but this year's volume at the local office was far and away ahead of anything previously. Buyers came from near and far to the Palmer office for their orders, and they went to almost every country on the earth where international money orders are sold, Greece, Turkey and Japan being included. The demand ceased about the middle of last week, as the orders would not reach their destinations in time for Christmas if bought after that.

The Christmas packages—both going and coming—have been much in evidence this week, but the incoming ones have been disposed of easily by putting on a wagon delivery. This was started yesterday and was kept busy all day in charge of Substitute Carrier Kempton. It has been kept at work all day to-day and will be ont until noon to-morrow. This has saved the office much labor, as otherwise they would have been obliged to wait on callers for packages at the windows, which would take much of the time needed for sorting and sending out other mail. The outgoing packages have been sent ont promptly, the work being facilitated by the work of an additional clerk, Clinton D. Frame of Three Rivers.

Not a small part of the work of the office this week has been the care of the registered mail, both that sent and received locally, but that which has passed through. All registered mail coming into the Palmer office from either way on the Boston and Albany or the Central Vermont, or over the Ware River road, as well as t at on the electric lines, which is to be transferred to some other line, must be booked twice in the Palmer office, once as received and again as sent ont. This makes a large amount of work, as at this season a large amount of registered matter is going through the mails and the five steam and two electric lines bringing mail to the Palmer office have kept the officials busy. To-morrow will see the bnlk of the rnsh over, it is expected. The carriers have had big loads on every delivery for the last few days, and will be glad when the work is lighter once more.

Mrs. Sarah L. Cheney.

Mrs. Sarah L. Cheney, 66, died at the home of her son, Dr. Harry C. Cheney, on Main street, abont 10.30 Snnday night after a short illness with pneumonia. She is survived by two sons. Dr. Harry C. of Palmer and Arthnr C. of Castleton, N. Y. Mrs. Cheney was born in Westbrook, Ct., the danghter of Henry B. and Louise Chapman. In 1865 she was married to Samuel Cheney and abont seven years ago they came to Palmer to live. Mr. Cheney was in poor health at the time and his death occnrred soon, since which time she has lived with her son here. Mrs. Cheney was in her younger days a successful teacher in the public schools and later a teacher of music, herself a musician of ability. She was possessed of a mind of more than ordinary brilliancy, took a deep interest in passing events and kept well informed of the world's doings. While her acqnaintance in Palmor was not wide, those who came to know her most intimately loved her deeply for her sympathetic nature, her kindly words and deeds. There was a prayer at the house Tnesday afternoon by Rev. Frank S. Brewer of the Congregational church, and the body was taken Wednesday morning to Ivoryton, Ct., her former home, where funeral services were held in the chapel of the Congregational church in the afternoon.

The managers of the Elite have arranged a special program for this evening and the matinee and evening performances tomorrow. The films will be, "Rover turns Santa Claus," "Getting even with everybody," "The seventh day," "Oh, Uncle!" "The conspirators," "The Dyspeptic and his double." The songs will be "Come With Me On a Joy Ride," by Albert A. Gould, and "I Want a Home, That's All," by Miss Lillian E Dwyer. As an added attraction slides of the great Cherry, Illinois, mine disaster will be shown.

The control of the Knox pond for ice purposes by the Palmer Ice Company and the subsequent barring of skaters from its surface has deprived lovers of the sport of the only place near the center of the village which has been available. The other places nearest are the pond on the Overlook farm just west of the village, and the pond at Blanchardville. Both are at some distance however. The pond of the Quaboag Leather Company on the road to Monson affords good skating and has the advantage of being on the line of the electric cars.

The Snnday school of the Congregational church will give a Christmas exercise, entitled "Christmas Gladness," Snnday afternoon at 3.15 in the audience room of the Universallst church. This service will take the place of the regniar church service. A report is expected of the amount of money raised by the Sunday school in all departments for the building of the new church. The offering of the day will also be devoted to this object. The regular meeting of the Sunday school comes at 2 o'clock bnt the usual meeting of the Christian Endeavor society will be omitted.

BELCHERTOWN.

Annual Church Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held in the chapel last Friday afternoon, with a large attendance. About 40 responded to their names and 10 letters were read from absent members. Rev. Mr. Fishburn presided and Mrs. Susan Chapman was clerk. After the preliminary exercises the report of the church clerk was given and accepted. There have been no deaths among the local members of the church, but three baptisms and several additions to membership by letter. Rev. Mr. Fishburn spoke feelingly of his experience as pastor dnring the past year, dwelling npon the harmonious co-operation he had received from all. Miss Stebbins, the church treasurer, read an encourging account of the status of the church funds. The sum expended in benevolences dnring the year was nearly $200. Miss Towne gave the number of pupils in the Sunday school as 104, and average attendance 94. The Christian Endeavor society has 30 active members and 15 associates. The Ladies' Aid, missionary and social circle each have 24 members, with generous response financially. Dea. Bartlett reported extensive repairs on the parsonage, for all of which he held receipts. The ushers chosen for the coming year are Lewis Blackmer, F. D. Walker Jr., Lewis Dyer, Raymond Gould, Richard Lewis. The officers chosen are: Prudential committee, Mrs. M. D. S Longley, Mrs. Alice L. Kendall, Mrs Mary Blackmer, Lewis Blackmer, D. D. Hazen; standing committee, Dea. Bartlett, Dea. Bardwell, Dwight F. Shumway; superintendent of Sunday school, H. P. Jackson; assistant, Lewis Blackmer; librarian, H. A. Hopkins; secretary and treasurer, Miss Towne; chorister, Mrs. Winslow Piper.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Leon J. Stevens to Charles F. Walton, dated November 21, 1906, and recorded in Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 722, Page 120, and for breach of the conditions thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises first hereinafter described in Palmer, in said Hampden County, on Wednesday, the twelfth day of January, A. D. 1910, at one o'clock in the afternoon all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and described therein as follows:—

The following described real estate, land and buildings situated in Palmer in said Hampden County, bounded and described as follows:—

Beginning at the northeast corner of land conveyed at land of B. & A. R. R. Co.; thence southerly on land of Central Massachusetts Electric Company crossing the State highway to land of the Springfield & Eastern Street R. R. Co.; thence westerly on land of the Springfield & Eastern Street Railway Company about three hundred sixteen (316) feet to land of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company; thence northerly on land of said Electric Company and on land formerly of William B. Bennitt to the State highway; thence northerly on said highway to land of the B. & A. R. R. Company; thence easterly on said last named land to the place of beginning. Reserving from the same the highway leading from Palmer to Brimfield through same. Also conveying the right to construct and forever maintain a sewer and drain pipe across said land from State road north of the same to the Quaboag River, said sewer and drain to run through pipes where now laid under the proposed embankment and through other pipes to be laid from said road to said river. Subject to any right written or referred to in a deed recorded with Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 634, Page 116.

Also a certain tract of land in said Palmer bounded as follows:—

Bounded northerly by the highway leading from Palmer to Brimfield; southerly by land of the B. & A. R. R. Company; easterly by the same and running to a point at the westerly end between said highway and said railroad company's land. Containing about (5) acres of land more or less. Subject to any rights of flowage the Central Massachusetts Electric Company may have.

All the above property will be sold together, and subject to a mortgage to D. E. Burbank and another, Trustees, on the first described tract, for twelve hundred (1200) dollars and interest and any unpaid taxes or assessments upon any of the above property. $100.00 will be required to be paid in cash by the purchaser at the time and place of sale.

Monson News.

Two Accidents While Chopping.

Frank L. Bliss of South Main street cut bis foot badly while chopping wood iu Cedar swamp last Saturday afternoon. He was driven to the village as quickly as possible and the wound was attended to by Dr. C. W. Jackson. Although the cut is a bad one no serious results are anticipated. The same day Munroe Pease of Elm street, who was cutting wood iu a different part of the swamp, cut his left ankle severely, cutting an artery and but for prompt assistance the injury would probably have proved fatal. He was attended by Dr. G. E. Fuller.

Small Blaze.

The fire department was called out at 12 45 Monday afternoon by an alarm from box 18 on Pearl street. The fire was in the home of R. S. Hughes on State street, and started in the chimney which had been burning for some time and some woodwork in the attic which supported the chimney was burned. Chemical and hook and ladder No. 1 responded promptly and the fire was put ont before it gained much headway. The damage was mostly by water from the chemical and was slight. The loss is covered hy insurance.

Narrow Escape.

John Curley, driver of the mail team, narrowly escaped being struck by the 7 06 train Wednesday morning at the railroad crossing near the depot. Mr. Curley was late in going to the post office for the mail, and did not hear nor have any warning of the approaching train and drove across the track just in front of the locomotive, the rear wheels of his carriage just clearing it. Those at the station who witnessed the narrow escape were more disturbed than Mr. Curley, who did not realize what a close call he had.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Dec. 22, 1909.

The shortest day of the year finds the political situation in a turmoil. Last night there was great disorder at a Storrow meeting in South Boston, so that a large squad of extra police had to he summoned. Hibbard has burned his bridges behind him, so to speak, for he has had the sign "Hibbard Headquarters" painted upon the door of the room at No. 8 Beacon street where his campaign work is done. The Fitzgerald men are jubilant more than ever at the irreversible position which Hibbard has taken and feel sure of success. At the Storrow headquarters they have come to the point of admitting, in so many words, that they made mistakes in their way of nominating their candidate, and are expecting to work hard enough to correct the blunder Personalities increase as the campaign advances and Boston seems to be in for a monkey and parrot sort of a time. For the people outside of the city, the issue has interest as a contest for good government. What sort of government the anti-Fitzgerald forces believe they are opposing is seen in the report of the finance commission. Referring to members of the city council, it said:

"Many members spend their time in violating the charter by besieging the heads of departments to employ men, raise salaries, give out contracts and order goods for the benefit of their political supporters and constituents. If persistent entreaties are insufficient to cause the heads of departments to swerve from their duty, recourse is often had to scurrilous attacks on the floor of the city council which are printed in the daily papers and perpetuated in the official publication of the city. These illegal efforts are often directed to the pecuniary benefit of the members themselves" It was charged that the Mayor aimed "to become the machine itself."

As the situation stands to-day, it seems as if Fitzgerald would be elected, if the votes were cast to-day. A round of all the headquarters to-day makes it evident, as far as surface indications go. The issue seems to be whether Fitzgerald can hold his forces, or whether the opposition can break into them. There has been intense opposition to him inside his own party, but now that the issue is between him and the other stripe of men, many who fought him are with him. Will enough dissatisfied Democrats turn to Storrow to elect him? Fitzgerald men claim to-day that the Storrow meeting Saturday night, although Tremont Temple was packed and overflow meetings were held, failed to bring out any new charges against the former mayor Therefore, there was disappointment in some quarters and men who had been waiting to see which way the tide was running concluded it was for Fitzgerald and have come out for him

On the other hand, some Democratic ward chairmen have since then come out for Storrow and the gains are not all on one side. There is good reason for saying that strong private efforts are in progress to get the United States senators to use their influence and persuade Hibbard to pull out and so promote Storrow's chances. But one of the most prominent politicians in the city and party tells me that they have not raised a finger yet to influence Hibbard, and he does not believe that they will be drawn into the affair. If they should do so, they would he charged with meddling with a city campaign, which is not their business. Whatever they might try would almost surely fail, and they would suffer a loss of prestige which would hurt them and nohody would be the gainer by their mixing in. It is not probable that they will change their attitude. Neither Lodge nor Crane would relish interference under the circumstances and Boston is likely to fight it out alone.

One reason why neither senator is likely to meddle is that both of them were opposed to Plan No. 2, which the Boston voters adopted rather than Plan No. 1 at the state election. Having been defeated, and the city likely to suffer the evils which they predicted under Plan No. 2, it is credited to them that they prefer to see Boston stew in its own juice with four years of Fitzgerald, rather than help the city out and give it a better administration. At any rate there are state and national politics mixed up with city politics, and it does not yet appear at all clear that Boston has made the slightest gain for good government by its change of charter. Information comes from New York that the Boston experiment is being studied closely there, and it is a case for students of city administration in all parts of the country.

Whatever the stories to be told after the holidays of the sufferings of the clerks in retail stores, it seems at this time as if there would he less of it than usual. In the first place, the Christmas trade began very early. People are learning the lesson of buying early to avoid the rush, and immediately after December 1 the flood of shoppers began to pour in. The exceptionally fine and dry weather has favored them, and while the stores have been thronged during the middle hours of the day, it does not seem as if there was as much of a climax crush as there is usually at this distance before Christmas. It would he extremely interesting to tell in detail inside stories of Christmas goods and other articles which the public buy in immense quantities. For instance, here is the matter of furs. Every woman, with few exceptions, is wearing some sort of fur this season, either on her head, or around her neck, or as a cape or cloak. Where do the thousands of skins come from, considering that the spread of mankind reduces the number of fur-bearing animals on the earth? The fur business is about as complicated as the occupation of making of counterfeit money and it is a fair presumption that many buyers do not know what they are buying. The various devices of dyeing, cutting, patching, trimming and what not to fix over furs, as told by those in the business who will tell, are remarkable. Then, too, the number of animals is probably more numerous than the ignorant would suppose. For instance, I am informed of one house which has imported this season 160 000 bare skins These are fixed up in various ways and probably form the largest item in the trade. Genuine high priced skins run to very high prices. A black fox, it is said, is worth $500, or more. A genuine first-class sealskin, which was perhaps worth $200 or $300 a few years ago, is now worth three times as much. So with the skins of otter. There are various odd, light-colored skins which are irregular sort of goods and their prices depend upon the fancy of the public. Leopard, tiger and that sort are seen occasionally, but they are rather freaks than standard articles. Demand for skins here leads to activity in all parts of the world, and the ends of the earth are put under contribution for the women and girls of the cities and towns, poor as well as rich, for when fur is in fashion everybody must have it he it skunk, cat, dog or rat. Black cows' skins are among the things worked up to meet this demand of fashion and whim. Speaking of these things, a report, said to be reliable, is the effect that the present wide brimmed hats of women are not a circumstance to the styles which are to overshadow the land when spring comes. Forewarned is forearmed, and if anybody wants to protect the helpless public by legislation, there is time to introduce a bill before the time for new business expires.

Congressional campaigns are opening. A few days ago it was published that Congressman Lovering of the 14th district, who was supposed to have run his final campaign last year, is to be brought out once more in order to allow Brockton time to find a candidate, for the city can control the situation if it chooses. There seems to he no probability that George E. Keith, the prominent shoe manufacturer, will run. Brockton has a citizen who would serve the district ably and serve the state and country also. He is James S. Allen, 78 years of age, but of well preserved body and mind, of exceptionally long service in our state house and Senate, well informed on public matters, one of the most progressive men of the day and abundantly able to perform the duties in spite of his years. If Brockton should send him for one or two terms, it would render good service to the public. Other men are named, and the entire situation is unsettled. But it is not probable that Lovering will be a candidate again.

In the Legislature, the Democrats may adopt the policy of organizing their members more than they have done recently, owing to their close approach to success last month. It is certain that the Democratic managers will make political points over legislation more than they have for years, and the consequence will be, of course, that the powerful Republican majority will take things into its hand and run the session more on a party basis than ever.

One of the interesting rumors of the day is that the close vote of November has shown the Republican managers that they need the support of the farmers, and the consequence, so an interesting report has it, is that the milk producers will get the milk standard, or lack of standard which they want. It takes a great many men to play politics all over the state, as this illustration shows.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Palmer People Know How To Save It.

Many Palmer people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill-health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Palmer citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. John Leary, Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for I consider them to be the best kidney remedy in existence. Recently I suffered from an attack of kidney disease and procuring this remedy from Lynde & Gould's Drug Store, I began its use. In return for the benefit I received, I am glad to state publicly that Doan's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The Governor's Pardon

Story of a Man Who Showed Himself Brave and True.

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

Copyright, 1903, by American Press Association.

The snow had been falling steadily for three days, and the long, low house at the edge of the woods was almost buried from sight.

A tall young man wearing a fur lined overcoat was busily engaged in removing heavy drifts from the wide verandas and in tunneling a pathway to the door. A great St. Bernard dog watched the performance with dignified approval.

It was a strange house to be placed alone in all this vast expanse of snowy landscape, built of logs, yet with white pillars supporting the veranda and over the doorway a rustic sign bearing the words, "The Bungalow." Behind the house, also built of logs, was a garage or small stable.

The man stopped his labor to pat the dog's head. "No walk for us today, old man," he said. "We must content ourselves with rereading the day before yesterday's paper."

The dog followed his master into the house, one long room of which reached from end to end. The man threw more logs into the fireplace and as the day grew darker lit a great lamp and glanced again at the discarded paper as though longing for the sound of a human voice. He read aloud, and the dog flapped his tail understandingly.

"Here is a society notice, Laddie. We can't get away from society, you see, though we live in snowy solitude: 'Miss Antoinette Marion Drew has left town for two or three weeks' rest. Upon her return invitations will be issued for her marriage to Governor James P. White.' And, after the strenuous work of landing Governor White, Laddie, no doubt Miss Drew, whoever she may be, deserves a rest."

The man yawned and cast the paper from him.

A loud knocking echoed through the house. He hesitated a moment, then, frowning, opened the door. A girl stood before him in the lamplight, a girl with white face peeping out from the scarlet hood of her cloak.

"May I come in?" she asked. "We have lost our way, and it is so very cold."

"Certainly," the man responded; "come in at once. You said 'we.'" He peered questioningly into the darkness.

"My horse," the girl explained. "Have you any place to put poor Billy until we are warmed and rested?"

"If you will step in," the man said, "I will attend to the horse presently."

The girl seated herself before the fire as he drew on his overcoat and lighted a lantern. "Fortunately there are a stable and some fodder," he said, "and if Billy does not object to a stale meal we may make him fairly comfortable."

The girl removed her cloak and settled back into the leather chair with a sigh of comfort as the cheering warmth brought the rose color flooding back to cheeks and lips.

She told him that she was staying with Aunt Martha and Uncle Ben down near the village. He remembered the old red farmhouse which she described and offered to drive her safely there when the storm had abated, but the wind rattled the windows and shook the house to its very foundation, and later when he had forced the horse and sleigh to the roadway he staggered back blindly through the pelting ice to the house.

"You can't go," he told the girl, who stood ready in her scarlet cloak. "It would be impossible tonight. There is just one thing to be done—you must stay here with Laddie, who will guard you well, while the horse and I will try to find our way to the farmhouse to assure your people of your safety. If I should not return until morning you must not be alarmed. You must keep warm, and, above all things, do not let the fire die out." He turned to look at her as she still sat silent. "I am sorry that you must do this," he added, "sorry to leave you alone."

The girl came and stood looking up at him. "You must not think of me," she said. "Is it safe for you to go?"

"Quite safe," he answered smilingly.

Impulsively the girl put forth her hand, and the man clasped it. "Good night," she said. "We will be anxiously waiting for you, Laddie and I."

"I have been examining the doors and windows," the girl replied, "and am afraid it means that we are snowed in."

When the morning dawned he returned from a fruitless search. He slept till 9 o'clock and, noticing that the house was dark, asked the girl what it meant.

The man hurried about the house, looking in vain for a glimmer of light from the outside. Presently he came back to her. "I am afraid it is true," he said. "You wonderful girl, do you take all your misfortunes so happily?"

The girl laughed merrily. "You cannot tell fibs successfully, but I am very sure that Aunt Martha will not worry. It isn't her nature. She will know I have 'fetched up' somewhere."

Early in the afternoon they sat, one on either side of the fireplace, the dog's shaggy length stretched at the girl's feet, while the man read aloud. Presently, feeling the concentration of her eyes upon him, he looked up from the book.

"John Ryder," said the girl suddenly, "why did you come here?"

The man started visibly, and his face paled. "S[illegible]" he said, "you know my name?"

She lifted a book from the reading table and, opening it, held it out to him in the lamplight. Upon the fly-leaf was inscribed, "To John Ryder, From His Mother." The man's face hardened, then he said: "You must have heard the whole miserable story. It has been well advertised throughout the country."

The girl leaned forward. "Will you let me tell you all that I have heard?" she asked gently. He made an impatient gesture of dissent.

"It will be better for you," the girl urged, "to talk it over. Bearing so much alone has made you morbid."

"As you will," said the man and buried his face in his hands.

"I remember the day"—her voice was tender with sympathy—"that the newsboys were calling, 'Extra!' along the streets and I stopped to buy a paper with its glaring headlines, 'John Ryder Absconded!' I had heard about his extravagant entertainments, his generous gifts to charity. Now I read of widows and orphans left destitute, of homes destroyed because of his dishonesty. Then, while the world was still talking of his great crime, another extra was called—'John Ryder Dead!' As I read the sad story tears filled my eyes, for he was returning home, returning old and broken after one week to give himself up to the authorities, when they found him. But he never reached the prison walls. Heart disease, the papers said, though it seemed to me that, realizing the enormity of his crime and sorrowing for it, he had died. Then I read of the son left to bear the shock and disgrace. They had blamed him, too—the papers—with sharp, stinging words, hinting that, associated closely with his father in business affairs, he must have known that the money which provided him with every luxury was not honestly earned. Oh, I was glad when he showed himself true and longed to go to this second John Ryder to tell him how splendid he was, for he gave up everything—the independent fortune which his mother had left her son, his automobiles, not even withholding the beautiful horse which had been his pet and pride. Then, penniless and quite alone, he disappeared.

"John Ryder," asked the girl again, "why did you come here?"

The man raised his face. "It was the coward instinct, I suppose," he said bitterly. "The fight was too strong for me, so I deserted. My mother loved this little place, and I could not let it go, so it was here we came to hide away from them all, Laddie and I."

"You a deserter," cried the girl, and her eyes were gleaming—"the bravest man that I have ever known! Shall I tell you why you came here to be alone for a time? It was that you might gather your forces together and then, going back into the very midst of the fight, show them, not what a John Ryder has been, but what a John Ryder can be."

The man's eyes seemed to have caught fire from hers. "I could do all that and more," he cried, "if you were waiting for me at the end!" The girl's face was very white. "Forgive me," said the man huskily—"forgive me if you can. I have been quite carried away." There was a long silence before the girl spoke.

"You have also heard my name," she said. "I am Antoinette Drew, the promised wife of the governor."

"You!" cried the man incredulously as he looked at the girlish face in its frame of curling hair.

"He was my father's friend," she explained, "and held me upon his knee as a child. It was mother, I think, who made him realize that he wanted me for his wife. We have been taught, my sisters and I, that to achieve prominence and wealth leaves nothing to be desired, and we have done credit to our teaching. Out here in the great white world I have been thinking things over, wondering if I dare be true. I, too, have a battle before me, and I am going to play the game fair. I am going back to brave my father's anger and my mother's displeasure—to tell the governor all and ask pardon for the great wrong done him. I am glad," she added softly, "that my decision had been made before I knocked at your door, else I might question my own motive today."

The man leaned forward. "If he holds you to your promise," he asked tensely, "what then?"

The girl sighed. "I shall at least have been honest."

"And if he releases you?"

With a rush and a slide a great weight of snow came thundering down from the roof. "John Ryder," cried the girl unsteadily, "our furlough is over. Get out your shovel and set me free."

For days he haunted the little post-office. His last memory of her had been as she stood upon the platform of the train that was carrying her away. Just as the car turned the curve she drew herself erect and made a stiff little military salute. There had been a smile upon her lips and tears in her eyes. The picture came back to him this morning as the postmaster handed out a businesslike looking envelope and then a small square one. He hurried out into the sparkling world to be alone.

"It has come, Laddie," he said to the dog; "it has come at last." For a moment he feared to break the seal, then stood still as the full significance of her message came to him. "The governor has granted our pardon," he read.

The man went running up the shining roadway, the great dog leaping and barking joyously at his side. When they had gone some distance he remembered the other envelope and tore it open. It was an offer of a position of great trust and was signed by the governor.

Matching the Braid.

After ten years he returned, footsore and weary. His wife met him at the door.

"I thought you were dead," she told him.

"You should have known better than that," he said. "Do you remember that last piece of net I tried to match for you? You scolded because there was a difference of an eighth of an inch in the width of the folds, and I vowed that I would never again return from matching anything for you until I had found the exact thing you wanted."

He handed her a package.

"Here is that old rose binding braid that you told me to buy. I found it last Monday in Billings, Mont. I have looked for it in thirty-seven states."

She tore off the wrappings.

"It is a little too dark," she said.

"But the sample has faded some in ten years," he reminded her.

"It is a little too heavy besides."

"But handling by thousands of clerks has worn the sample away some. It was heavier when I started out."

"I suppose I can make it do," she said.—Newark News.

Her Dime.

Somebody had given the east side woman a bad dime. It was composed largely of lead. She tried to pass it at several places, but they are wary for some reason or other on the east side. They invariably ring a dime on the counter once or twice and bite it besides. When she got home with the dime it had several holes in it from the pressure of east side teeth. "It is more impossible than ever," she said.

The impecunious man called that evening. He had a dollar with him which was wholly intact—that is to say, it had not been broken.

"I am afraid they'll give me bad money for it," he said upon taking his departure, "over here in these east side cars. Will you change it for me?"

"I shall be delighted," said she.

He called a week later with a grouch.

"You can't seem to get away from the bad money over here on your old east side," he complained. "Somebody or other stung me with an old lead dime that was full of holes."—New York Press.

Convincing the Waiter.

"I have learned how to make the foreign waiters in the restaurants where I eat think I have lived in Europe half a lifetime," said a woman who never dines at home. "I dawdle over my dinner twice as long as anybody else in the place. It requires no effort for me to do that. By nature I eat in the same leisurely manner that I do everything else. Most of my compatriots bolt their food. As a consequence the foreign waiters who are used to leisurely dining regard them with amazed horror.

"'Ah, those Americans!' they exclaim. 'Some day they choke. But as for madame'—meaning me—'well, madame is different. Madame nibbles, she sips, she lingers; therefore she is not as those of common American clay. It takes madame never less than two hours to eat her dinner. That marks her as one of the European elect.'"—New York Globe.

Unappreciated Efforts.

Unselfish goodness is seldom appreciated in this world of ours. There was that man in the electric car, for instance. Having rung up three fares in his efforts to stop the car for the lady that sat on the opposite side, he tossed after her the umbrella that belonged to the little gray whiskered man on his right. Neither the gray whiskered man nor the conductor liked the thoughtful Samaritan for his altruistic efforts.—Boston Transcript.

The Moral Effect of Playgrounds and Parks.

In a town I know was a tract of land quite heavily wooded which had been looked upon as a suitable place for public park and playground. It was private property and while such, trees were cut and marred, depredations were committed. It became a public park, in a sense a public garden, and since that time care has been taken and damage has ceased. In this same town there were several places where by the coming together of three streets there were small spaces, triangular in shape, left unused. The Improvement Society asked permission of the town to use spaces, to en b them in and make little green spots, plant flowers and shrubbery. People laughed and said what a useless waste of good money. Boys and girls, they said, would steal the flowers and cut the shrubs. There are now six or eight of these places. No one steals the flowers, to ever body's surprise no one walks on the grass or cuts the shrubs, and they are free from signs "Keep off the grass," etc. That is what I call moral effect, and it is produced by the sense of public ownership But this moral effect extended itself. Not only did people recognize that these little garden spots were untouched, but their own lawns and gardens were free from harm, fences came down, lawns were improved nd gardens established, all to the beautification of the town. To be sure, conditions are not perfect, but the moral effect is very manifest

If you will take the time to read the many reports in regard to the effect of playgrounds you will vote that in every case where one is established there has been improvement, not only physically but morally, and in all ages of childhood and youth. Again I quote Joseph Lee: "If there is a man clothed in dignity and a blue coat especially hired and paid to chase you if you will only take the necessary means to gain his interest and attention—and if there is nothing else to do—it is a wasting of opportunities, a flying in the face of Providence, as it were, not to make the most of what fortune so considerately sends. But tag is not the only game, and the policeman is not the only one who knows it. Nor is the avenger of the outraged bell-wire his only substitute. Give a boy a chance at football, basketball, hockey, or "the game;" give him an opportunity to perform difficult and dangerous feats on a horizontal bar, on the flying-rings, or from a diving-board; and the policeman will need a gymnasium himself to keep his weight down. This is not theory, but is the testimony you will get from any policeman or schoolmaster who has been in a neighborhood before and after a playground was started there.

Now it may seem strange but it is true that all that has been done in the way of establishing public playgrounds in municipalities has been done within 30 years. Let me call attention to the growth of the movement, I quote from the book, "American Playgrounds," edited by Everett B. Mero. "In ten years, ending 1906, covering practically all the present period of rapid growth, about $50,000,000 has been spent for playgrounds and equipments."

"In twenty-four cities in 1905 there were 87 playgrounds; in 1907 in the same cities there were 169, an increase of 94 per cent in two years. In the same cities in 1905 there were 73 parks and municipal playgrounds; in 1907 there were 108, an increase of 48 per cent. In 1905 there were 160 playgrounds of all kinds; in 1907 there were 247, an increase of 54 per cent." This shows that the value of playgrounds, municipal and private, is recognized as never before, and surely this also shows that they are worth something in the moral sense.

Supposing now that I had covered the whole ground. What are the effects which we might rightly term "moral?" As morals pertain to duty they pertain or are related to the practice, manners and conduct of men as social beings in their relations to each other as respects right and wrong, we must judge by this rule.

We are told that "play, beyond any other human activity fulfils the function of revelation of character." I am not sure but what I would make a condition to this rule, for I can see where activities of other kinds are equally revelations of character, but to let this stand we find the effect is:

1st.—It brings men together, children together, revealing each to he other in moments of pleasure. This produ es

2d.—Respect for others' rights on common ground, helping each to understand the other in some other field than that of the dull routine of work.

3d.—It produces respect for town or city property.

4th.—It makes for a higher standard of honesty—for nowhere is dishonesty disliked more than in play and pleasure.

5th.—It improves the esthetic taste—parks create a love for the beautiful.

6th.—Playgrounds and parks cause respect for the property rights of individuals.

7th.—Less attention paid to unwholesome pleasure resorts, street walking, rowdyism, to.

8th—Establish at once a sense of freedom and loyalty and gives every man, woman and child a sense of ownership.

This is what I should say was the moral effects of playgrounds and parks.

That such places are needed in our village is evident to all who are interested in the moral welfare and growth of our children and our town. Recognizing the need, we find the opportunity before us and it is wrong for us to hesitate to meet it. How a park or playground can be had; where they, or it can be located, this paper has nothing to do with. I leave that to be solved by others at a later time.

WARREN.

Death of Henry Green.

Henry Green, 81, died at his home on Curtis avenue last week Thursday evening after a long illness from gastric ulcer and exhaustion. Mr. Green was born in Barnard, Vt., September 2, 1828, and was the son of Calvin and Nancy Green. He went to Warren when a young man and for many years followed his trade as a plumber. After selling out he engaged in various occupations and for several years had been janitor of the East-street schoolhouse until failing health prevented him from active work. He was a member of the first Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was also a trustee. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Addie Wells, wife of Edward Wells of Newton. The funeral was held from the house Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and Rev John A Bowser, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. Burial was in the family lot in Pine Grove cemetery.

Miss Dorothy DeLand of Wellesley College is spending three weeks at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. DeLand of Quaboag street.

Miss Mabel Nims has returned to her home in Ashburnham after a six weeks' visit with her brother, Superintendent of Schools W. E. Nims of Nelson street.

The newly formed choral union are making arrangements to give an "Old folks'" concert in the town hall January 11, under the direction of Dana Pratt of Worcester, their instructor. The committee of arrangements is William Hallons, Frank W. Bliss, Alexander A Gendron, Miss Susie Dexter, and Miss Sarah Cavanaugh.

Division 21 of Hibernians has elected the following officers: President, Alexander A. Cannivan; vice president, Daniel Haley; recording secretary, Henry J. Byron; financial secretary, William F Duncan; treasurer, James McKelliget; master-at-arms, John Sweeney; sentinel, George Ranchor. The officers will be installed at the first meeting in January.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Household Hints.

APPLE SALAD.

Select slightly acid and mellow apples for a salad; pare and slice in thin shavings. The celery to be used with the apple should be scrubbed and left to stand an hour in cold water that has been acidulated with a little lemon juice; it will then be white and crisp. Pull off the stalks and cut into thin slices which will resemble little crescent moons; it is better way than to try to cut in into dice. Allow equal parts of apple and celery or one-third apple to two-thirds of celery, as preferred, but the celery makes a more distinctively apple salad. The dressing may be mayonnaise or a French dressing, but to most tastes a mayonnaise is preferred. Mix the apple and celery, moisten well with the dressing, and serve in the inner cup-shaped leaves of lettuce or in cups made from the apples. To form these cups, first cut a generous slice from the top and remove the core by pressing the corer not quite through the apple; remove the core in thin shavings by turning the end of the corer. Fill the apple cups with the apple and celery, garnish with celery tips and English walnut meats.

For a mayonnaise dressing mix one level teaspoonful each of mustard, powdered sugar and salt and a very little cayenne pepper, add two raw egg yolks and a few drops of vinegar. When this is smooth begin to add the dressing drop by drop, and beat; when the dressing becomes too thick, thin it with a few drops of vinegar and lemon juice, using the latter alternately until five tablespoons of each have been used and a pint of salad oil, which does not measure quite that amount.

Weak Throat—Weak Lungs

Cold after cold; cough after cough! Troubled with this taking-cold habit? Better break it up. We have great confidence in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this work. No medicine like it for weak throats and weak lungs. Ask your doctor for his opinion. He knows all about it. His approval is valuable. Follow his advice at all times. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Always keep a good laxative in the house. Take a dose when your cold first comes on. What is the best laxative for this? Ayer's Pills. Ask your doctor his opinion. Let him decide.

Smokeless

Until science discovered a way to construct the Automatic Smokeless Device, and make it completely dependable, all oil heaters had one common great fault—smoke.

With the advent of the Automatic Smokeless Device, and its practical application to the

PERFECTION Oil Heater

(Equipped with Smokeless Device)

the smoke problem was successfully solved.

The Perfection Oil Heater is the only heater equipped with this

which insures a steady, full-glowing heat, with the wick turned up as high as it will go, without a shred of smoke. Reverse the motion, turn the wick down—there's no odor.

The smokeless device automatically locks and prevents the upward movement of the wick beyond the proper exposure. That is the secret. This splendid result gives leadership to the Perfection.

You may now have all the heat you want—when you want it—and where you want it—without the annoyance of smoke or odor.

Brass font holds 4 quarts of oil, which permits a glowing heat for 9 hours. Brass wick tube—damper top—cool handle. Cleaned in a minute.

The Perfection is beautifully finished in Nickel or Japan.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Leon J. Stevens to Charles F. Walton, dated November 21, 1906, and recorded in Hampden County Registry of Deeds, Book 722, Page 120, and for breach of the conditions thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises first hereinafter described in Palmer, in said Hampden County, on Wednesday, the twelfth day of January, A. D. 1910, at one o'clock in the afternoon all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and described therein as follows:—

The following described real estate, land and buildings situated in Palmer in said Hampden County, bounded and described as follows:—

Beginning at the northeast corner of land conveyed at land of B & A. R. R. Co.; thence southerly on land of Central Massachusetts Electric Company crossing the State highway to land of the Springfield & Eastern Street R. R. Co.; thence westerly on land of the Springfield & Eastern Street Railway Company about three hundred sixteen (316) feet to land of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company; thence northerly on land of said Electric Company and on land formerly of William B. Bennitt to the State highway; thence northerly on said highway to land of the B. & A. R. R. Company; thence easterly on said last named land to the place of beginning. Reserving from the same the highway leading from Palmer to Brimfield through same. FIRST SNOW A DEEP ONE.

Miniature Blizzard Starts on Christmas Day.

TEMPERATURE DROPS MONDAY NIGHT

Snow Badly Drifted and Roads Blocked. Railroad Trains Late in Consequence.

Winter began in earnest on Christmas Day with a snow storm which proved the worst in several years, blocking highways, tieing up electric roads and delaying steam roads to the extent of making trains several hours late. The storm was widespread, all New England and New York being snowed under. A high wind accompanied the snow, and there was much damage along the coast from high water, as well as to shipping.

The snow commenced to fall locally about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It did not gather rapidly at first, bnt in the evening and through the night it accumulated faster and by morning there was a fall of about eight inches. It kept coming through Sunday until about 2 in the afternoon, by which time there was about 12 inches of light snow. The wind drove the flakes in every direction, and in many places there were sizable drifts.

Superintendent Hunnewell of the street railway had his snow plows out early in the night, pushing back from the tracks the first of the snow, and kept them running at intervals until Sunday afternoon. As a consequence he had his line in working operation all day Sunday, losing few trips and keeping on time as well as the Springfield connections would let him. In Springfield the conditions were bad; all cars had to run slow, and the express cars from Palmer would be held up in making the run through lower State and Main streets and looping Court Square, leaving there late and being late at this end in consequence. In the afternoon there was a lack of power for about an hour, but, otherwise the several lines made pretty good time all day, considering the conditions. None of the usual half-hour cars were run, only the regnlar trips being made.

The storm played havoc with the steam roads. On the Boston and Albany the first train Snnday morning was due at 10 50 from Boston; it reached Palmer at 2 05, three hours and 15 minntes late. The delay was due to difficulty in getting out of the terminal at Boston, the snow blocking the switches and making all sorts of trouble. Trains from the West were late in about the same proportion as those from the east. Freights were discontinued and all attention given to getting the passenger trains through.

The storm caused the first "snow expense" the town of Palmer has had for two years. The high wind accompanying the snow took it from the hilltops, leaving them bare, and carried it into the low places. Particularly was there tronble where there was a "cut" in the road. Huge drifts were formed in these and in wholly nnexpected places, and Highway Superintendent Brainerd was kept busy for a time Monday "breaking roads." Baptist Hill proved the worst problem, the drifts there being nausually deep. He was also forced to employ teams to remove some of the surplus snow from Main street, where it had been thrown from the sidewalks. The street railway company also leveled the snow thrown back from its tracks, and removed some of the huge piles made in keeping the tracks clear.

The telephone service locally was not interfered with by the storm, and rural snbscribers who were snowed in Monday were able to keep in touch with the ontside world by this means.

With the snow came a drop in temperature Monday night, the mercury registering 5 below zero Tuesday morning, the first real cold snap of the winter. Wednesday morning it was the same, but yesterday had dropped to 10 below. Wednesday evening there was a sharp wind from the northwest which nipped sharply the ears of pedestrians and drove the cold into any small crevices which it had previously overlooked. This morning the mercury was at zero again. Although the average yesterday morning was only 10 below, 20 below has been reported in a number of localities. The cold wave has extended all over the South and West, and all through trains are running late in consequence.

An Attractive Magazine.

Suburban Life begins the new year and its tenth volume with a magazine which is filled with beautiful pictnres, entertaining reading matter and practical suggestions for every one who owns a home or a bit of land. Among the leading articles are "A Land-Lover and His Land," by Martha McCulloch-Williams; "Two Miennderstood Dogs," by Frank Carlton; "Good Plants for the Dining Table," by H. H. Henry; "Recreation with Tools," by Arthnr S. Griffith; "Two Bungalows for Cold Climates," by Arthur L. Blessing; "The Most Popular Breeds of Poultry," by Thomas F. McGrew; "Snow-shoeing as a Suburban Pastime," by Roscoe Brumbaugh, and "The Rocking-Chair Club." Two particularly entertaining articles in this nnmber are "The Man of the House," by John Kendrick Bangs, which is full of choice humor, and "A Comrade of the Wilds," by George Wharton James, in which the anthor makes many etatements which will aronse much comment. "Shenandoah, the Best Type of Iowa's Small Town," is the first of a series of articles in regard to small communities in varions parts of the conntry. The illustrations incinde two pages of photographs, showing attractive rooms, and a wealth of nseful information helps to round out a very complete attractive number.

LARCENY CHARGED.

Ware and Palmer Men Accused of Appropriating Telephone Material.

Harvey W. Mace, district lineman, and Marvin K. Schenck of Ware were arrested Wednesday afternoon for larceny, following confession on their part of selling material belonging to the New Engiaud telephone and telegraph to Lonis Feinberg, a junk dealer living on Aspen street in Ware. The complaints were signed by Nathan J. Gntman of Boston, who is connected with the legal department of the company. He was accompanied by Augustus McAuley of Springfield, district plant chief. The material missed was located in great part b Chief of Police B. W. Buckley of Ware and credit of discovering how the wire cables and other stuff were disposed of belongs entirely to him. Mace lives in Springfield, but works in Palmer, while Schenck lives in Ware Each has been in the employ of the telephone company about a year. The complaints allege that the larceny was committed on the 3d and 22d days of this month. Both Mace and Schenck pleaded guilty in the district court in Ware yesterday to the charge of larceny. The value of the wire, cable and other material taken was alleged to be $40, and not quite $20 was received by the men for the stuff from the peddlers to whom it was sold. A fine of $25 was imposed in the case of Mace, who acted as a boss of Schenck, and the fine was paid. Schenck was placed on probation for six months.

"Springtime" Next Week at Court Square.

Miss Mabel Taliaferro, supported by her original New York company in the Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson's delightful comedy-romance, "Springtime," will be the attraction at the Court Square Theater, Springfield, next Tuesday and Wednesday, with matinee Wednesday. "Springtime" is very simple—jnst a plain, humble, little love story. It turns the mind aronnd to simple things, makes a loathing rise in the throat for intricate love problems, turns yon to simple food and makes you wish you might once again, before yon die, go to bed at 8 o'clock and get up when the red sun first lifts his burning head over the purple line of the world. And then, too, it wakes a thrilling minnte of the simple grand ecstasy of patriotism—for there's a fife and drumi And your heart will break loose in your breast if that shrill music tickles yon ever so little, and feel like a pebble in a slingshot, whirling round and round for a flight out of your body. Howard Pyle, the master of quaint, old-time dress, manners and honses designed the things they wear, backwoodsmen, the butterfly the purple-decked villian, the lover, the priest and all the simple folk that move through "Springtime," and through it all there is a delightful mnsic accompaniment composed and arranged by Harry Rowe Shelly.

BUMPED BY LOCOMOTIVE.

Palmer Center Man Knocked 30 Feet and Lives.

IN FACT, IS NOT SERIOUSLY HURT.

Standing at Switch at Night in Railroad Yard, Came To at Home in Morning.

Anthony Fountain sat up in bed at his home in Palmer Center Tuesday morning and wondered why, how, when and what had happened. The last he knew previously he had been at his work in the Boston and Albany railroad freight yard the night before, and was about to throw a switch for an approaching locomotive. Investigating the cause of a pain in his head he found four stitches holding together the edges of a bad cut. An aching back caused him some annoyance, but he was relieved to find no bones were broken. Taken all in all, he was doing finely considering the chances he had run of being more seriously damaged.

Although he could tell little of what had happened, it appears that he was in the act of throwing a switch for one of the locomotives switching in the yard about midnight Monday, and probably stood too close to the track; at any rate he was struck by the engine and thrown about 30 feet. He was found unconscious and taken to his home, where he did not recover until the next morniug. Almost miraculously his hurts are limited to those enmmerated above, and he will be at work again in a day or two.

Boston Letter.

BOSTON, Dec 29, 1909.

Boston's reading matter this morning has been largely about the city election. Fitzgerald has been served up in a Storrow cartoon. Storrow has been served up in the speeches of Fitzgerald and of the supporters of Mayor Hibbard, and there is a ferocity and personality in the attacks which make them racy reading. What adds to the interests is that each speaks the truth, even if in a distorted proportion. That is, Storrow's advertisements are statements of facts, and Fitzgerald's charges against Storrow of being a rich man and spending lots of money are also true. From this time on, the hitting promises to be hard as the momentum and push of money and personalities can make it. Each side is pursuing the policy most likely to make votes from the constituency to which the appeals are addressed. There is no doubt, as a city politician says, that Storrow will get the vote of the taxpayers. But they are not nearly as numerous as those who pay only poll taxes, and therefore all arguments based upon the financial straits of the city due to Fitzgerald fail to count for much with the Fitzgerald following. On the other hand, Fitzgerald is appealing to just the motive which counts for much with those whose votes must elect him. He asks if the mayorality shall be put up for sale to the candidate who has money and it is easy to draw a very lurid picture of the danger to the liberties of the people in allowing such a pernicious element to get control of the city government. Last evening, at Tremont Temple, at the Fitzgerald rally, numerous sentences and phrases were thrown upon a screen to hit Storrow, and they caught the fancy of the crowd amazingly and made votes, according to the accounts of the reception of the slides. The danger from the rich has been such a powerful argument ever since President Roosevelt made his drive against the great corporations that it is a very plausible device for getting votes. Popular sentiment is solid except in the wealthy circles, against the money power and it is only necessary to appeal to the current prejudice to arouse strong feeling. Hence Fitzgerald is playing his game in the shrewdest way. He does not give much time to replying to Storrow's attacks, but dashes at him furiously, charging that he is rich and is using his riches to pervert honest government in Boston, that if it were not for his wealth he would not stand any chance of election, and that it is for the people, as they vaine honest and efficient government, with their liberties preserved, to stand like a rock against the corruption fostered hy money. That takes with the crowd and it strengthens Fitzgerald with the large mass of voters behind him.

Hibbard is to stay in the game to the end. Last night came his expected deciaration, in substance, that he is rnnning his campaign as a Republican, in spite of the fact that no party designations are permitted on the ballot and that Plan No. 2, which the voters favored, attempts to eliminate party politics altogether. Bnt he is likely to slip up in his calculations npon Repnblican strength. The statements by Senator Lodge and Representative Weeks that they advised him to withdraw, followed by the statement by Gov. Draper that it is nntrne that he fears the candidacy of Storrow as Democratic candidate for governor, if he is mayor of Boston, spiked the mayor's guns as a Republican to be voted for on that ground that makes the question turn upon o her issues than Republican partisanship. Last night the Hibbard speakers did not attack Fitzgerald at all, bnt gave their time to roasting Storrow. This makes all the more plausible the feeling that Hibbard is on good terms with Fitzgerald and will tend to alienate from him the Republican vote he seeks. The fact that all of the chairmen of Republican ward committees, except two or three, are for Storrow, in spite of the fact that he is a Democrat, also takes away from Hibbard any real force for his appeal for votes as a Republican. Unless Hibbard is elected, and it is impossible to see how he can be, he will be in a lamentable position after his term expires, for he is focusing tremendons personal feeling against him because he is believed to stand for the success of an administration proved to be against the public welfare. There will be much bitterness against him, if Fitzgerald is elected, as he probably would be if the election were held to-day.

Among business men there is said to be a belief that Storrow can win, for there has been a growing confidence for a few days and more people than ever say that he can beat Fitzgerald. He has been seeming to gain. His advertising makes strong points and he has all the money he wants for campaign workers. Yet even his friends do not claim over 2000 or 3000 plurality for him, and that shows that the resnlt is really less favorable in prospect than they wish it to be. Fitzgerald's friends have not ceased at all times to predict that he would win, and they regard Hibbard's candidacy as a distinct help for them, as doubtless it is really. There is an interesting inside story to the effect that the politicians thought that Plan No 1, with caucuses and delegate conventions, would win. The Democrats are said to have groomed Nathaniel Taylor carefnlly, and it was settled, if Plan No 1 had been voted in that Taylor would have been the regnlar Democratic nominee. He is now regarded as a poor fourth candidate in the rnnninge, bnt Boston is Democratic by a natnral, legitimate margin, and he might have easily have polled the party vote and gone in to the vindication of the partisan, convention system.

Boston is overflowing this week with scientists of all sorts. Programs of their daily sessions are so hurdened that there is no space in the newspapers to print what is coming other than to say at such an hour and snch a place snch a section or branch will meet. All sorts of subjects, sociological, mathematical, historical, and what not, are on the list and one is a rare bird who cannot find something which appeals to him. These gatherings are largely or slimly attended according to the fancy of the visitors, rather than the genuine worth of the papers, and mankind gets a great deal of help from the meeting, if it only takes note of what is said in its enpposed presence.

Then there will come to-morrow the first of the series of public meetings in connection with the second annual convention of the American Home Economics Association. The head of this organization is Miss Sarah Louise Arnold, the dean of Simmons College, and there will be broad studies at the various meetings of the different diets, the ways of preparing them, and their value as food after they have been prepared. Various receptions will be held, including one by Mrs. Henry M. Whitney and another by Mrs. Mary H. Abel, editor of the Journal of Home Economics, and there will be abundant con-

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 31, 1909.

THE Hampshire Gazette of Northampton is out fairly and squarely for a bill before the next Legislature repealing all protection for deer. It wants them exterminated, and that as soon as possible—but not before next fall, when the flesh will be good to eat. A cost of $8000 a year and the spoiling of fox and rabbit hunting with dogs because of the proneness of the animals to follow a deer's track, are among the reasons given The Gazette admits that Massachusetts is too thickly settled to make the promiscuous use of high-power rifles and shot guns safe, but suggests a retreat to cellars or the central streets of large communities for a couple of months until the "varmints" are exterminated.

ACCORDING to investigations made recently by the Springfield Republican an establishment for the convenience of those who wished to bet on the races has been maintained in that city for about two years. Its reporters visited the place and what they saw and heard was printed in full. The police claimed never to have heard of the place. The grand jury found no bill against the proprietor. This week a man on trial for having burglar's tools in his possession swore on the stand that he came to Springfield for the express purpose of betting on the races in the place alluded to. Query—Who told the truth?

SHIRTWAISTS for summer wear are likely to deplete the feminine pocketbook to an unusual extent next season unless the strike of the girl shirtwaist makers in New York is settled soon, and at present there seems no likelihood of it. They have been on a strike several weeks, and their showing of the conditions under which they labor and the wages paid them have brought to their standard several college graduates and social leaders of their own sex. The employers offered a compromise last week, but the girls are firm in their refusal to take anything less than the full of their demands.

THE Boston Herald, so well and long known to New Englanders, is to make another change to-morrow, when it will appear as a one-cent paper. Not long ago it dropped all but its morning edition in order to devote all energies toward making that as good as the best. The Herald has always been worth two cents, but perhaps it feels the competition of the lower priced sheets; and perhaps it is making so much money that it can afford the reduction in price.

AMONG the improvements rumored in railroad service in and about Boston is the equipping of the north and south terminals with apparatus necessary for the use of electricity as a motive power, and a tunnel between the two, with electric service on suburban lines. Meanwhile work is progressing on the new station at Worcester, one of the most needed improvements along the line of the Boston and Albany.

IT will strike the average reader as just a little peculiar that, after so many years of traveling around the cold regions of the north, Comdr. Peary should be strauded in snowdrifts in Maryland, but that is what happened to him Weduesday night. But in this instance he was without his sledge and dogs, and was using an automobile, which balked at the unusual depth of snow in that section.

BY the way, what about a man named Cook? His name appears to have been dropped from the columns of the daily press as quickly as the proverbial hot potato.

THE Journal wishes each and every reader a happy and prosperous new year.

THIS is the last day of the old year. Going to turn over a new leaf?

Found in Rural Delivery Mail Boxes in The Course of the Year.

A penny is possessed of rather small purchasing power in most ways, but it will go farther when applied to the purchase of a postage stamp and the latter affixed to a letter than in any other form. It is a small matter to pick a penny up, but the picking of one up 300,000,000 times, or the picking up of that number in the course of a year would prove a task most monotonous. And yet that is the number which it is estimated the carriers on the rural mail delivery routes of the United States pick out of the delivery boxes along their routes in the course of a year. This because many people who live along the routes neglect to supply themselves with postage stamps and deposit the unstamped letter, along with the necessary sum for postage—usually two cents—in their box, trusting to the carrier to take out the money and letter, supply the stamp and the necessary "lick" for it, see that the stamp is properly put on the letter and the letter started on its way properly equipped. A count in the state of New York proved that the average collection of coins in this way was 115 a week. The post office department desires to suggest to patrons of rural mail routes that the practice of depositing coins in the mail boxes at this time of the year is an especial hardship on the carrier, for it not only causes unnecessary suffering and loss of time, but may mean a pecuniary loss to the carrier; for if he drops any of the coins in the snow he is obliged to make good the loss from his own pocket. The carriers are supplied with stamps of various denomination, and patrons of rural mail routes are requested to obtain a stock and use them on letters instead of dropping coins in the boxes.

POST OFFICE RECORD.

Christmas Receipts Larger Than Last Year. Unusually Large Mails

The Christmas business at the Palmer post office this year exceeded that of last year by $60 for the four days ending with Christmas day. In addition to the increase in receipts there was a large increase in the amount of mail matter handled, both outgoing and incoming. The latter was so great that a special team was secured and the substitute carrier worked with it for 30 hours delivering the Christmas packages. The rush did not cease with Christmas Day but kept up until Wednesday, the carriers succeeding that night in getting back to their normal work again The incoming mails were so heavy that the first of the week the carriers were obliged to bring a portion of their mail back with them at night. They are not allowed to work more than eight hours in a day, and when they are unable to complete their routes in that time they must return to the office the mail they are unable to deliver; this happened several times this week, but the work has dropped back to normal again.

The Congregational Sunday school concert was postponed from last Sunday afternoon to next Sunday. It will be given at 2 o'clock instead of the regular study hour of the school. The regular church service will be held at 3 15 and will be a communion service with a brief sermon by the pastor. The Christian Endeavor Society will hold its usual Sunday night service at 7 o'clock and will be a consecration service.

PALMER NEWS.

Congregational Church Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held Wednesday evening in the vestry of St. Paul's church; D. L Bodfish was moderator. Appropriations aggregating about $2400 were made, and the envelope system of offerings was continued another year. It was voted to remove a portion of the horse sheds which have stood for years in the rear of the church, as some of them are badly out of repair and only a portion of them are now used. The executive committee was authorized to borrow funds for the completion of the new church, about $4000 being required. These officers were elected: Deacon for four years, Charles F. Smith; clerk, Luther H Gager; treasurer, Rufus Flynt; advisory committee, Orrin P Allen, Mrs. C. W. Bennett, Mrs. D L. Bodfish, Mrs. F. S. Brewer, Mrs S. C Hunt; executive committee, Fred C. In the district court Monday morning Louis Kaplan of Ware was fined $25 for peddling without a license.

A holiday dance was held in Memorial hall Tuesday evening, which was well attended by the young people of the town.

The fire losses at Four Corners cemetery have been adjusted by a representative of the New York Central railroad and the cemetery commission.

In the district court Monday Israel I. Michelman of Ware was found not guilty to the charge of peddling without a license, and was discharged.

The marriage of Miss Grace A. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Thompson of Central street, and Henry W. Taylor of Cambridge will take place next Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Thompson's parents.

The Grand Army post, Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans will hold a joint installation of officers in Memorial Hall next Wednesday evening. The exercises will be open to all members of the orders and invited guests.

The young people of St. Paul's church will hold a reception in Memorial hall this evening, Dillon's orchestra furnishing music. The matrons will be Mrs. S. R. Carsley, Mrs. G. F. Kingsley, Mrs. F. L. Gunn and Mrs. E. C. Gould.

The Palmer National Bank is distributing to customers—present and prospective—a strong envelope of a shape and size adapted to the holding of bills or valuable papers. It is made of wear-resisting stock and will be found convenient by business men.

The marriage engagement is announced of Miss Anna Goggin of Gardner and William M. Barrett of Palmer. Miss Goggin is well known in Palmer, formerly training for a nurse at the epileptic hospital. The wedding will take place in Gardner early in January.

On account of the storm J. B. Lewis of Boston, who was to speak on the work of the 20th century pledge-signing crusade in the Baptist church Sunday evening, failed to put in an appearance, and the service was conducted by Rev. Frank S. Brewer of the Congregational church.

Grace O. Parsons, seven, a state child, living in the family of Edward Ogle in Palmer Center, died Sunday evening of diphtheria, and burial was Monday afternoon in the Thorndike street cemetery. There are four other children living in the family, but as yet none of them have contracted the disease.

Hunters who wish to tramp afield after to-day are reminded that hunting licenses expire December 31, and that new ones must be obtained if they wish to escape arrest and prosecution for hunting without a license. The only game which may be killed after to-day is rabbits, and the season on them closes Feb. 28.

The crew of the electric car leaving Palmer for Ware at 8 45 Wednesday evening picked up Thomas McGrath, who was lying on the track in front of the almshouse in Ware, and took him to the end of the line. McGrath was very drunk and was fortunate to escape alive; the car was stopped only six inches from his neck.

On account of the small attendance at the Universalist church Sunday morning owing to the severe storm, the Christmas music will be repeated next Sunday morning. The Sunday school concert planned for the evening was also given up, and was given in connection with the Christmas tree exercises Tuesday evening.

The following pictures will be shown at the Elite to-night and to-morrow afternoon and evening: "The unspoken goodbye," "The siren's necklace," "Ethel's luncheon," "Backward, turn backward," "Sport in Jav ," "Chasing a sea lion in the Arctics," "How to tame a mother-in-law." The songs will be "Back to the old home," by Miss Dwyer and "A sailor of the U. S. A.," by A. Gould.

The Sunday school of St Mary's Episcopal mission had a Christmas tree in Masonic hall last evening. The gifts were presented by W. H. Smith, and refreshments were served. The confirmation services, postponed from last Sunday, will be held next Sunday at 10.30 a. m., Bishop Vinton officiating. There will be no Sunday school. The bishop will preach in Monson at 2.45 in the afternoon.

Happy Family Party.

It is safe to say that there was in this section no merrier Christmas party than that which gathered last week at the home of Mr and Mrs Michael Laffo in the wire mill district. Although not all members of the family could find it convenient to be present, yet children and grandchildren to the number of nearly a score gathered around the table for a feast of good things and joined in the general entertainment which followed, a generous part of which fell to the part of the host, who proved that in spite of his age he had not forgotten the rollicking songs of his youth, and the younger members were hard put to keep the pace. Mr. Laffo is just recoverlng from a successful operation for a cataract on his eye, and finds that he can see nicely again The couple are well along in years, having celebrated their golden wedding in January, 1902. By an unfortunate accident in a saw-mill in New York state 36 years ago Mr. Laffo lost his right arm at the shoulder and his left hand, but has managed even in that condition to do more work than many an able-bodied man. He has lived in Palmer nearly 20 years, and has always been a hard worker. The above picture, taken several years ago, shows Mr. Laffo at work digging potatoes.

Mrs. M. S. Langewald leaves next Monday for an extended trip in New Jersey and other points South. Mrs. Langewald's millinery establishment will be in charge of Mrs. Rock during her absence.

Fox hunters are complaining to the fish and game commissioners that poisoned meat is being put out to kill foxes, and that there is much danger of valuable dogs being killed by it, as well as other animals for which it is not intended. Deputy Lyman has found some of this meat in the northeast portion of the town, and arrests are likely to be made unless the practice is stopped.

The members of the Boys' Club listened to an interesting address Monday evening by Representative Ernest E Hobson, who spoke on "State government," describing the executive, legislative and judiciary branches of our state government and how the laws are made. The meeting of the club will be omitted next Monday evening, on account of the annual meeting of St. Paul's parish, which will be held in the rooms used by the club.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. R. C. Snow.

Mrs. Maria Binford, 58, wife of Rensselaer Snow, died suddenly last night in the new hospital, to which she had been removed in the afternoon. Mrs. Snow was taken ill about two weeks ago, previous to which time she had been about as usual, and the news of her death is a great shock to everyone. The operation last night was performed by Dr. J. H. Carmichael of Springfield, assisted by Dr. G. F. A. Spencer, and death was due in part to heart failure. Mrs. Snow was born in Portland, Me., and married Mr. Snow in Worcester, June 28, 1871. She had lived in Ware ever since and for 26 years in the present home of the family at 30 Pleasant street. Mrs. Snow was the last of her own family. Besides her husband, the well-known grain and ice dealer, she leaves five children, three sons, Lucius and Ralph of Ware and Lester of Flint, Mich , and two daughters, Mrs. Clarence W. Booth of Ware and Mrs. C. Frederick Townsend of New Haven, Ct.

Parenteau-Chalifoux.

Miss Florina Parenteau, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Napoleon Parentean, of North street, and Alfred Chalifoux of Meriden, Ct., were married Monday morning in Mt. Carmel church, Rev. W. J. Lucey officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Parentean, and the groom by his brother Albert, also of Meriden. A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Chalifonx will make their home in Meriden after a wedding trip. The bride has been a member of the choir in Mount Carmel church for several years and possesses a fine soprano voice. The groom is a traveling agent for the American tobacco company and has often visited Ware in connection with his business.

Death of Mrs. James Rice.

Mrs. James Rice, 74, died at her home on Pine street Wednesday morning at 4 She had been ill with pulmonary trouble since Sunday, but sustained a broken hip from a fall several months ago. Her maiden name was Mary Thornton and she was born in Ireland. She had lived in Ware over 50 years, but had been a widow for some time. She leaves a son, William, of Ware and another son, Thomas, who was in California a year ago, when his whereabouts were last known. She also leaves four daughters, Mrs. Charles Wilcox, Misses Emma and Jennie Rice, all of Ware, and a married daughter in Springfield. The funeral was held at All Saints' church this morning at 9.

Ware Teacher To Go To Cambridge.

James Dugan, principal of the grammar school in the new South street building for the past seven years, was elected Tuesday night principal of the Thorndike school in Cambridge to succeed Ruel H. Fletcher, who retires as a master emeritus after a service of 50 years. Mr. Dugan is a Ware man who graduated from the high school and after four years at Amherst College was appointed as an assistant teacher in the high school. After a few months he was given his present position and has held it for just seven years. He will begin his new duties right away.

Take a hint, do your own mixing. Rough on Rats, being all poison, one 15c box will spread or make 50 up to 100 little cakes that will kill 500 or more rats and mice. It's the unbeatable exterminator. Don't die in the house. Beware of imitations, substitutes and catch-penny, ready-for-use devices.

Death of Mrs. Elizabeth Tarbox.

Mrs Elizabeth Tarbox, 97, died Sunday at the home of Mrs. Jane Walsh, where she had lived for the past two or three years. Mrs. Tarbox was twice married, her second husband dying some 20 years ago. She had lived for a long time in town and with her last husband occupied a farm near Gibb's Crossing for a long time. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Edwin L. Slocomb of Hyde Park.

Napoleon Fountain and Mrs. Amanda B. Tetrault were married Saturday by Rev. J. T. Sheehan at the parsonage.

The engagement is announced of Miss Eliza M., daughter of Henry L. Lovett of Pleasant street, and Charles Kotha of Springfield.

The funeral of Mrs Hattie Forget, 40, who died Saturday, was held Monday morning in Mt. Carmel church, Rev. J T. Sheehan officiating. She is survived by two small children.

BOSTON LETTER.

tribution to the science of dietition and good health. Horace Fletcher made quite an impression upon some people when he was here, and perhaps the public will watch to see if the specialists here this week take any attitude for or against this reformer. There are those who hold that he is far wide of the truth in his theories of light eating and long chewing, and that there must after all, be fuel if there is to be sufficient fire to run the engine of the human body.

Invitations are out for the Governor's inauguration. They are handsomely but plainly engraved and printed on a large sheet under the blue coat of arms of the Commonwealth and read as follows: "The Governor requests your presence at the Inaugnration ceremonies on Thursday January the sixth, 1910, at twelve o'clock, State House, Boston." Gov. Draper has cut down the number who can be invited, for the simple reason that there is not sufficient room for the 1000 to 1200 who used to be invited under the old order of things. He now sends out more than enough for persons to fill all the possible space, but requests to be informed by those who find they cannot attend. It is singular what a crowd, year after year, turns out at the inaugural, when it is so uninteresting an occasion by itself. Hundreds of times during the session occur incidents which would be far more interesting to the public. But this brings out a lot of fine clothes, gold braid and epaulets, high dignitaries and pompous folks the public like to stare and tell other spectators who they are, and amongst it all, they contrive to perpetuate the inauguration as the great state house show of the year. Considering that the Legislature does not follow the governor's recommendations unless it has a mind to, the significance of the display is still further minimized. Yet the crowd keeps right on coming.

On the same day as the inauguration, as usual will come the reorganization of the Republican state committee for 1910. Col. George H. Doty will cease to be chairman and will take Sub-Treasurer Curtis's place while the latter will move up and be collector of the port in place of George H. Lyman, retired. Charles E. Hatfield just elected mayor of Newton without opposition, will be chairman and there will be important changes further down the line. All signs point to a very brisk political year, in view of the heavy vote for last November.

LANDON.

They Tried Another Kind.

It was Sunday evening and there was a lot of company.

David's mother had sent him upstairs to get some plum jam for supper.

It took the lad a long time to get to the third floor, but when he did reach the closet where the jam was kept, it took him even longer to get started back—not that he was afraid, but that he was somewhat interested in the jam.

Finally he returned with his face and hands somewhat the worse for plum jam

His mother took the sticky jar and surveyed him critically.

"Did you eat any jam?" she asked.

"Yes'm," was the lad's reply.

"And what did you do with the stones?" she asked again.

"I put 'em back in the jar," he answered innocently.—Lippincott's.

Former Resident Celebrates Birthday.

Col P B Moore of Springfield, a former resident of Monson, celebrated his 50th birthday in an elaborate manner Wednesday evening, by giving a banquet to about 50 of his friends from Springfield, Palmer and Monson at the Century Hotel. The guests from Springfield traveled in the electric parlor car Rockrimmon, which left the Worthy Hotel in Springfield at 3 o'clock, arriving in Monson at 4 15 The party was then given a sleighride around town, returning to the Century House at 8 o'clock, where a fine dinner was served, Ex-Senator A. D Norcross acting as toastmaster. J. P. Herlihy, in behalf of Col. Moore's Monson's friends, presented him with a handsome necklace of coins, the Colonel responding fittingly. The afterdinner speakers were Col Dexter, D. M. Coach and Charles G Gardner of Springfield and Julius Heimann of New York. Col. Moore then entertained his friends with an account of his life and experiences in the West and concluded by an invitation to all present to attend his next birthday party and dinner with Landlord Kimball in his new hotel in Springfield.

H., and Monson.

Mr. and Mrs E N. Giffin quietly celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary at their home on East Hill Friday evening. Many friends and neighbors were present, and they were presented with a purse of silver in behalf of those present by H. D. Vaile.

Post Office To Move Into New Quarters To-night.

The post office will be moved into its new quarters in the new Norcross block to-night; all of the fixtures, which are furnished by Mr. Norcross, are new, nothing being taken from the old office but the mail and books. The wood work is of quartered-oak, which matches well with the interior of the room. Postmaster Seymour is to have a large private office, which is situated on the left side of the office upon entering. The new office is much larger than the present one, all of the fixtures and apparatus are of the latest and best pattern.

A Peculiar Accident.

Mrs. Minnie Dawson narrowly escaped serious injury in a peculiar accident at the Monson House Saturday evening She started to carry a child up the stairs from the diningroom and was about to open the door when someone opened it from the other side, forcing her backward so that she lost her balance and fell through the large plate glass window on to the piazza. She held the child in her arms but fortunately neither were injured.

Clearance Sale of China.

One of the most important events in Western New England is the annual discount clearance sale at Charles Hall's, Springfield, beginning next Monday. The price reductions affect the entire stock of china, lamps, furniture and art wares, and also odd pieces and dropped patterns from the lines of glass, leather, clocks, silverplated ware and dinner ware. The object of the sale is to clear out broken lots and dropped patterns from their regular lines in order to reduce stock before inventory taking; hence, discounts ranging from 20 per cent to 50 per cent are in force to insure a complete clearance.

The Candle Tree.

One of the wonders of the vegetable kingdom is undoubtedly the candle tree of Panama, known to botanists as Parmentiera cerifera. This tree produces from its stem and older branches a great profusion of yellowish, cylindrical, smooth fruits, twelve to eighteen inches long, which appear exactly like wax candles, as the botanical name implies. So close is this resemblance that travelers, seeing the tree for the first time, are liable to be temporarily puzzled as to whether the candles of shops are made in factories or grown on trees! The candle-like fruits are suspended from the branches and bare stem by short, slender stalks, dangling in the air, and readily give the impression of the chandler's shop. As night falls and the numerous fireflies move among the fruit this impression is intensified. The inexperienced traveler is not infrequently informed that the fireflies perform the duty of lighting up these "candles" at night when light is required by the denizens of the jungle.—London Strand.

A Lich Gate.

A lich gate is a shed, generally of oak, over the entrance of a churchyard, beneath which the bearers paused when bringing a body for interment Here the clergyman met the body and read the introductory part of the burial service as he preceded the funeral train into the church. Examples of old lich gates are still to be seen in many country churchyards. In Wales they are more modern and are usually built of stone. Some of the old lich gates are formed with one wide door turning on a central pivot and self closing by means of a rude pulley wheel in the roof and a stone weight inclosed in an iron frame, a primitive but effective piece of machinery. In Herefordshire they are also called "scallage" or "scallenge" gates. "Lich gate" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lich, a corpse; hence the north country "lyke wake."—London Answers.

Hypnotic Power In Animals.

An interesting instance of the hypnotic power possessed by a good many animals is given by a correspondent of the Glasgow Herald. One morning outside Elgin a blackbird was observed to be standing by the roadside, paying no heed to the footsteps of the passerby. It was gazing fixedly at four young weasels under the hedge which were approaching in a semicircle apparently to surround it. Just then a warning cry was heard from behind, uttered presumably by the parent weasel, and the young ones disappeared in the hedge. The bird still remained powerless and immovable, and only after repeated urging did it fly to a tree near by, when it gave forth a weak, frightened sound, as though still under the influence of the terror which had arrested its faculties.

The ordinary folding fan was invented in the seventh century by a Japanese artist, who derived the idea from watching a bat closing its wings.

A NEW YEAR CONTEST

By ADELAIDE RUTH HILL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"The New Year day" of old New York—and it was then a great function with the Dutch men and Dutch women of that town—was at hand. It was in a transition state. The simple visits of the inhabitants, where they made few calls and spent plenty of time drinking schnapps at each call, were passing out with the growth of the place, and already some of the fashionable young men were beginning to boast of the number of visits they would make.

Miss Katie Van Gaasback was then the belle of the town, and two of the city "bloods," Derrick Schermerhorn and Beekman Van Corlaer, were aspirants for her hand. A few evenings before the 1st of January they happened to meet in Miss Van Gaasback's parlor, each hoping for a favorable answer to his suit.

"I desire," said the lady, "for a husband one who will join with me in a successful society career. You two each take a notebook with you when you call on New Year's day and have every lady you call upon enter her name in it. Begin calling at 10 o'clock in the morning, ending your rounds here at 5 in the evening. He who can show the largest number of signatures shall have preference over the other."

Now, it was not that the lady had no preference. She had a very strong preference for Derrick Schermerhorn. But at times a woman moves like a crab, backward—that is, when she is expected to go forward she proceeds in the opposite direction. This, however, will be recognized at the end of the story. At 10 o'clock on New Year's morning the two suitors, dressed in the height of the then fashion and each with a big bouquet in his buttonhole, started to make the rounds of their lady friends. Derrick, who from the fact that his father was a rich brewer was popular, had been able to make the larger list. Beekman relized this and had great fears that his own list would be exhausted before the limit of time had elapsed. However, he could do only what he could and accept defeat, if it came, like a man.

The first call Derrick made was on Miss Van Horn. After a few remarks he was bowing himself out when the lady reminded him that it was not complimentary that he should hurry and he must have some refreshment. He waited half an hour for the refreshment to be served, then, after partaking of it, got away as soon as possible. At his second call the lady insisted on reading to him from her favorite book, and he found it impossible to leave her under three-quarters of an hour. Even then she reproached him. The third call was made with a similar delay. After this came a number of visits which were completed with dispatch. And so passed the day. About one in three of those he called on delayed him.

Now, it happened that about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the two suitors met at the house of Vanderpole Ten Eyck, a manufacturer of calico, in King street. There were a number of girls in the party, and they had heard that a contest was on between the young men as to who would make the most calls. A bevy surrounded each of the contestants, tesing him to reveal his score. Both refused. Then one of the girls snatched Beekman's notebook from his pocket and ran away with it. Having examined it, she sang out:

"Thirty-two calls!"

This was sad news to Derrick, who knew that he had made only twenty-eight. It was half past 4, and even if Beekman made no more visits Derrick must make five more to beat him. He started to go, but the mischievous girls locked the front door. But a rear door was open, and he plunged through it, followed closely by his opponent. This door led through a passageway uniting the dwelling with the print works. The two men rushed through this passageway and found themselves moving on a raised platform on either side of which, their upper edges rising some twelve inches above it, were dye vats. A brilliant idea occurred to Derrick. Lessening his pace, he permitted Beekman to overtake him and gave him a push. Beekman's heels caught against the projection of a dye vat, and he fell into it, catching with his hands either side of the vat. Then he pulled himself out, dripping with a beautiful yellow dye.

Derrick shot out of a door at the other end of the building at the same time that the pursuing girls entered the dye house. A merry shout of laughter sounded to poor Beekman like a funeral knell. At any rate, he knew he had lost the race and the prize. He stood surveying himself, scraping the thick dyestuff off one hand with the other, and vice versa, till Mrs. Ten Eyck took pity on him and led him away to a place where he could get off his clothes and put on a suit of her son's.

Derrick Schermerhorn got in five more visits and mounted the stoop of the Van Gaasback dwelling as the clock struck 5.

"I've won!" he cried.

"How many?" asked Kate, with quick breath.

"Twenty-nine."

"Do you know how many Mr. Van Corlaer has made?"

"Twenty-eight at half past 4, but he won't make any more."

"Why?"

"I pushed him into a dye vat."

There was a double cause for her laughter. She had pledged all her girl friends to delay Derrick, who, after all, had won the victory she wished him to win.

He Beat the Baker.

His name was Johnny, and he was the idol of his mother's heart in spite of what the neighbors might say to his detriment.

"You'll get my bread today before returning to school, John," remarked his mother to the boy while he indulged in his midday meal.

"Yes, mother," answered he and shortly went forth to carry out his mother's wishes.

"A quartern of bread—yesterday's, please," murmured John sweetly as he tendered fivepence halfpenny in payment of the two loaves forthcoming.

"Bread has gone up, my boy, one halfpenny," remarked Mr. Dough as he held out his hand for the needful balance.

"When?" queried John thoughtfully as the prospect of a distasteful double journey flashed across his mind.

"This morning, my lad, if that is any consolation"

Johnny's face brightened visibly. "Yes, I think it is," he remarked spasmodically, "for it was yesterday's bread I ordered."

The baker concluded he had no claim.—London Telegraph.

A THWARTED PLOT.

By LAURENCE FOSTER CHURCH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Not far from the close of the eighteenth century there lived in a small town in New Jersey it is now a city—Raymond Doane, a man very much respected and of a peaceful disposition. His house stood near the main street or road, considerable grounds behind and on either side of it. On the lot next adjoining lived Samuel Whitford, who was Doane's antipode. If he but once conceived a grudge against any one he would pursue him to the bitter end. He quarreled with nearly every one in the town, and there was none to speak a good word for him but Raymond Doane, who always stood for peace and constantly endeavored to allay the prejudice against his neighbor.

But one day a horse of Doane's got into Whitford's premises and destroyed a lot of vegetables growing in the garden. Though Doane offered to make suitable reparation, Whitford would not be pacified. From that time he made the lives of Mr. Doane and his family miserable and went so far as to injure one of Doane's children he found on his grounds. This was too much even for the quiet Mr. Doane's patience. Meeting Whitford, he protested. Whitford attacked him, but Doane, being the better man, got him down and rubbed his nose in the dirt.

After this the Doanes expected worse treatment than before, but Whitford let them alone and finally surprised them by offering the olive branch. It was accepted, but without confidence.

Mr. Doane had a man doing unimportant jobs about his place named Silas Moore, who had received an injury in childhood which had impaired his intellect. One night Silas was heard screaming "Murder!" in the back of Mr. Doane's place. Doane got up and went out to see what was the matter. He found no one and went back to bed. Silas was not again seen in the town.

Mr. Doane reported what he had heard, and there was much wonderment in the matter. Whitford said nothing for some time, then intimated that he might say a great deal were it not that the people were all against him and would not believe him. This got to the ears of the authorities, and Whitford was called upon to give testimony. With apparent unwillingness he said that on the night in question, hearing the cries, he had got up and gone to the rear of his yard. The cries had then ceased. Whitford was about to return to the house when he saw a figure through the darkness dragging some object. He followed and saw the figure dig a hole, into which he thrust what he had been dragging, filled the hole and spent much time destroying the marks of the ground's disturbance. Whitford followed the figure and saw it go into Doane's back door.

No citizen of the place would have paid any attention to this story, but the police, of course, must visit the spot and examine it. Whitford led them, and after digging in several places they came upon a corpse so disfigured that they could tell nothing about it except that it was about Silas' height and the hair was the same color.

The matter now passed into the courts, and Doane was arrested for the murder of his hired man. The clothing on the corpse was examined, and several pieces were found to have belonged to Silas. Though the body was unrecognizable, the clothing proved conclusively that Silas had been murdered. Whitford's evidence was not sufficient to convict Doane, but a stranger appeared at the trial who swore that he had driven into the town late on the night of the murder and had heard angry words in Doane's barn. He had reined in his horse to listen and saw two figures walk to the back of Doane's place. Then he had heard the cries and had gone and seen what Whitford had seen from another point.

Even this would not have convicted Doane before a jury of his fellow townsmen, but the prosecuting attorney, realizing this, took a change of venue and tried him elsewhere. The result was that the peace loving Mr. Doane was convicted of the murder of his half witted servant. In this, as in every mysterious murder case, there were those who believed in the guilt of the one being tried for it and those who did not so believe.

A hanging in those days was open to the view of every one. From daylight till noon on the day the culprit was to be swung off all sorts of vehicles were driven into town loaded with people. The condemned man was brought forth and given an opportunity to speak, which he declined. The noose was being adjusted when some one in the crowd cried:

"Hold on!"

Every eye was turned to the speaker, who was pointing in a certain direction. There, gaping with the rest of the crowd, stood the man who had been murdered—the fool Silas Moore.

That ended the hanging, or, rather, it never took place, and the supposed murderer was carried home on the shoulders of his friends.

Silas Moore when questioned told how Whitford had persuaded him to enact the murder scene at night and then had hurried him away where he supposed he would be safe. The stranger witness had been paid for his testimony. It also came out that Whitford had procured a corpse, made its face unrecognizable, put Silas' clothes on it and buried it.

Whitford made good his escape and was never heard of again in America.

Self Restraint.

Ellen stopped scrubbing the veranda steps long enough to cast an admiring eye on her employer's garden. "Sure they are fine posies ye have, doctor," she said. "I've a neat little house I bought with the money I'd put by, and an elegant garden it had last year, too, but now there's neither stick nor stalk in it."

"What was it, hens or dogs?" asked the doctor, sympathetically mentioning his own aversions.

"Sure, me neighbor—bad luck to her—had a ditch dug in her land, and the water ran down into me garden and washed all me seeds away."

"And what did you do about it?"

"What could a poor lone body like me do?"

"Well, didn't you at least say something to the woman, complain or tell her that you wouldn't stand it?"

"Now, doctor, dear, hard words just leads to bad feelings among neighbors, and that ye know as well as I do, and it's not me that would be using them. So I only said to her, 'I hope I'll live to see the floods dowing over your grave as your ditch waters have dowed over me garden,' and I let it go at that."—Youth's Companion.

Couldn't Stand Satire.

A burglar while attempting to rob a bloated bondholder of Maryville by mistake got into the humble residence of an editor next door. After unsuccessfully fumbling about for suitable assets for some time he was disgusted to observe the tenant of the house sitting up in bed and laughing at him.

"Ain't you old Skindersen, the capitalist?" inquired the housebreaker.

"Nary thing," chuckled the Journalist. "I'm the editor of the Screaming Eagle."

"Jerusalem!" said the burglar, looking at his steinwinder. "And here I've been wasting four precious hours on this branch almshouse. I say, old quill driver, you never poke fun at your subscribers, do you?"

"Not the cash ones."

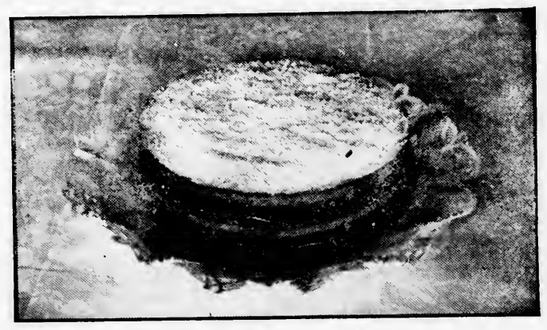
"Exactly," said the burglar, taking out his wallet. "Here's six months' subscription to call this thing square. If there's one thing on earth I can't stand, it's satire."—London Tit-Bits.

Free Postage.

When the postoffice was first opened at Kai Feng, China, the clerks had a fight with some men who bought stamps and refused to go away until the stamps were licked and stuck on their envelopes for them. The foreign postoffices in Palestine are usually convulsed by a spirit of keen competition. If a parcel exceeding the regulation weight or size is taken to an office and refused the traveler in the majority of cases has only to threaten to take it to a rival office, and it is straightway received without a murmur. So keen is the rivalry between some of these offices that residents in Palestine possess a free post within certain districts. Between Jaffa and the surrounding colonies and also within Jerusalem the German and Austrian offices make no charge for the delivery of local letters.—Chicago News.

An Obedient Dog.

Schnapps is a dachshund, and the people who know all about the breed call the queer looking animal handsome. In the house in New York where he is the pet he is credited with more than ordinary dog sense and with understanding every word said to him in English or German. In order to demonstrate his sagacity his master said to him a few evenings ago: "Schnapps, the young people have been here long enough. Go down and tell the boys to go home." Downstairs he waddled and, standing before the visiting youths, barked and howled, then ran to the front door and back again and kept up the performance until, as his proud master explained, "the young men heard and saw the point. Pretty smart for a dachs, eh?"—Exchange.



Origin of White Race.

The discussion of the precise locality where the primitive man developed into the white race is by no means settled as yet. The old theory that the Aryan or white race begun in Asia is still held by many high authorities, but other authorities equally high maintain that the original "white man's country" was Europe and that from Europe the race spread to other parts of the world. It is safe to say that the last word upon the subject has not yet been spoken. The debate is still open and will probably remain so for a very long time to come.—New York American.

Household Hints.

ORANGE LAYER CAKE.

Cream one-quarter cup of butter, add three-quarters cup of sugar and the beaten yolks of two eggs. Sift one and one-half level teaspoons of baking powder with one and one-half cups of flour and add alternately with one-half cup of milk to the first mixture; when well mixed fold in the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff and dry, and one-half teaspoon of vanilla flavoring.

Butter three medium sized layer cake tins, dredge with flour and shake out. Push the batter well towards the edges of the pans so that in rising the cakes will be flat on the top. Never leave the cake batter heaped or uneven expecting it to become smooth in baking. The oven may be hotter for layer cakes than for a loaf which would burn on the outside before the inner portion was baked, therefore it is sometimes convenient to make layer cakes when the coal fire is fresh and a little too strong for general cake making.

For an orange filling mix one-half cup of sugar with two level tablespoons of cornstarch, the grated rind of one-half lemon, the juice of one orange and two teaspoons of lemon juice. Beat an egg and add a teaspoon of butter, put all in the top of a double boiler or in a small tin and set over boiling water to cook ten minutes, stirring to keep the mixture smooth. Use when cool.

A POPULAR VERDICT.

Based on Evidence of Palmer People

Grateful thousands tell it—
How weak backs were made strong—
Weak kidneys made well—
Urinary disorders corrected.
Palmer people add their testimony.
They gladly praise Doan's Kidney Pills.
For quick relief and lasting cures.
Palmer evidence is now complete.
Palmer testimony is confirmed;
Reports of early relief substantiated.
Cures donbly proved by test of time.
Let a Palmer citizen speak.

G. H. Morgan, 61 S. Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "It is now ten years since I used Doan's Kidney Pills, but I have not forgotten the great relief I obtained from this remedy. I had a severe case of kidney trouble of several years standing and was unable to find anything that would help me. My back ached constantly and I often felt lame all over. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and attended by a burning sensation when being voided. Upon the advice of a friend, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time they cured me. The cure has proven to be a permanent one and consequently I value Doan's Pills very highly."

Christmas at the Churches.

Christmas was observed in the churches with special services. A Christmas tree well laden was held at the Congregational church Friday evening. The exercises consisted of singing and a cantata, entitled "Kriss Kringle," by the little folks. At St. Mary's church Rev. Fr. Donoghue celebrated three masses, at 7, 8 and 10 o'clock, with large congregations. The church and altars were handsomely decorated with flowers, evergreens, ferns, etc. A little at the right of the Virgin's Altar was the crib representing the birth of Christ at Bethlehem Special music was given by the choir, assisted by Robert Wilder of Palmer, violinist, who has received many flattering compliments for his playing. The solos parts of the mass were well rendered, reflecting much credit upon those who rendered them. The morning service closed with a Te Deum by the choir and congregation. Vesper services followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament were held in the church at 7 30 in the evening.

Serious Fire Averted.

A blaze that might have had serious results was discovered by James Hayden Wednesday afternoon, when he found an oil stove all afire in the store of Walenty Wohocoski in the Exchange Building D. F. Leary, who has a store next to Wohochoski's, was notified and together with Daniel Healy, gained an entrance to the store, which was closed at the, time by breaking the large glass in the door. Once inside Mr. Leary tried to get the oil stove bnt was driven back by the dense fumes which filled the store to almost snffocation. Daniel Haley also made an attempt and was after some time able to locate the oil stove and taking it in his hands handed it to Mr. Leary, who shoved it through the doorway to someone on the outside. The stock was somewhat damaged by smoke. The oil stove had been used to heat the store and had been left burning while the clerk went ont for a while.

A National Pay Day.

New Year is the national pay day in China. All accounts must be squared up at that time, and the man who can't raise enough to pay his debts has to go into bankruptcy. The laws are such that the creditor can enter the debtor's house and take what he pleases if there is no settlement. To prevent such action families club together and make all sorts of compromises to keep up the business reputation of the clan. New Year's is a great day for the pawnbrokers; their shops are crowded with people who want to redeem their best clothes before the new year. There are crowds who want to pawn other things in order to get money to pay their debts. Pawnbrokers receive very high rates of interest, in which they are protected by the government.—Philadelphia Press.

Some Odd Spelling.

Americans, says the London News, employ the word "Britisher," which they invented, in a contemptuous sense. It was a certain Philadelphia wit who is said to have asked his friends what a "Britisher" would mean to convey by the written word "ghoughphtheightteeau." He had to explain to them that, according to the genins of the English language, it meant "potato." Thus: Gh—p, as in "hiccough;" ough—o, as in "dough;" phth—t, as in "phthisis;" eigh—a, as in "neighbor;" tte—t, as in "gazette," and eau—o, as in "beau." This was at least as puzzling as the livery stable keeper's bill which contained the two lines—

Aosafada
Atacinonimomgin.

Nobody who does not "know the answer" has ever yet arrived at the solution, which is, in the vernacular of the creditor himself, "A 'oss 'alf a day" and "A-takin' on 'im 'ome ag'in."

DR. DEANE'S RENUNCIATION.

A Story and a Lesson For the New Year.

It was the evening of Dec. 31, and the year was ending with glorious winter weather. The ground was hard frozen, but not even a holly or an evergreen rustled, and the branches of the bare trees were perfectly still.

Dr. Deane stood in his doorway. Presently there came a sliding sound, a muttered exclamation, a heavy fall. He hurried out, to find horse and rider gone down on the slippery roadway, but without serious injury, for both were already rising.

"Can I do anything for you?" was his natural question under such circumstances.

"Well—yes; I think you can," said the stranger, a man whom the brightening moon revealed as tall, broad shouldered, dark and not of prepossessing appearance. "That is," he added, "if you have a house near at hand," and he felt one foot and leg thoughtfully.

"Within three yards." The doctor pointed toward his garden gate. "I have a spare bedroom; also a vacant stall in the stable. Shall I put you and your horse up for the night?"

"DEANE—JOHN DEANE?" HE REPEATED.

"You are not afraid to entertain a stranger?"

"Not in the least," the other man smiled. "I am not nervously constituted."

"Then I accept, with thanks," was the reply. "Evidently I am not seriously hurt, but I think my foot is sprained," and, trying to walk a step, an exclamation escaped him which meant pain.

"Fortunately I am a doctor. I will see to it. Let me lead your horse, and do you lean on my arm. My man is gone home, but I can stable your steed. I often do so for my own if I come in late. Please walk in and make yourself as comfortable as you can. I will be with you in ten minutes. The door, as you see, stands open. The room on the left hand side has a very good fire."

Until the injured foot had been attended to and bandaged the stranger kept silence, but his piercing eyes were studying the countenance of his host with an expression of astonishment.

"No," he exclaimed at last; "you have no fear of me, though, for all you know, I might be a robber or a murderer. May I learn your name?"

"Certainly. It is John Deane. And yours?"

But apparently the question was not heard, for it was not answered. Indeed, the doctor could plainly see that his guest seemed startled and ill at ease.

"Deane—John Deane?" he repeated. "It must be fate, hard and relentless fate, which brought me to your door tonight, then," said the man at last. "If I had known you were living in this place I should have given you an exceedingly wide berth, Dr. John Deane."

"You are speaking in riddles," said the doctor. "I do not wish for an explanation. I will ring for something in the form of supper and then, with your permission, light you upstairs to the room where I hope you will rest comfortably for such time as it seems best for you to be my guest."

"Well, have it so if you will," murmured the other.

The meal, a very simple one, was eaten in silence. As it concluded Dr. Deane suggested that a good night's rest was next to be thought of, but the guest shook his head.

"As you will," he said, with a slight hesitation. "Only yon will, I am snre, pardon me if I give myself up to thinking instead of talking. Sometimes the dead past seems revivified. It is so with me on each Dec. 31, and I do not resist its power."

The other answered nothing, but leaned back in his chair, gazing thoughtfully into the fire.

The little timepiece struck the hours of 10 and 11, yet still these two men sat on in absolnte silence, each apparently absorbed in his own reflections.

It must have been within a half hour of midnight when the stranger roused himself as if from a dream and, sitting erect, exclaimed:

"Deane—John Deane!"

The doctor started violently; it was so sudden an awakening to the actual present that his professional composure deserted him, and his voice shook as he responded:

"What—what is it?"

"This: I can't sit here by your fireside and keep silence. I wonder now whether I could not manage to ride another five or six miles farther."

The strange guest looked fixedly at the doctor's face.

"So you are changed by the passing years, are you? Think back a bit. Did you never vow that you would be revenged on one who wronged you?"

"Yes—once and only once, if my memory is true. If there could be any excuse it would be that I was a very young man and hasty of temper, as the young often are. That vow of mine has been repented of long since. I would like nothing better than to clasp the hand of him who injured me and tell him I have long since made renunciation of that first purpose."

"You—would—do—that?" The words came slowly, one by one. "Why?"

"Because the past is past, and life is not long enough to be burdened with anger and resentment. Besides"—

But at this point Dr. Deane was interrupted.

"I am Frederick Watson."

A strange silence fell upon these men, and it lasted several minutes, during which the thoughts of both had traveled back many years.

"I came between you and one whom you loved," said the guest then.

The doctor made a sign of assent. No words seemed possible.

"I represented you as guilty of an act of which you were innocent; consequently you were disinherited—and in my favor."

"EXPOSE ME TO THE WORLD."

Again that silent movement of the head.

"Well, you have waited long, but here I am, thrown upon your hands by an accident. Expose me to the world if you will. I deserve it."

But the doctor rose and stood still. The bells were already ringing in the new year, and a smile came upon his lips as he listened and then held out his hand.

"Long ago I made renunciation of that purpose to be revenged," he said, "and i renew it now. Frederick Watson, let us be friends, and do you make the future better than the past."

Some months later it began to be general news that Dr. Deane was a rich man. Property which ought always to have been his had been restored to him, but no one knew the details of the story. They only know that a certain Mr. Watson made frequent and lengthy visits to the cottage, which had so rarely known any presence than that of its owner, and he and Dr. Deane appeared to be close friends—friends of "auld lang syne."

IN THE LAND OF TAILLESS CATS.

In the Isle of Man are many curious beliefs. The last night of the old year was called Quaaitagh, and it was the custom for parties of young men to visit from house to house and sing a song wishing the inmates long life and happiness and plenty of potatoes and herrings, butter and cheese, that they might sleep well during the year and not be disturbed by even "the tooth of a flea." On finishing the song the party was invited into the house, the darkest member being always the first to enter, and they were regaled with good cheer. For a light haired man or any woman or girl to enter a house on New Year's day is dreaded by all. If such a catastrophe takes place, on him or her will be cast the blame for every accident that befalls the home during the year.

Great care is taken to brush the carpet of a room from the door to the hearth and not from the hearth to the door. This makes all the difference between good and bad luck, health and death, to the family during the year. On New Year's eve it was also the custom to rake the ashes of the fire over the kitchen floor. The next morning the ashes were eagerly examined for the trace of a footprint. If one was discovered with the toes pointing to the door it signified that death would certainly carry off one of the household during the year; if the foot, however, pointed from the door to the hearth then an addition would be made to the family before twelve months had gone.—San Francisco Chronicle.

New Year's Bells.

Paulinus, bishop of Nola, introdnced the bell into the Christian worship in the year 400 A. D. The first bells were made in Campania; hence the term campanile, or bell tower. The adoption of the bell into the services of the church soon gave the chimes the comforter's office in the minds of the devont. In their simple faith the worshipers believed that consecrated bells had the power to prevent storms, to drive away evil spirits and to bring repose to the sufferer.

The direct forerunner of the New Year's bell is what was known as the "passing bell." This was rung at the death of a believer. In theory devils troubled the expiring patient. Moreover, they lay in wait to trouble the soul the instant it passed from the body. But the peals of a consecrated bell were believed to possess a potency that the most malignant of devils could not withstand; hence with every death the ringing of the holy bells exorcised the evil spirits and assured the soul a happy passing into a future of untroubled peace.

From this ancient custom developed easily and naturally the habit of ringing out the old year and ringing in the new. The parallel between the death of a human being and the death of the spent old year is clear enough. All that was evil in the old year, all that it had brought of misfortune and worry, was supposed to be resolved into nothing by the music of bells ascending the starlit skies at the mysterious midnight moment of transition.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

REFORM BEGUN AND ENDED.

"NOW Nancy, dear, the comin' year,"
Quoth Jarley to his wife,
"Let's try and see if you an' me
Can't live a peaceful life.
We've jawed an' fit like the old split
Sence last year fust begun.
But my mind's set—next year our lot
Must be a pleasant one."

"NOW, NANCY, DEAR."

"OH, well and good, and so it should,"
His worthy spouse replied.
"I'm sure that peace should never cease
In this house to abide.
'Twixt you and me I can't quite see
Why trouble need creep in,
And for my part I've got the heart
To do the best I kin."

"YES, yes, I know you allus show
A very willin' heart,
An' when there's work you never shirk,
But allus do your part.
But, tell me now, when ther's a row
Who allus does begin?
An' tell me, too—I dar' ye to—
Who allus must gin in?"

"WHO ALLUS DOES BEGIN."

"NOW, Jabez, sho! You'd otter know
That ain't no way to talk.
I never seen a man so mean,
Not by a good, long chalk.
You have your say and have your way,
Let come what will to me,
And when I try to argufy
You never will agree!"

"WELL, well, there now, by gum, I vow
If that don't beat me out!"
And Jarley roared a big cuss word
That put his wife to rout.
But as she fled she turned her head
And hissed most spitefully,
"Jabe Jarley, you your whole life through
A sinful brute will be!"

"A SINFUL BRUTE WILL BE!"

THUS do we see how speedily
Good resolutions fail—
How weak the mind of human kind
When inner foes assail.
On New Year's day—it is our way—
Our failings we arraign,
But ere the year does disappear
We often fail again.

When Pop Swore Off.

When pop swore off last New Year's
My maw was awful glad,
Although she sorter cried a bit,
But that's a way she had.
Pop said that he'd 'a' done it
Jest after Christmas night
Except that he was waitin' fer
New Year's to do it right.

When pop swore off last New Year's
It seemed like he was sore.
He scolded maw an' kicked the cat
Clean through the kitchen door.
An' as fer me, good gracious,
He licked me good enough
Jest 'cause I asked him how it felt
To do without the stuff!

When pop swore off last New Year's
He didn't smile fer days,
But seemed to mope around the house
With jest a stony gaze,
An' there was simply nothin'
That seemed a-pleasin' him.
I never see a man so stern
An' grumpy-like an' grim.

When pop swore off last New Year's
It lasted fer a spell,
But when he started up again
Maw said 'twas jest as well.
I guess she knows her business.
It made pop act so queer
I hope he ain't a-goin' to do
No swearin' off this year!

A SHOCKING NEW YEAR'S DIVORCE.

OLD pipe of mine, we've got to part.
I leave you soon forever.
Though you are twined about my heart,
We'll meet in future—never.
I'll swear you've faithful been and true,
You've put dull care to chase,
But there has come 'twixt you and me
That woman in the case

WE'VE GOT TO PART.

OLD pipe of mine, the day draws near
When from me you must roam.
No longer may I know the cheer
You brought into my home;
No longer when the shadows fall
And night comes on apace
I'll take you up. Oh, cup of gall
That woman in the case!

I LOVED you first, I hear you say,
I pledged my troth to you,
And I have loved you from that day
I promised to be true.
'Tis so, but I was young and green,
A youth with beardless face.
I little thought there'd come between
That woman in the case.

A YOUTH WITH BEARDLESS FACE.

YOU were my love in days of old.
Old pipe, I love you still,
But there's a woman in the fold
That has a stronger will.
Forever from my life you're banned,
Denied your fav'rite place.
Ejected by supreme command,
The woman in the case.

NO longer when my heart grows sad
Will you bring peace to me.
The comforts you and I have had
In future cannot be.
You will not soothe my aching brow,
My drooping spirits brace.
There stand 'twixt us apparte us now
The woman in the case.

ANOTHER RULES MY HEART.

OLD pipe, farewell, a long farewell,
For you and I must part.
With me no longer may you dwell.
Another rules my heart.
You think I'm cowardly to so
Desert you in disgrace,
But then, old pipe, you do not know
The woman in the case.

New Year's Calls.

"Madam," began the red nosed tramp, "this is just a little New Year's call, and"—

"And so is this," interrupted the farmer's wife as she came out into the yard. "Here, Tige! Here, Tige!" she called. "Sick 'em, Tige!"

And the caller and the called disappeared in the distance.

Weak Throat—Weak Lungs

Cold after cold; cough after cough! Troubled with this taking-cold habit? Better break it up. We have great confidence in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this work. No medicine like it for weak throats and weak lungs. Ask your doctor for his opinion. He knows all about it. His approval is valuable. Follow his advice at all times. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Always keep a good laxative in the house. Take a dose when your cold first comes on. What is the best laxative for this? Ayer's Pills. Ask your doctor his opinion. Let him decide.
